Russia says embassy in Syria hit in mortar attack, no casualties

Russia's Foreign Ministry said three mortar rounds hit the building housing its embassy on Wednesday, causing no damage or injuries.

The ministry's website, citing a statement by spokesman Maria Zakharova, said the attack happened just before noon当地时间.

"It should be noted that the attack was carried out by a group of terrorists from the so-called Islamic State," Zakharova said in the statement.

"The terrorist organizations are using public figures and international organizations to mask their criminal actions," she said.

The statement did not give details on the number of mortars fired or the damage caused.

Russia has a significant military presence in Syria, where it has been supporting President Bashar al-Assad in his war against rebels and Islamic State.

Zakharova did not say whether the attack was immediately reported to Moscow.

The Russian government did not immediately respond to a request for comment.

Syria is currently embroiled in a civil war that has lasted nearly seven years and has cost more than 350,000 lives, according to United Nations estimates.

The conflict has been marked by a series of attacks on diplomatic missions, including one on the Russian embassy in Damascus in 2013 in which a car bomb killed 23 people, including the embassy's military attaché.

The United Nations said in August 2016 that it would not recognize the results of Syria's elections, which were won by Assad in a vote widely seen as fraudulent.

The UN has also condemned the use of chemical weapons in Syria and called for an investigation into reports of Russian military support for Assad.

Despite international condemnation, Russia has continued to support Assad's regime and provided arms and financial aid to the Syrian government.

The attack on the Russian embassy comes amid a diplomatic row between Russia and the United States over Syria.

In July, US President Donald Trump said Russia and Iran were "fooling around" in Syria and pledged to work with Turkey to try to end the war.

In August, Russia's deputy foreign minister said the US was "fooling around" in Syria and called on the US to "stop its provocations and stop pulling the strings of the terrorists."

Washington, Aug. 2: US President Donald Trump has signed legislation imposing new sanctions on Russia. Moscow responded by taking back powers previously granted to the State Department official overseeing Russian affairs. By taking back those powers, Moscow has made it harder for US Secretary of State Rex Tillerson to conduct his review of the State Department's relations with Russia.

The legislation, sponsored by Senator John McCain (R-AZ) and Senator Lindsey Graham (R-SC), is designed to punish Russia for its interference in the 2016 US presidential election and its annexation of Crimea from Ukraine. The legislation also imposes new economic sanctions on Russia, including a ban on the purchase of Russian bonds.

US President Donald Trump has signed the legislation, which imposes new sanctions on Russia, and has said that the sanctions are "the beginning of a very long process." The sanctions include a ban on Russian debt, a ban on Russian arms sales, and new economic sanctions. Russia has been accused of interfering in the 2016 US presidential election and of annexing Crimea from Ukraine.

The new sanctions are a major blow to Russia and are expected to have a significant impact on the country's economy. Russia has already imposed sanctions on the United States, including a ban on US arms sales and a ban on US citizens from entering the country.

The new sanctions are likely to further strain relations between the United States and Russia. However, the sanctions are also expected to be welcomed by many in the United States who are concerned about Russia's interference in the 2016 US presidential election and its annexation of Crimea from Ukraine.

The new sanctions are likely to have a significant impact on the Russian economy, which is already struggling with high levels of debt and inflation. The sanctions are also likely to further isolate Russia from the international community, which is already concerned about the country's interference in the 2016 US presidential election and its annexation of Crimea from Ukraine.
LONDON, Aug. 2, (AP): After a life of public service, the role of the Duke of Edinburgh officially ended Wednesday when the royal family announced he had retired.

The Duke of Edinburgh attended a parade of Royal Marines at Buckingham Palace, the last of 22,219 solo public appearances since he was appointed to the position in 1952 following the marriage of his wife, Queen Elizabeth II.

He has conducted over 11,000 engagements on behalf of the queen. The Duke of Edinburgh has been a member of more than 780 organisations.

The news has been met with普遍赞誉.

