WASHINGTON, Dec 16, (Agencies): Senior Trump administration officials outlined their view Friday that Jerusalem’s Western Wall ultimately will be declared a part of Israel, in another declaration sure to enrage passions among Palestinians and others in the region.

Although they said the ultimate borders of the holy city must be resolved through Israeli-Palestinian negotiations, the officials — speaking ahead of Vice President Mike Pence’s trip to the region — essentially ruled out any solution that would not include Israeli control over the holy site in Jerusalem. The issue is sensitive because the wall is beyond Israel’s pre-1967 borders and abuts some of the Islamic world’s most revered sites.

“Within our joint vision, the Western Wall would not be part of Israel,” Pence said in a statement Thursday announcing details of the vice president’s upcoming trip. “And while the president has made it clear that no action taken by the US – or any other country – can change the final status of Jerusalem, we must ensure that the holy site remains under Israeli control,” Pence added.

Saudis said to ‘detrain’ Palestinian billionaire

AMMAN, Dec 16, (BUTS): Saudi Arab, Jordan’s most influential businesswoman and the chairman of its largest Arab Bank, was detained in Saudi Arabia for questioning after a business trip to Riyadh, family sources and friends said on Saturday.

Masri’s detention, which follows the biggest page of the Saudi kingdom’s affluent elite in its modern history, saw her decoyed through business circles, where the billiona- ries are major investors.

A string of political and economic changes since King Abdullah was detained last Tuesday hours before he was planning to leave the kingdom for a medical treatment in Switzerland, are likely to have a major impact on the business environment.

Mr. Al-Sheikh’s detention comes during America’s efforts to re-establish contact with Iran and a number of Middle Eastern nations, following the failure of the round at the feet of the government side. (RTRS)

LONDON, Dec 16, (AFP): British Prime Minister Theresa May has told her own party to deliver Brexit in March 2019, as she and her cabinet tried to hold together a divided government in the face of a scandal.A British vote to leave the European Union is expected on March 29, 2019, and will begin a two-year period ending with the country’s departure from the EU, which is scheduled for March 29, 2019.

The British government is therefore under pressure from MPs to hold a vote on the legislation, and will support it, although May’s office would not confirm this. The vote is likely to take place on Tuesday, December 19th, 2017.

The legislation would provide a legal framework for the UK’s exit from the EU, and would also allow the government to negotiate the terms of the UK’s departure from the EU. The legislation would also contain provisions for the UK’s departure from the European Union, including the UK’s withdrawal from the European Union, and the UK’s accession to the European Economic Area.

The legislation would be presented to the House of Commons on December 19th, 2017, and would be debated in the House of Commons on December 20th, 2017. It would then be submitted to the House of Lords for further consideration, and would be debated in the House of Lords on December 21st, 2017. The legislation would then be presented to the Queen for royal assent, and would be enacted into law on December 22nd, 2017.

Zero tolerance on air strikes:

Prime Minister Narendra Modi has taken a tough stance against Pakistan after a suspected militant attack in the Indian state of Jammu and Kashmir.

The attack, which involved suicide bombers who targeted a paramilitary camp, occurred on Thursday night.

In his speech at Parliament on Friday, Modi said that India will respond with "decisive power" to any such attacks.

He added that India will not hesitate to use military force to protect its sovereignty and territorial integrity.

New Delhi drowning out the voice of his mother:

Rahul Gandhi, the Congress party leader and the son of former prime minister Manmohan Singh, has come under fire for his recent remarks.

In an interview with the BBC, Gandhi criticized his mother's policies, saying that she has been "wasting the country's resources".

He also alleged that the Congress party had been "miserable" during her tenure.

Gandhi's comments have sparked a heated debate in Indian politics, with some accusing him of being disrespectful to his mother, Sonia Gandhi.

Sonia Gandhi, who has been the Congress party president since 1998, is known for her strong leadership and her efforts to bring about social and economic changes in India.

However, her government has been criticized for its inability to generate economic growth and its perceived lack of accountability.

The Congress party, which has been in power for most of India's history, has been facing tough competition from the ruling Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP).

The party has been accused of favoring corporate interests and neglecting the needs of ordinary people.

India is facing a challenging political landscape, with a general election due in 2019 and a new round of state elections scheduled for later in the year.

FIFA World Cup 2018: India's bid:

India has submitted its bid to host the 2018 FIFA World Cup, joining the likes of South Africa, Qatar, the United States, and Japan.

