KUNTHITTEN, Germany: Nico Rosberg overcame a sorry start in the opening round to beat Lewis Hamilton to win the German Grand Prix on Sunday. Rosberg's victory, his second of the season, came in the final round of the world championship after a troubled series for the Briton. For Rosberg, who was seeking to repeat his 2014 championship success, it was a dream start to the race. For his teammate Hamilton, it was a nightmare. Hamilton was leading when his car spun off the circuit as he tried to make up ground in the German Grand Prix. He had a five second stop and go penalty for crossing the track and hitting the back of Rosberg's car. The result put Hamilton third in the race and title rival Nico Rosberg clear of Hamilton. Hamilton was the first Briton to win the rally, led almost throughout the four-day world championship. The rally began in Hockenheim, Germany on July 31. (AFP)