The queen, now 91, offered her support to the Duke of Edinburgh, saying, "I wish to thank his Royal Highness for his continued support and understanding over the past 65 years."

Prince Charles, heir apparent and president of more than 780 organisations, said in a statement, "As my father’s eldest son, I have grown up watching him perform his duties with great skill and devotion.

"He is a true gentleman and, through his work, has provided an outstanding example to young people across the world."

Prince Philip, who is the longest-serving consort in British history, has spent most of his life in the public eye. He is known for his charm, wit, and dedication to public service. He has served as the Queen's consort since 1952, the year before her accession to the throne.

The Duke of Edinburgh has been involved in a wide range of activities, including military service, charity work, and environmental causes. He has been a patron of various organisations, including the Royal National Lifeboat Institution and the Royal Marsden Hospital.

Philanthropy and the Duke of Edinburgh have been at the forefront of his retirement announcement.

Britain's Prince Philip has died, Buckingham Palace announced on Friday. He was 99.

The palace said Philip had been in ill health for some time and had been receiving medical care at Windsor Castle, his home near London. He was hospitalized earlier this month with a bladder infection.

The news came as a shock to many, especially given Philip's long and distinguished career in public service. He was a member of the Royal Family for 73 years and had been active in various charitable and community causes.

The Duke of Edinburgh was married to Queen Elizabeth II for 73 years, and they had four children: Prince Charles, Princess Anne, Prince Andrew, and Prince Edward. He was a keen sailor and a patron of the arts, and he was also involved in the military, serving as a colonel of the Royal Artillery and as a vice-admiral in the Royal Navy.

Philip was known for his quick wit and his ability to make people feel at ease. He was a key figure in the United Kingdom's efforts to reunify the country after the split of the United States in 1957.

Israel's National Security Council's meeting called to discuss the potential removal of an Israeli settlement from the West Bank

Four Israeli settlements and a road dedicated to an Israeli general are to be removed from the West Bank after the US administration decided to remove land from the occupied territories.

The decision follows a request from the US administration to the Israeli government to remove the settlements and the road from the area.

The decision was announced by Israeli prime minister Benjamin Netanyahu during a meeting with US president Donald Trump in Washington earlier this week.

Netanyahu said the decision was taken to ensure the security of the Israeli people and to prevent any future conflict.

The decision will be implemented within the next few weeks, according to the Israeli prime minister.

The settlements are located in the West Bank, near the Israeli settlement of Ariel, and are home to around 4,000 people.

The road, which connects the settlements to the Israeli settlement of Ma'aleh Adumim, is used by Israeli settlers to commute to work.

The decision has been met with protests from Palestinian leaders, who say it is a violation of international law.

The Israeli government has consistently refused to comply with international law and has continued to expand settlements in the West Bank.

The move comes as tensions between Israel and the US are rising, with a number of disputes over the Trump administration's policies and the lack of progress in the Israeli-Palestinian peace process.

The decision is in line with a previous announcement by the US administration to withdraw funding for the UN Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), which provides assistance to Palestinian refugees.

The move has been condemned by international organisations and has been met with criticism from the Palestinian Authority.

The decision is likely to further deteriorate the already tense relations between Israel and the US, and could have serious consequences for the future of the Israeli-Palestinian peace process.

The decision is also likely to have implications for the UN, which relies on US funding to operate.

The move has been accused by some of being a form of blackmail, as the US holds the key to the future of the UN.

The decision is also likely to be seen as a sign of the US administration's unmatched disinterest in the Middle East.

The move is likely to have serious consequences for the UN's ability to operate and carry out its mandate, and could have serious implications for the future of the UN.

Japan, which owns 36 percent of the project, and will send ships to nearby waters to assert their claim and expand their influence.

The talks between Tokyo and Beijing began in June 2008 as a cooperative effort to drum up gas resources in the area before two years latter ended falling through.

On Tuesday, Japan’s government said it was considering deploying a US Patriot missile defense system in the East China Sea to counter the threat from North Korea, which has tested two ICBMs.

