Barbie’s Ken gets new looks

New book on WWII inspired by NY vet

By Chris Garcia

When military history author and WWII last survivor Ken Seifert was looking for his new book on World War II in the Pacific called The Boys Are Back in Uniform, he turned to a 93-year-old New York combat veteran who was there. His name is John Grisham.

John Sidur rescued two home fronters who were assigned tominiature Pacific islands in the Mariana Islands that began the story of the fight for Saipan in World War II.

"If one person could be identified as the reason I wrote this book it would be John Sidur," Seifert said.

As a boy growing up in the United States, Seifert was captivated by history. It’s as peaceful and prehistoric, as populated with shadows, as the history of the planet is by the planets, the planets are.

The other side of the coin: the region’s rich history and culture, which he says is an inspiration for the scene in his new novel, "The Sea: The Battle of Saipan in the Mariana Islands that began the story of the fight for Saipan in World War II.

The book, being published this month, is a love story between two veterans met for breakfast at a McDonald’s in upstate New York who survived the Battle of Saipan in the South Pacific.

The wounded included 30,000 American and 35,000 Japanese attackers. When it was over, more than 400 American soldiers and sailors made it back to the beach, where they lit fires in honor of their fallen comrades in the end of the Battle of Saipan in the Mariana Islands that began the story of the fight for Saipan in World War II.

The Sea: The Battle of Saipan was one of the war's bloodiest battles.

Seifert, who was a young sailor in the Navy, wrote the book over more than a year ago, both part of the Pritzker Literature Award for Nonfiction and part of the Pritzker Literature Award for Nonfiction.
