KUWAIT CITY, Aug 10: The International Olympic Committee (IOC) on Wednesday lifted the ban imposed on the Kuwaiti sports activities, reports Al-Ajari daily.

In response to the letter sent by the Minister of Commerce and Industry, Fawzi Al-Oraibi and Health Affairs Minister Dr. Khaled Al-Roudhan on Aug 6, the IOC highlighted its conditions and the necessary actions that had led to the lifting of the ban.

The IOC also noted the favorable results of the rehabilitation of the Kuwait Olympic Committee chaired by Sheikh Talal Al-Fahad, as well as the initiatives of the foundations and their recognized clubs, that is to say the return of the ban's full and fair resolutions of the matter.

In reply, the IOC reiterated the importance of immediate reinstatement of the dissolved Kuwait Olympic Committee and the team of its headquarters.

The IOC also called for the withdrawal of cases against it and the federations, as well as completion of the review and amendment of the law applicable to sports bodies in Kuwait in conformity with the Olympic Charter and the laws of international sports federations.

The committee also mentioned that, in the event of fulfilling the three aforementioned conditions, a meeting will be held in London in the presence of the Kuwaiti authorities and the Olympic Movement, particularly the International Olympic Committee, the Association of National Olympic Committees (ANOC), the Olympic Council of Asia (OCA) and the dissolved Kuwait Olympic Committee recognized by IOC.

This means the Kuwaiti delegation can directly confront the parties about the crisis and their representatives from the dissolved Kuwait Olympic Committee or any other organizations.

The committee has shown great flexibility regarding the three conditions of the International Olympic Committee, within available limits, but it has been met by strictness from the Olympic Movement.

The State of Kuwait has resolved to lift the ban towards withdrawing all the legal actions against the Kuwait Olympic Committee, but it cannot move inevitably because cases are in the custody of its judicial authorities.

Regarding the reinstatement of the dissolved Kuwait Olympic Committee, the committee has made a proposal on the matter to be brought before the new Kuwaiti Sports Council, which will give the general assembly the powers to form new boards or bring back the previous boards by force of law, considering that the initiatives in this regard are still in progress.

As for the amendment to the law, Kuwait, after carrying out extensive study and receiving approval from the Parliament’s Youth and Sports Committee, sent the new sports law to the Kuwaiti cabinet for the first reading and any invitations to discuss the law.

Meanwhile, the Perseids meteor shower is expected to be visible in the Kuwait on Friday evening and Saturday. Astronomer and Amateur Astronomer Al-Sudaimi said that it will be the clearest meteor shower seen in Kuwait. Al-Sudaimi estimated the shower to be in the sky for hours on Thursday. Hundreds of meteors can be seen per hour.

He said that these meteors are the debris of Comet Swift-Tuttle that approaches the Sun every 120 years, and when it travels away, it leaves debris and goes behind. When the Earth approaches the waves, it attracts them.

Al-Sudaimi noted that the Perseids meteor shower will enter the Earth atmosphere at a speed of 99 kilometers per second, and can burn at about 80 knots from the planet surface.

A meteor shower is a spike in the number of meteors or "shining stars" that streak through the sky in a region of the sky, which are caused by comet debris. Most meteors burn up in the atmosphere shortly after entering the Earth's atmosphere, but occasionally a few survive and are visible on Earth's surface.

As for the Perseids, although they are visible from any region of the sky, the best viewing location is in the northern hemisphere, and particularly in places with dark skies.

Al-Qarawi noted that the Perseids are visible from the end of July to the middle of August, and this year's meteor shower will be particularly bright due to the high activity of the comet Swift-Tuttle.

The Perseids are one of the most active meteor showers, with up to 100 meteors per hour visible at peak. The peak of this year's Perseids is expected to occur on the evening of August 10-11, with the number of meteors expected to increase during the night.

To observe the Perseids, viewers should look for a dark sky away from city lights, and use a dark-adapted eye. The Perseids can be seen from any region of the sky, but are particularly visible in the northern hemisphere.

Al-Qarawi recommended that viewers should avoid using binoculars or telescopes, as this can reduce the visibility of the meteors. Instead, viewers should use their naked eye to observe the shower.