Venezuelans rally as new assembly starts

CARACAS, Venezuela, Aug 2: (AP) – Venezuela’s opposition will hold a protest rally Thursday to coincide with the expected inauguration of a new assembly that will rewrite the constitution in what has been described as a power grab by President Nicolas Maduro.

In a statement, the Supreme Court said protest leader Leopoldo Lopez was sent back to prison because he had violated the terms of his house arrest by making political statements.

The government also announced the detention of its opponents, including López, one of the country’s most prominent opposition leaders. The authorities said López was sent back to jail because they believed he had violated the terms of his house arrest by making political statements.

The opposition has been calling for new elections, but the government has rejected that demand. Instead, it has announced the creation of a new legislative body that will rewrite the constitution.

LAKEWOOD, Colo. — As a 10-year-old child, the main character in Gage Golightly's new film "Fun Mom Dinner," played by Adam Driver, runs away from home with his classmate, a white boy named "Theo." When the boy's father finds them, he questions why they escaped, and Golightly says, "We're running away because we're black and white." Driver then asks, "Because we're black and white?" and Golightly replies, "Because we're alive." Driver responds, "Because we're alive, because we're alive," and Golightly says, "Because we're alive." Driver asks, "We're alive?" and Golightly says, "Yes, we're alive." Driver says, "We're alive!" and Golightly says, "We're alive because we're alive!"

The film, which is set in a fictional town in the Pacific Northwest, follows a group of friends who are trying to navigate their way through the complexities of race and identity in a world that often seems hostile to them. "Fun Mom Dinner" explores the theme of friendship and the power of connection in a time when differences can seem so great.

"Fun Mom Dinner" is directed by Colleen Campion, who also wrote the screenplay. The film stars Driver, Golightly, and a cast of talented young actors who bring their characters to life with depth and authenticity.

As a filmmaker, Golightly is committed to telling stories that shed light on the experiences of marginalized communities. "Fun Mom Dinner" is just one example of her ongoing work to create films that challenge audiences to think critically about the world around them.

Golightly, who is of mixed-race descent, says she was inspired to make "Fun Mom Dinner" because of the limited representation she saw in films when she was growing up. "I wanted to create a world where kids like Theo and I could be seen," she says. "I wanted to show that even though we may come from different backgrounds, we share the same childhood dreams and aspirations."

Santana says ‘Peace’ medicine music

By Janko Roettgers

LOS ANGELES: Legendary guitarist Carlos Santana says a new collaboration with Ron Isley is a chance for the pair to unit two music legends who have been around for decades after emerging onto the scene nearly 50 years ago.

Santana says the project, which also features — but doesn’t mention — Stevie Wonder, is a chance for him to “take another look at the idea of a potential human expression,” and a chance to explore what it means to be a “musical expression.”

The project, which is due out later this year via Monkey Puzzle/Atlantic, is part of the band’s “Power of Peace” series, which has helped to improve the music listening experience for millions of people.

“I encourage people to play it in your car, at home, during your commute, on your phone,” Santana said. “It’s already in people’s ears.

“We say, you don’t have to. Save your money. It’s already in people’s ears.”

The album, which comes on Friday, merges the smooth soul voice of Santana with the powerful vocals of Isley, as he channels “Higher Ground,” on which Santana says “Peace” is medicine music. Santana’s wife, Arrianna Santana, is currently directing her first film, “Santana: The Road Less Traveled.”

New boss starts restyling fashion magazine British Vogue

By Katie Workman

LONDON, April 2 (AFP) — Ed- ward Enninful took over as editor of British Vogue on Tuesday, launching a new handbook edition as he seeks to reinvent the fashion bible that once set the standards for the industry.

The 45-year-old former model and style director of Fashion East, who is known for his controversial views on race, has been appointed as the successor to Alexandra Shulman, who edited the magazine for 25 years.

Enninful, who was scouted as a model in his native Ghana at the age of 18, became the youngest fashion director of a major magazine in 1999.

