Actresses ‘tell all’ as ‘Prada’ turns 10

LOS ANGELES, June 25 (Reuters) - The movie that earned one of its stars a best actress Oscar nomination this year is turning 10.

‘Prada & Me’ marks the beginning of the fashionistas’ decade and a metaphor for women who struggle to maintain their identity when they reach a certain age.

‘Prada’ was the perfect example of a movie that turned 10 years ago and continued to resonate with audiences.

Many of the actresses who starred in the film have since gone on to win Oscars, including Anne Hathaway, who played the role of the first-ever female lead in a ‘Prada’ movie.

Hathaway won an Academy Award for her performance in ‘Prada & Me’ and has since been nominated for several other awards for her work in ‘A Little Help’ and ‘The Devil Wears Prada’.

However, the movie’s success was not without controversy.

In 2006, the film was criticized for its portrayal of race.

Despite this, the movie remains a beloved classic and a reminder of the importance of self-empowerment.

With the 10th anniversary of ‘Prada & Me’, the movie continues to inspire and challenge audiences to think about the pressures they face as they grow older.

The movie’s success also highlights the importance of diversity in Hollywood and the need for more female-led films.

‘Prada & Me’ is a testament to the power of women and the importance of self-empowerment.

As we celebrate the movie’s 10th anniversary, we can only hope that it continues to inspire and challenge audiences for years to come.

Los Angeles Times, Sunday, June 26, 2016