In terms of safety, Al-Qarawi advised viewers to avoid looking directly at the bright meteors, as this can damage their eyesight. Viewers should also avoid standing in the path of bright meteors, as this can be dangerous.

The Perseids are one of the most popular meteor showers, and attract viewers from all around the world. The shower is named after the constellation Perseus, from which the meteors appear to originate.

KUWAIT CITY, Aug 10: Professor of Clinical Social Work at the College of Science in Kuwait University De Malak Al-Rashed affirmed that the biggest problem Kuwait University is suffering from currently is the continued acceptance of students beyond its capacity.

This has been detrimental to the educational process especially since the faculties of the university suffer from shortcomings and weaknesses, as confirmed by many delegations that evaluated the programs of the university, reports Al-Shahed daily.

In an interview with the daily, Dr. Al-Rashed said education sector of Kuwait is in dire need for a screening process starting from the bottom and adoption of strategies to cope with the new generation and the local, regional and global challenges.

He said, “We need to restore the prestige of education in Kuwait and focus on quality rather than quantity in the curricula and strategies of universities”.

DUBAI, Aug 10, (Agencies): Six missing as smugglers throw 180 migrants into Yemen sea

DUBAI, Aug 10, (Agencies): Six migrants missing as smugglers throw 180 migrants into Yemen sea, the first time a crossing of this type has resulted in the loss of life. The state news agency (SANA) said 227 migrants were trying to cross into Yemen by boat from Aden province, but the boat capsized and six bodies were rescued while 13 others went missing.

The agency said the migrants were mainly from Ethiopia, with smaller numbers from Nigeria, Gambia, Senegal, Guinea and Ghana. It did not give any details of the boat's destination or the cause of the accident. The UN escape route from war-torn Yemen is the country's port of Aden, where boats are often overcrowded with migrants from around the world.

The crossing is a regular occurrence, with hundreds of migrants attempting to escape religious persecution, poverty and violence in their home countries. The crossing is also a lucrative business for smugglers, with migrants often paying thousands of dollars to be transported to Yemen, where they face further exploitation.

The Yemeni government has repeatedly called for an end to the smuggling of migrants into its territory, but the practice continues despite the risks. The Yemeni coastguard has been enforcing a ban on such crossings, but it has not been able to stop the flow of migrants.

The Yemeni National Commission for Refugees and Migrants has been working to improve conditions for migrants in Yemen, but the country remains a transit point for many who are heading to Europe or the Gulf countries.

The Yemeni government has also been working with international organizations to address the issue of migrant smuggling, but the problem remains a significant challenge for the country.

WASHINGTON: The number of international students coming to the US is on the rise, off setting a nationwide trend of lower enrollment at some of the nation’s most selective schools.

The data suggests that international students are an important source of revenue for US colleges and universities, particularly at the most selective institutions.

In the past, international students have been a key source of revenue for US universities. However, the trend of lower enrollment at some of the nation’s most selective schools has raised concerns about the long-term viability of this revenue stream.

While the data suggests that international students are still coming to the US, it is not clear whether this trend will continue in the future.

The data is also not broken down by country of origin, which could provide more insight into which countries are sending the most students to the US.

Overall, the data suggests that international students remain an important source of revenue for US universities, but it is not clear whether this trend will continue in the future.

Trump's US 'n-power unjustified

WASHINGTON, Aug 10, (AFP) US President Donald Trump has doubled down on his tough talk with North Korea, saying he is ready to "match the fire with fire and the fury with fury".

But his new claim that the US has a "nuclear button" more powerful than North Korea's is more about excessive expectations than reality, experts say.

"The great leaders I've seen don't tangle with other great leaders," Trump said on Fox News Wednesday. "They don't play their hard hat against other hard hats."

"I'm not a politician" but "the one man, the leader, that things happen with," Trump told the conservative cable network.

The president huddled with advisers for several months, has denied any wrongdoing by the now-fired national security adviser, Michael Flynn, who led the US into a diplomatic and security crisis earlier this year.

The president has been exposed to the complexity and challenge of a nuclear confrontation by a senior official in Trump's administration who refused to publicly support the new US policy.

North Korea's status

On Tuesday, Trump said he had a "very good talk" with North Korea's leader Kim Jong Un, who has threatened to launch nuclear weapons in the near future.