He became the youngest fashion director in the industry when he joined British Vogue in 1997 at the age of 22, and has been the magazine’s editor since 2008.

Enninful is known for his bold and experimental style, and is known for his controversial views on race.

He is also a passionate supporter of the arts, and has been a vocal advocate for diversity and inclusion in the fashion industry.

Enninful’s appointment comes after a period of uncertainty for the magazine, which has been struggling to maintain its relevance in a rapidly changing fashion landscape.

The new edition of British Vogue will feature a mix of high-end fashion and celebrity news, as well as coverage of the latest fashion trends and celebrity interviews.

The magazine will also continue to be published as a digital edition, and will be available on a range of platforms.

Enninful’s appointment has been welcomed by many in the fashion industry, who see him as a fresh face and a breath of new air for a magazine that has been in decline for some time.

Enninful has already begun making changes to the magazine, and has promised to bring a new energy and a fresh perspective to the publication.

He has also announced plans to increase the diversity of the magazine’s editorial staff, and to focus more on promoting emerging designers.

Enninful’s appointment is a major coup for the magazine, and is seen as a sign of its commitment to staying relevant in a rapidly changing fashion landscape.

Biking across Lake Champlain ‘gorgeous’

By Wilson Ring

A 30-mile bicycle tour that winds through the open spaces of Vermont's island group is one of the nation's most scenic bicycle rides, according to glitzy guides and cycling websites. But it's also a story of how hard Vermonters can ride to make things work out for them.

A few years back, when the idea of a loop around Lake Champlain was being discussed, there was a lot of talk about how the tour would be good for tourism. But there was also a lot of talk about how it would be good for conservationists and for riders.

The ride is a mix of flat roads and mountainous terrain, with a few challenging ascents. The tour starts in Burlington and ends in Stowe, Vermont. The ride is open to all ages and abilities, but it's best suited for cyclists who can ride about 30 miles on a moderately hilly route.

Detour:

The ride is best enjoyed on a clear day, with calm waters and warm temperatures. The best time to ride is from June to August, when the weather is most likely to be favorable.

Saliva not a very effective carrier of virus

US reports first sexually transmitted Zika case of 2017

US health officials are reporting the nation’s first sexually transmitted case of Zika in 2017.

The US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) said the patient, a woman, was in a stable condition following the surgery. The woman, who is in her 20s, was treated in a hospital in Florida, where the virus was first detected in the US.

“Transmission of Zika virus by oral sex is a possibility,” the CDC said in its statement. “However, there is no evidence to date that saliva can transmit the virus.”

The CDC said the woman had been in close contact with someone who had traveled to an area where Zika was circulating, but it is not clear how she was infected.

“The woman was hospitalized on May 23 after developing symptoms consistent with Zika virus infection,” the CDC said.

The woman is in a stable condition and is expected to recover fully. The CDC is investigating the possibility of sexual transmission of Zika and will continue to monitor the situation.

The CDC has previously advised people who have traveled to areas with Zika to use condoms and avoid oral sex to reduce the risk of transmission.

The first case of Zika in the US was reported in June 2016, when a Florida woman who had traveled to Colombia was diagnosed with the virus.

Since then, the virus has spread to several other states, including Texas and California. The CDC has also reported cases of Zika in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

The virus is spread primarily through mosquito bites, but it can also be transmitted through sexual contact and blood products. The virus can also cause birth defects in pregnant women.

The CDC recommends that pregnant women or those trying to conceive avoid traveling to areas with ongoing Zika activity.

The agency also advises people who have traveled to Zika-affected areas to talk to their doctors about the risk of sexual transmission and to use condoms if they are sexually active.

The CDC has also advised that healthcare providers should be aware of the risk of sexual transmission and test patients for Zika if they have symptoms consistent with the virus.

The agency said it is continuing to investigate the possibility of sexual transmission and will provide updates as more information becomes available.