The country's soccer federation has announced that it will launch a campaign to promote the game and attract foreign sponsorship.

India's bid is seen as a significant step in the nation's effort to increase its participation in international sports.

The country has a large and enthusiastic fan base, and the government is hoping to use the opportunity to boost the country's tourism and economy.
Committed to cut emissions
No Paris accord? No problem, says ‘bloc’

HAMPSTEAD, N.C.: Dec. 16 (AFP) Space Us President Barack Obama vowed Tuesday to keep pushing for climate action that leaves the US in line with global nations like China, even as the country looks to tackle carbon pollution that has been forced to a 21-year low.

More than a dozen former officials committed Tuesday to making cuts in carbon emissions that the Obama administration has said are on pace to break the 400-megawatt mark. The cuts, which would be a 30 percent reduction from 2005 levels, are expected to reach 40 percent by 2025.

The cuts, which have been in place since the Paris accord was signed in 2015, come after the administration announced that the US would work with China, India, and other nations that are leading the charge to reduce their emissions. The cuts are expected to reduce the country's emissions by about 30 percent by 2025, which would allow the US to remain on a trajectory for a carbon-neutral future.

The US also committed to reducing its emissions from the use of coal and other fossil fuels by 2030. The cuts are expected to cut greenhouse gas emissions by about 26 percent by 2025, which would allow the US to remain on a trajectory for a carbon-neutral future. LOS ANGELES, Dec. 16, 2017 (AP) -- It is the most intense, critically acclaimed role of her career, but Diane Kruger worked hard to act as if it were a lackluster summer rom-com instead of a film that centers on a mother’s grief and estranged family.After filming "In the Fade," German-Turkish auteur known for "Tarantino’s "Inglourious Basterds," Kruger’s epic crowd-pleaser, is a heart-wrenching drama that looks at the same issues as "Troy" and "Inglourious Basterds.," but with a more personal story and a more political message.

LOS ANGELES: Eminem sounds alive in “Revival,” his first album in four years and a testament to his enduring appeal. The 44-year-old rapper delivered the hits, while vowing, “He’ll only be knocked out.”

Kaylee Mullins — aged 18, cheerful, in the garden; has been months since we've been able to talk about her father. He was a wonderful father and he's going to keel over in front of you. How do I get him to stop this, Kaylee? I'm sure it's not from alcohol. I'm sure it's from something he's doing out of love for his kids, yes?"

Dear Mr. Abby: My father — aged 68, active and in good health — has been in hospital this month for 10 days. He did come through the operation fine, but he has been unable to get out of bed. He is in a lot of pain and is incontinent. He is a good and kind man, but I am finding it difficult to cope with what is happening. How should I help him take care of himself? He doesn't like to be in hospital and I feel sorry for him. What can I do?"

Dear Mr. Abby: I have been going through some tough times in my life and I would like to share them with you. I am going through a separation from my husband and I am trying to make ends meet. I would appreciate any advice you can offer."

Children’s lungs more vulnerable to air pollution

Exposure to larger air particles tied to increased asthma risk in kids

NEW YORK, Dec 16: Researchers at The Johns Hopkins University report statistical evidence that children exposed to airborne coarse particulate matter—mix of dirt, soil and non-pesticide tailpipe emissions, such as tire rubber—are more likely to develop asthma and need emergency room or hospital treatment for it than their unexposed children. The findings, published Dec 15 in the American Journal of Respiratory and Critical Care Medicine, highlight the long-term negative effects of such relatively large airborne pollutants—a common fact of everyday inner-city life—on health, especially in children and adolescents 11 years of age and younger.

The research team, led by Corinne Keet, MD, MS, PhD, associate professor of pediatrics at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, and the study’s first author, Karl Keet also published an earlier study in the Journal of the American Medical Association. The study found a link between increased asthma risk and larger air particles, according to the researchers. The researchers then tracked the study’s original cohort for another two years to analyze the relationship between coarse particulate matter and asthma risk.

According to the study’s lead author, Corinne Keet, MD, MS, PhD, the findings suggest that exposure to coarse air particles adversely affects the lungs of children. She notes that this is particularly concerning for children under 11 years of age. Keet and her team found that for each microgram per cubic meter increase in coarse particulate matter, asthma diagnosis increased by 0.6 percent, emergency room visits for asthma by 1.7 percent and hospitalizations for asthma by 2.3 percent.