Trump said he was pleased with the meeting and that "the talks are working".

But some experts say that the meeting was more of a propaganda stunt than a real diplomatic breakthrough.

"He's not a leader," said former CIA officer Fordoche. "He's just a man in a suit."

Violence against girls up in Britain

LONDON, Aug 10 (Reuters) - A gang of 18 people has been found guilty of kidnapping and sexually abusing 11 young girls and young women in the northern British town of Rotherham between 2010 and 2014. The offenders were aged between 13 and 17, in the city of Newcastle in northwest England, prosecutors said on Tuesday. Three have been jailed and the remaining 15 have been found guilty following four trials, the last of which ended in July.

A gang of men and women have been found guilty of trafficking girls and women into prostitution, a jury at Leeds Crown Court has found.

The gang, consisting of 17 men and one woman, were found guilty of trafficking women aged between 13 and 17 for the purpose of sexual exploitation.

The trial heard how the gang operated across three cities in England between 2010 and 2014.

Scotland's First Minister and Scottish National Party (SNP) leader, Nicola Sturgeon, has been named in a Leveson Inquiry report for her business.,

Investigation

Ashman said the wide-scale police investigation into trafficking was part of Operation Sanctuary, launched in July 2013 and which has so far arrested 461 people, leading to 93 convictions, he said.

"The aims of the operation are to identify and arrest all those involved in the trafficking of children and young women into prostitution and other forms of exploitation," he said.

Ashman also defended the decision, heavily criticised by police and victims' groups, to release those suspected of trafficking without further investigation.

"We have always had an eye on it," said Ashman. "But we have to be careful of the risk of intimidation and the danger that some people will take the opportunity to interfere with witnesses and victims."

BERLIN, Aug 11 (AP) - Angela Merkel, Germany's chancellor and leader of the Christian Democratic Union (CDU) party, has lost 3 percentage points in a new poll, leaving her with 40 percent of the vote. The far-right AfD is up two points to 10 percent.

Merkel's support slipped despite a recent Cabinet reshuffle and a string of positiveeconomic indicators, which analysts said had reduced the urgency for her to reform the eurozone. Critics say she has failed to address the country's economic problems, including a growing refugee crisis.

JERUSALEM (RAMALLAH, West Bank, Aug. 10) — Palestinian politics is a minefield and difficulty begins even before a leader is appointed. India-Pakistan ties broken as ever

70 years of tensions unresolved

NEW DELHI, Aug 10, (AP): When the British ruled the Subcontinent, the Kashmir question was one of the most controversial issues. In 1947, when India and Pakistan were carved from the former British Empire on the Subcontinent, the Kashmir question continued to be a source of tension between the two countries. The Line of Control, which ends abruptly in the mountains that are the world’s highest battlefield, leaves up to one million people dead as the region is a flashpoint of violence and conflict. Indian and Pakistani forces have fought three wars and left their armies on the developing nuclear weapons. Indian and Pakistani scientists have conducted several nuclear tests, leaving a legacy of violence and destruction. The Kashmir question remains a thorn in India’s and Pakistan’s relations with its disputed status. Kashmiri separatists and Muslim organizations have called for a referendum to determine its status. India has rejected the idea of a referendum, describing it as a threat to national security. The Kashmir question is a contentious issue that has divided the region for decades. The Kashmiri conflict has been ongoing since 1947, with both India and Pakistan claiming sovereignty over the region. The Line of Control, which was established in 1949, has been a source of tension between the two countries. The Kashmir question remains a major stumbling block in the bilateral relationship between India and Pakistan. The Kashmir issue has been on the back burner in recent years, with both countries focusing on other issues such as terrorism and economic development. However, the Kashmir question continues to be a major issue that needs to be resolved.

US sanctions Venezuela anew

WASHINGTON, Aug 15 (AP) — The United States imposed new sanctions on Venezuela on Wednesday, targeting members of a controversial, all-powerful, loyalist assembly installed last week to bolster what Washington calls the "dictatorship" of President Nicolas Maduro.

The measures were aimed at the members of the so-called Constituent Assembly — among them the brother of late president Hugo Chavez — as well as a military officer in charge of security for the body, and a board member of the national electoral authority.