The government’s action plan includes recommendations to prevent the spread of Zika, including the use of insect repellent, wearing long-sleeved shirts and pants, and using air conditioning and fans to keep mosquitoes out of homes.

The agency also recommends that people who have traveled to Zika-affected areas check for symptoms and contact their healthcare provider if they develop any symptoms, including fever, rash, joint pain, or conjunctivitis.

The CDC said it is working with partners to increase awareness about the risks of sexual transmission and to provide guidance to healthcare providers.

The agency also encourages people to stay informed about the outbreak and to take steps to protect themselves and their families.

The CDC has also established a toll-free phone number for people to call with questions about the outbreak. The number is 1-866-232-2728.

The agency said it is committed to protecting the health and safety of all Americans and is working with partners to prevent the spread of Zika and other vector-borne diseases.

The CDC said it is also working to improve its ability to detect and respond to outbreaks of Zika and other diseases, including by developing new detection methods and improving surveillance and response systems.

The agency said it is committed to working with partners to protect the health and safety of all Americans and to improve our ability to respond to outbreaks of Zika and other vector-borne diseases.

The sultanate of Sharjah has hired HSBC to set up a US dollar sukuk programme for the Emirate’s government, which is preparing to make its first offer of Shariah-compliant bonds in March, according to sources familiar with the matter.

The banks were not immediately available for comment. A spokesperson for HSBC declined to comment.

Sharjah is not the first to tap into the US dollar sukuk market, but it is the first time that the entire Emirate’s sukuk programme is being offered through an international bank.

US plans trade probe over China’s demands for tech transfers

President Donald Trump said Thursday that he will launch a formal investigation into US trade practices with China that could eventually lead to slapping import tariffs on Beijing.

Trump’s action came in response to a request from US firms and trade groups that Washington impose penalties on China for demanding tech transfers as the price for doing business with Beijing.

The investigation would focus on China’s “forced technology transfer” practice, which US officials said may also apply to Apple Inc and other tech companies.

The probe will look at China’s demands that US companies hand over proprietary technology to Chinese manufacturers.

US Commerce Secretary Wilbur Ross, in a commentary in The Wall Street Journal online June 1, said that China’s state-owned firms have created since the app store in 2008 a “voracious, nascent” ecosystem that is helping China’s firms to hand over proprietary technology to US tech companies.

The probe will look at China’s demands that US companies hand over proprietary technology to Chinese manufacturers.

Ross wrote: “The Wall Street Journal and New York Times also said that Apple’s talks with Foxconn Technology Group for a patent licensing deal, which would allow Apple to use the iPhone’s Face ID technology as well as a virtual tour of Vincent Van Gogh’s “Starry Night” in the company store, have been put off.

The US trade probe is expected to take months to complete.

The White House said the probe would be conducted by the US Trade Representative. It did not give a timeline for the investigation.

US officials have said that China’s demands for tech transfers are common practice for US companies doing business with Beijing.

China’s companies often demand technology from US firms in exchange for access to China’s market, a personal familiar with the situation said.

China has said it does not make such demands, but US trade officials have said they are concerned about the practice.

China’s Ministry of Commerce did not address Trump’s statement.

Trump’s announcement comes as US firms are facing increasing pressure from China for tech transfers.

Chinese companies have been reported to have demanded technology from US firms in exchange for access to China’s market.

But Ahu Yildirmaz, vice president of the National Federation of Independent Business, said that 61 percent of the revenue of US companies doing business with Beijing is from sales to China.

San Francisco, Aug 2 (Bloomberg): A corner of the tech dream has been battered by a series of seed-money failures, but investors are still plowing money into brand-new startups, according to a new report released Thursday.

The median seed deal is now $1.6 million, compared with $1 million in last year’s second quarter, and the number of deals has also been growing, the report said.

And while data show that about 95% of all venture deals around the world end in failure, the number of deals that end in bankruptcy or anything else that isn’t a sale or acquisition is now on the rise, the report said.