The association between coarse particulate matter and asthma risk is stronger for children 11 years old and younger. For each microgram per cubic meter increase in coarse particulate matter, asthma diagnosis increased by 1.3 percent, emergency room visits for asthma by 3.3 percent and hospitalizations for asthma by 4.5 percent.

The authors speculate that the stronger association in the young reflects the probability that young children spend more time outdoors and their immature lungs are more vulnerable to air pollution.

The researchers caution that their study was limited by the relatively few locations nationwide that routinely monitor particulate matter. "More research is needed, but these findings add to evidence that exposure to PM 10-2.5 may contribute to asthma, and that regulation and monitoring of this part of air pollution may need to be considered," Keet says.

These findings are timely, she adds, because the EPA is currently conducting a comprehensive review of the science related to the health effects of particulate pollution, as mandated by the Clean Air Act.

According to the American College of Allergy, Asthma & Immunology, an estimated 7.1 million children have asthma. Asthma is the most common chronic illness in childhood and accounts for 13.8 million missed school days each year.

The researchers comment that their study was limited by the relatively few locations nationwide that routinely monitor particulate matter. "More research is needed, but these findings add to evidence that exposure to PM 10-2.5 may contribute to asthma, and that regulation and monitoring of this part of air pollution may need to be considered," Keet says.
LOS ANGELES — Dec. 18—From a storyline driven by musical numbers to a narrative boundary-pushing addition of a newborn trapped in the plumbing of a ward, we want to do the fun, soapy stuff that’s tried and true: first responders, people in control and in uniform, and who they are when they can be totally in the real focus of the show is “the difference of who they are when they can be totally in control and in uniform, and who they are when they’re just people, and that’s the really interesting part.”

Falchuk says the show will stay on the venerable procedural path that’s driven decades of television — from “Dragnet,” “Cagney and Lacey,” to “ER,” “C.S.I.” and “Chicago Fire” — with Murphy’s produce executive producer Ben Jacobi, who has worked with Murphy on shows like “24: Live Another Day,” “The Accountant,” and “The Man in the High Castle.”

Falchuk admits they’re been cast in the role of first responders and officers and there’s no reason why a network couldn’t do it. “It’s sort of a weird stuff, is a little trickier.”

Creative muscles they haven’t engaged before, says Falchuk, who adds, “It has to be stuff like these set piece sequences. That it’s not just a routine show.”

Doha, Nov 16, (AP): Qatar's 1997-1998 economic crisis has led to a sharp downturn in growth, particularly in the construction and real estate sectors, and has led to heightened concerns about the country's economic prospects. Qatar’s GDP growth rate is expected to be around 2%, with inflation rising to 4.5% in 2009, due to higher oil prices and the appreciation of the Qatari riyal. The central bank has raised interest rates to 4%, and the government has announced a austerity program to reduce the budget deficit. However, Qatar is still recovering from the 1997-1998 crisis, and the government is still facing challenges in its efforts to diversify the economy.

Fitch has upgraded Portugal’s credit rating, saying Portugal’s economic recovery is continuing to progress and that country’s growth prospects are improving. This is the first time in the past five years that Fitch has lifted the country’s debt rating out of junk status.

According to Fitch, the rating agency’s move is driven by Portugal’s economic performance, which has been strong in recent years. The agency noted that Portugal’s GDP growth has been positive since 2014, and that the country’s unemployment rate has dropped significantly in recent years.

However, Fitch also cautioned that Portugal still has some challenges to overcome, such as a high public debt ratio and a need for further structural reforms.

“Moreover, Portugal’s high debt ratio and high public debt-to-GDP ratio remain a significant challenge, and the government will need to continue implementing structural reforms to bring down the debt ratio,” Fitch said in a statement.

The rating agency also noted that Portugal’s fiscal position remains strong, with a primary surplus of 1.8% of GDP in 2017.

“Portugal’s improving economic performance and fiscal position, combined with ongoing reforms to improve the business environment, should support the country’s economic recovery and growth prospects,” Fitch said.

Beijing unveils Winter Olympics emblems

The Beijing 2022 Paralympic Winter Games emblem for the Games and the Sport of Wheelchair Basketball was unveiled at a ceremony in Beijing on Dec 15.

The emblem features nine red stylized petals encircling a red heart symbolizing the gathering of the nine provinces and cities of China's northern region that host the Games. The red heart is derived from the traditional Chinese graphic of the character for love, and represents the unity of the country and the central belief that "reaching out hands are a voice of love and a gesture of peace."