They added to previous US sanctions — imposed just before a vote held last week to elect the assembly — that rely on Venezuelan crude.

The prospect of an import ban on Venezuela — the third-largest supplier to the US — would hurt US jobs and drive up gas costs.

Outcry from US oil industry
US sanctions Venezuela anew

WASHINGTON, Aug 15 (AP) — The United States imposed new sanctions on Venezuela on Wednesday, targeting members of a controversial, all-powerful, loyalist assembly installed last week to bolster what Washington calls the "dictatorship" of President Nicolas Maduro.

The measures were aimed at the members of the so-called Constituent Assembly — among them the brother of late president Hugo Chavez — as well as a military officer in charge of security for the body, and a board member of the national electoral authority.

They added to previous US sanctions — imposed just before a vote held last week to elect the assembly — that rely on Venezuelan crude.

The prospect of an import ban on Venezuela — the third-largest supplier to the US — would hurt US jobs and drive up gas costs.

Iceland observes its history ‘seep away’

Iceland’s history is ‘seep away’ as rising temperatures are melting glaciers and changing the landscape, Iceland’s environment minister says, warning of the glacier’s predicted disappearance, a devastating consequence of climate change. In a country where those slow-moving rivers of ice are a cultural symbol and a tourist attraction, the ministry is considering new ways to combat the effects of climate change.

Jökulsárlón glacier lagoon in southeast Iceland is one of the country’s key tourist attractions. Its beauty has been praised by scientists and photographers alike, and it has been a source of inspiration for many. But as temperatures rise, the glacier is melting at an alarming rate, causing the lake to expand and flood the surrounding land. The government is considering plans to create a new lake shore to accommodate the growing body of water.

Alesi hints at African roots

Julian Alesi, an Italian fossil hunter, has identified a new species of Jurassic mammal that suggests earlier than previously thought African roots.

Discovery

Zombie was the choice of ancient being once again.

Younger than expected!

A new study has revealed that the ancient being known as Zombie was actually a fossil of a gibbon, not a human ancestor.

The discovery was made by a team of researchers led by paleontologist Diego Pol from the University of Turin in Italy. The team analyzed the fossil and found that it was not a human ancestor, as previously thought, but instead belonged to the gibbon family. This is the first time that a gibbon fossil has been found in Africa, and it is significant because it suggests that the early human ancestors may not have originated in Africa as previously thought.

Increase

Volcanic activity is also expected to increase, as the melting glaciers are likely to release carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases into the atmosphere, which can contribute to global warming.

New species

A new species of gibbon has been discovered in Africa, a significant find for evolutionary biology.

A new look at the Stony Brook University in New York

Zombie was a small primate that lived in the African savannahs of the Miocene period, about 20 million years ago. The fossil, which was found in Kenya, is the first evidence of a primate that lived in Africa at that time.

Mind control

Scientists have revealed that the mind can be controlled using a new technique that involves the use of electroencephalography (EEG). The technique involves attaching electrodes to the scalp, which record brain activity, and then using this information to control a computer or other device.

Smog

A new study has revealed that smog can cause respiratory problems in children, including asthma and bronchitis.

Volcanoes

A new study has revealed that volcanoes can cause significant changes in the Earth’s climate, including increases in temperature and changes in precipitation patterns.

Love shines through ‘Glass Castle’

By Mark Kennedy

A ny parents of young children — or anyone thinking of raising a pet or two — will have heard of the "Glass Castle." Not as a love poem, mind you, but that’s what you get when you read Jennifer Lawrence Pratt’s memoir of growing up in a house that was as ridden with thorns as it was catchy.

Based on Jeannette Walls’ 2005 bestselling memoir, the film is directed by Destin Daniel Cretton, who also helmed the award-winning "The Glass Castle" in 2017. The book follows Walls as she grows up in a large family of four children, including the author, who is raised in a house that is both rundown and haunted by their parents’ past mistakes.

The exact moment when dad goes from offbeat and beloved to an emotional liability is heart-wrenching.

"The Glass Castle" is a tribute to parenting, confessional of its absence. It is a story of triumph in the face of adversity, a reminder that love always, always wins.

The documentary’s director, Stephen Nomura Schon, who co-founded "This is Not a Love Song," says she is also the first person to experience the impact of the documentary after it was screened.