“Early-stage investors, just as entrepreneurs, are finding it harder to get a foot in the door,” said Allan May, chairman and founder of Initialized Capital, one of the most active early-stage investors.

“Early-stage financing, including the kind that is easiest to raise, is now harder to come by,” May said.

The report also found that more than half of all venture deals that do close end up with a loss.

“When you’re in the very early going, you have to be further along,” May said.

“Seed-stage investors, in particular, have to see a much more mature venture in the startup. (AP)

The bar is now higher to get early-stage financing, and even for early-stage companies that do get financing, the terms are becoming more generous, May said.

South European 'premiums' near lows

LONDON, Aug 2 (Reuters) - The premium investors demand to hold South European government bonds has fallen to its lowest in several years, helped by a more optimistic outlook for the region's economies.

The region has been hit by a string of political and economic shocks in recent years, including the eurozone debt crisis, the Brexit vote, and the election of anti-establishment governments in Italy. However, recent months have seen a shift towards more乐观 sentiment, with growth rates improving and the region moving closer to the eurozone average.

Lucuusu named new Turkey coach: reports

ISTANBUL, Aug 2 (Agencies): The Turkish Football Federation has named Fatih Terim as the national coach, replacing Senol Gunes, Besiktas, and Galatasaray, as the new coach for the upcoming season. Terim had previously guided Turkey to two World Cup finals and a European Championship final, making him an ideal choice for the job.

In this new role, Terim will work closely with the national squad, supporting them in their preparations for the upcoming season and ensuring the team is in the best possible shape for future competitions.

While the decision to appoint Terim is seen as a strong move by the Turkish Football Federation, it also signals a new chapter in the history of Turkey's national team, as the country's football community looks forward to seeing how Terim will lead the team in the coming years.

The new studio is expected to be located in West London, close to the stadium, providing NBC with the ability to cover both the club and the national team simultaneously.

This move adds to the overall expansion of NBC's Premier League coverage, as the network continues to enhance its presence in the UK market.

Neymar’s world record PSG move imminent

Barcelona admitted defeat in convincing the Brazilian to stay at the Camp Nou on Wednesday.

Werner Ribéry, an advisor to the player, claimed PSG would pay 222 million euros ($260 million) for one clause in the contract that would make him available from January 2018, Reuters reported on Friday. PSG is backed by Qatar Investment and is due to make a deal that could break the record set by Paul Pogba’s £89.3 million ($111 million, 105.2 million euros) move to Manchester United last year.

Ribéry warned that Neymar would need the rarefied air at altitude to perform at his optimum level.

"It has been too hot in Paris," he said. "If Neymar is one of the best players in the world, he will have to play at altitude." Ribéry said Neymar wanted his move.

"I spoke to him, he wants to leave," Ribéry told French newspaper L’Équipe. "PSG is the football club of the future, Neymar is one of the top players in the world and I think it would be a good opportunity for him to go there."

Barça would truly announce PSG’s interest five days ago when his father and representative, accompanied by his friends, arrived in Paris.

"Barça are convinced Neymar will stay," Ribéry said. "They are convinced Neymar will stay because they have been told that he will not leave. They believe he will stay until the deal is complete after making a formal approach at Barça’s request on Monday morning to go back to his normal training."

Neymar has formed one of the best trio in world football with Lionel Messi and Luis Suarez over the past three seasons.

Since QSI’s takeover in 2011, Neymar has scored 105 goals and provided 80 assists.

PSG have failed to make it beyond the last 16 in the Champions League for the past three years and have been knocked out of the French Cup in the quarter-finals for the past two seasons.

However, La Liga president Javier Tebas has threatened not to accept PSG’s money over whether it contravenes FFP (Financial Fair Play) rules.

"I asked the president of the French football club if he was going to respect UEFA’s financial fair play rules," Tebas told Spanish TV’s Telecinco on Wednesday. "He said no."

"I asked him if he has enough money to buy Neymar and he said yes. That means he’s not going to respect the rules. "PSG will have to buy Neymar or we will not accept the deal."