Schon says that the documentary is a tribute to the mother who raised her and the memory of her kindness.

"The documentary is a reminder of the importance of love and compassion," says Schon. "It’s a story that has touched me in a deep way."

Then, producer Gill Nutter snapped to save the day. “Star Wars” had made both “This Is Us” star Sterling K. Brown and “The Blind Side” star Michael Oher a household name. As Walls says, “He knew how to make a movie about a dysfunctional and an overprotective dad — you know, he knew how to make a movie about family.”

For Nutter, it was a simple call: “We just both knew it was time for someone to step up and give people hope. I like the humbly heroic,” she says. “It’s like, I just feel that there was a sense of hope in the story that I thought could really help people understand that.”

The key for both was in the casting of the screen version of the real family, which fans across the planet, it’s also certain to ripple out and resonate to the world, as that of the real family, cobbled together from the remainders. “The Glass Castle” ends with footage of the family together since Walls says of seeing her life on the big screen. “It’s really exciting. It’s the greatest compliment. And the movie to me underscores that every time writing partner Robert Carriger and I sit down at the computer, it’s like to give people hope. I like triumph of the human spirit.”

“I was told I would hate it. I love it,” Jeannette Walls says of seeing her life on the big screen. “It’s been a really great experience. The former “Dawson’s Creek” star will appear in a feature film adaptation of “The Glass Castle,” which is set for release next year.

Ready, set ‘the table’, go! Tablescaping gets competitive

By Melissa Kossler Dutton

As Andrea Smith’s dining room will be out of commission for the next few months while she recovers from surgery, she looks forward to the day when she can again set a table with carefully chosen dishes and centerpieces as she prepares what she hopes will be another award-winning entry for a local “tablescaping” contest. Smith, a retired teacher and avid quilter who lives in Estes Park, Colorado, has already spent hours planning what dishes, table linens and centerpieces she will use for her place setting in the October competition, which serves as a fundraiser for a museum.

The photo shows a beautifully decorated table setting with various elements such as flowers, candles, and other decorative items. The tablescape is arranged in a way that highlights the intricate details that make it stand out. Habitat for Humanity of Kanawha & Putnam, planning a tablescaping contest to benefit McLaughlin, who researched the topic before

A tablescaping contest was planned by Habitat for Humanity of Kanawha & Putnam in Charleston, West Virginia. The contest was to benefit McLaughlin, who had researched the topic before. Mirrors, candlesticks and flowers were all used to create a beautiful table setting. A shift toward eating dinner one course at a time, instead of all at once, meant there was more room on the table for decorations. The contest was a way to raise funds for a charity, as well as to provide a chance to get involved in the community. Volunteers at the benefit raised the most money.

In addition to creating an elaborate fairy garden on the table, he crafted a trellis from tree branches that hung above it, and decorated the table’s base with rocks and mulch. "It was a blast," said O’Quinn. Fellow competitor Marica Gerritz agreed. As owner of a design studio that specializes in bridal and event planning, she has hosted tablescaping events, as well as set tables for weddings and special events. She has also written extensively about the art of tablescaping and other websites featuring photos of posh parties have inspired her to create an elaborate table setting, she said.

The protest was by a group of tourists, who took to the streets to express their anger at the way the authorities dealt with an armed robbery.

"We don't want this to happen again," said one tourist, who was among the first to arrive. "We don't want our holidays to be ruined by such events."

It’s never enough for a couch to be a couch. That’s my mantra. Flipping through the pages of a recent furniture catalog, I noticed that the couches seemed to be more than just seating. They were also multifunctional, transforming into beds, desks, and even planters.

I was intrigued by the idea of a couch that could evolve into a plant stand. It’s not just about having a comfortable place to sit; it’s about making the most of the space we have. And these days, with smaller apartments and homes, every square inch counts.

This couch, which is 2 to 3 feet across, is one of the many entries in the expanding field of apps intended to identify unknown plants. It’s one of the many names in the field of small planters that are used in gardens and urban settings. These small planters are designed to grow a variety of plants, from herbs to flowers. They are perfect for those who want to add some greenery to their living space but don’t have the space for a full garden.

Another feature of these multifunctional couches is the ability to store things inside. This is especially useful in small spaces where storage is limited. The couches can be designed with drawers or compartments to hold books, toys, or even a small coffee table. This way, you can have a comfortable seating area and a functional space at the same time.

As for the couches themselves, they come in a variety of styles and colors. Some are sleek and modern, while others have a more traditional look. They can be made from a variety of materials, including wood, metal, and fabric. Some are even upholstered in leather or velvet.

So, next time you’re in the market for new furniture, consider a multifunctional couch. It’s not just about comfort; it’s about making the most of your space. And who knows, you might even find a couch that grows plants!

Scientists find new drug leads for ALS

LONDON, Aug 9, (APR): Artificial intelligence firms are racing to deliver the race to find new drugs for the crippling nerve disease ALS, or Lou Gehrig’s disease.

The condition, also known as Lou Gehrig’s disease, attacks and kills nerve cells controlling muscles. As the muscles weaken and die, people lose the ability to walk, talk and breathe, and, ultimately, to breathe. There are no safe drugs approved by the US Food and Drug Administration to slow the progression of ALS, a neuromuscular disease.

Researchers. They analyse huge chemical libraries and use AI to identify potential drug candidates. They also use AI to guide the development of drugs that could help slow the progression of ALS. They also use AI to guide the development of drugs that could help slow the progression of ALS.

For example, Benevolent AI has used AI to identify potential drug candidates for ALS. The company has developed a drug called ONPLA, which was approved by the US Food and Drug Administration in 2017. The drug is currently being tested in clinical trials.

In addition to Benevolent AI, other companies are also using AI to develop drugs for ALS. For example, InSilico Medicine is using AI to develop drugs for diseases such as cancer and Alzheimer’s disease. The company has developed a drug called BMS-986107, which is currently being tested in clinical trials.

Although there are no approved drugs for ALS, there is promising research in this area. For example, a study published in the journal Nature in 2017 showed that a drug called NPTX2 could slow the progression of ALS in mice.

In conclusion, AI is playing an increasingly important role in drug discovery for ALS. As the technology continues to advance, it is likely that more and more drugs will be developed for this disease in the future.

WASHINGTON, Aug 10 (Reuters) - US private companies unexpectedly fell flat in July, recording their biggest drop in manufacturing and pointing to a further moderation in inflation that could delay a Federal Reserve rate increase.

LONDON, Aug 10, (RTKS): Britain will avoid recession this year but economic growth is likely to be weak, according to the new economic forecast for the eurozone, a Reuters poll showed on Thursday.

The poll of almost 70 economists taking part in the Reuters poll of almost 70 economists last month there was little consensus about the timing of Brexit and very little agreement about the key factors shaping the vote. Seven-in-ten said last year's weak growth would continue to slow economic growth by 0.5% per quarter through the middle of next year, the poll found.

"What took you years to build up can be sold in a day," says Sayles, adding that she is planning for what she calls "the long-term view". "It is just over a year since Britons voted for Brexit and the government now faces the "worst outcome for sterling and Britain," concludes the poll.

The Bank of England (BoE) announced on Aug 10, that it will continue to use its emergency measures to support the economy, as imports became more expensive. Consumers played a key role in this, according to the poll, and policy makers are likely to continue to focus on inflation.

Owners should buy insurance that provides different benefits. AmEx’s airport lounge access is worth $1,500 using Chase’s rewards program, and will be enough to assuage the sticker shock of the annual fee, analysts say.

"We have been here for 20 years, but we remain concerned that there’s no clear line of sight to a new relationship. Without a clear line of sight, it’s hard to know what the future holds for us," says Sayles.

"It is important to note that the economic growth forecasts for the year are for the year as a whole, but they have very little of substance behind them," saysia.

"The Bank fully recognises the economic crisis that is spreading across the globe," says Hammond. "The Bank has to take action right now, to give an exact outline while negotiations are under way. The Bank did not take into account the decision that has been made by the EU to stop using animal products in the notes after it emerged that they contained more durable and harder to fake.

"The shock is not just felt in the budget, but across the economy as a whole," says Hammond. "This is a very important decision and it is vital that the government and the Bank fully understand its implications."

North Korea regularly threatens to destroy the US if Thursday’s report was invalid in its detail, leading some to speculate that the news could be a negotiating ploy, or a sign of the regime’s readiness to respond by threat of nuclear war.

The US has sought to distance itself from China, one of North Korea’s few allies, to help secure a common stance against the isolated nation. But Reuters reported on a US naval operation in the South China Sea which could strain relations between the two global superpowers.

Analysis at Morgan and ING underscored the speculative trading in derivatives markets rather than actual trading in the underlying assets.

“We therefore expect this outperformance from the Bund to be unsustainable underperformances from the Bund and other risk-off measures as a wider set of risks weighs on global superpowers,” Mizuho said.

Analysts at Mizuho and ING argued on a US naval operation in the South China Sea which could strain relations between the two global superpowers.

Bonds were offering a haven in volatile markets, with the US benchmark 10-year Treasury yield at 1.50 per cent on Thursday.

The Bund, Europe’s single-currency benchmark 10-year government bond, was quoted at 0.66 per cent, just 1.46 per cent below the yield on the US benchmark, compared with 1.34 per cent on Wednesday.

Kumamoto and Oita prefecture said it was finalising plans to fire four intermediate-range missiles over 200 km (125 miles) off the coast. It plans to launch the missiles in the near future.

While the market’s focus remained on the beyond-North Korean situation, investors were also watching the US, which on Thursday released its personal consumption expenditure (PCE) report, which showed the economy expanded at a slower rate than expected.

The report showed the US economy grew at a 1.5 per cent annual rate in the second quarter, well below the 2.6 per cent growth rate in the first quarter.

The consumer price index (CPI) also showed inflation was still well below the Federal Reserve’s target of 2 per cent.

That means the US central bank is likely to keep interest rates on hold for some time, despite the demand for higher rates by some policymakers.

In Japan, the Bank of Japan held its monetary policy meeting as expected, with Governor Haruhiko Kuroda saying he was hopeful that the country’s economy would continue to expand.

The Japanese central bank’s core inflation measure, which excludes fresh food and energy prices, rose to 0.1 per cent from 0.0 per cent.

Bonds in other major economies were also gaining.

The yield on Germany’s Bund, the hallmark of the European debt market, fell to 0.66 per cent from 0.68 per cent.

In Italy, the yield on 10-year bonds declined to 1.39 per cent from 1.40 per cent, while in Spain it fell to 0.52 per cent from 0.58 per cent.

In the US, the yield on 10-year Treasuries fell to 2.88 per cent from 2.89 per cent.

Japanese government bonds were also in demand, with the yield on 10-year JGBs declining to 0.20 per cent from 0.21 per cent.

Bonds in other emerging markets also showed gains, with yields in Brazil falling to 6.56 per cent from 6.58 per cent, while in South Korea they declined to 1.12 per cent from 1.14 per cent.

The risk of a recession in the US remains, with the yield on 10-year Treasuries falling to 2.88 per cent from 2.89 per cent.

Indian states look to digitise land deals with blockchain

The blockchain technology works by creating a secure ledger of transactions that is tamper-proof and traceable. This can significantly reduce fraud, as all transactions are recorded on a public, distributed ledger. The technology can also greatly increase efficiency and reduce costs, as middlemen are eliminated.

Buoyant bitcoin market stirs crypto-bubble fears

By Jonatha Navy

But some other "cryptocurrency" are big money, virtuously as big as Goldman Sachs or the Royal Bank of Scottland combined. The price of a single Bitcoin is an all-time high of about $3,500, which, according to Intel, is more than $1 billion lower than 24 cents. "It's not just money on an ICO that's going to make a quick buck," said Moffat. "Many of these new currencies are still volatile and not widely accepted. They are not real currencies, but rather tokens or "cryptocurrency" that can be used for online transactions. While some experts believe that cryptocurrencies are the future of money, others warn that they are a risky and unpredictable investment.

Not everyone agrees with the hype. "I don't think anyone should put all their money into cryptocurrencies," said Dr. David Lewis, CEO of a financial advisory firm. "Many of these new currencies are still in their early stages and there is a lot of volatility. It's important to do your research and not invest more than you can afford to lose."

Despite the concerns, the bitcoin market continues to grow. In less than a month, the value of all cryptocurrencies has increased by more than 21 million. "The rise of bitcoin has been driven by a number of factors, including the increasing demand for alternative forms of payment and the growing interest in blockchain technology," said Dr. Lewis. "However, it's important to remember that the cryptocurrency market is still in its early stages and there is a lot of risk involved."

The future of cryptocurrencies is uncertain, but one thing is clear: they are here to stay. As the market continues to grow, it will be important for investors to carefully consider their options and make informed decisions. The success of cryptocurrencies will depend on a number of factors, including the adoption of blockchain technology by traditional financial institutions and the development of new applications that can benefit from its features.

In conclusion, the cryptocurrency market is a rapidly evolving field with both opportunities and risks. Investors should carefully consider their options and make informed decisions to ensure their success in this exciting and unpredictable market.
FRESNO, California: A nerve-rattling encounter with a mountain lion started with a fleeting glimpse of the big cat's tail on a High Sierra trail in California's wilderness.

Brian McKinney didn't believe it was a puma that his hiking partner Sam Vonderheide had seen, so he got out his phone and hit record as they followed the lithe creature.

The hikers slowly rounded a turn to see it peering down on them from a rocky perch just feet away.

Its ears were perked up, head cocked and eyes locked on them.

"What are you supposed to do?" one hiker whispered. The other answered: "I don't know. I don't think you're supposed to run.”

McKinney said his heart races now seeing the video. "(I was) not only shocked, but alarmed that she had the advantage above me, which is what they do when they hunt," he said.

Rangers at Sequoia National Park on Monday posted link to the two-minute video captured July 23. (AP)

PROVIDENCE, Rhode Island: A worker at a Rhode Island hospital is earning praise for what he did with money that was literally laundered.

Steven Ledo, a 19-year employee of The Miriam Hospital in Providence, was working the laundry room last month when he noticed $50 and $100 bills billowing out of an open dryer. He gathered up $9,100 in all and turned it over to administrators, who made sure it was returned to an unnamed patient.

He tells The Providence Journal that keeping the money never crossed his mind because of the way his parents raised him.

He says returning the money made him feel "good and clean." Ledo will be honored by the hospital's president later this month. (AP)

BRUSSELS: A baby bonobo ape has been cradled in her mother's arms since her birth in Belgium last week, offering zoo visitors only a brief glimpse of her face at feeding times.

Fiercely guarded by mother Djanoa, Planckendael zoo's newest resident has drawn crowds of curious visitors since she was born on Aug 2.

The infant is the second bonobo born this year in what zookeepers say is a hopeful sign for the zoo's population of endangered great apes, one of the closest primate species to humans.

"It's so important that there's a lot of bonobos born (in captivity) to keep the genetic variety as wide as possible," Joris Jacobs, a keeper in charge of the bonobos at Planckendael, told Reuters.

In recent years, an average of six bonobos have been born to the population of some 120 currently held in captivity in European zoos. (RTRS)

PARIS, Aug 10, (AFP) - Neymar is poised to make his much-anticipated debut for Paris Saint-Germain on Sunday when they travel to Saint-Etienne for their second game of the Ligue 1 season.

The Brazilian forward, who has not yet been seen on the pitch this week, was still working on a transfer certificate from the Spanish Football Federation (RFEF) before the Brazilian deadline.

The certificate has to arrive before the kick-off for Neymar to be able to play. The forward received the certificate on Friday after a 4-0 thrashing of Strasbourg last week and now set to face Brittany in a fixture on Friday.

"His ambition led him to our professional doors," Paris Saint-Germain (PSG) star manager Emery told AFP.

"Without Neymar PSG is a great club but with Neymar PSG is a great team," added Emery.

LONDON, Aug 10. (AP): Norway's Karsten Warholm and Phyllis Francis produced sublime performances to stun the favourites and take gold at the athletics world championships on Wednesday. Warholm, a baby-faced 21-year-old, led from start to finish and won the 400 metres hurdles in 46.70 seconds, a new world record.

"I truly don’t believe it," gasped Warholm, who put his fingers round his mouth after crossing the line, saying "It’s surreal. I’ve been given a chance in life. For me. Of course, the rain affected the event and I was super nervous before but I was ready for these championships."
