51 teams from 18 universities across the GCC participate in the event

GUST wins first place in the Gulf Programming Contest

GUST’s winning team members Karim K., Abdulrahman AlHababi, and their coach, Fadi Deeb, also won two other prestigious awards: one including the Solid Programming Award for solving the maximum number of questions from the first attempt, Steady Programming Award for solving the first ten questions (with exactly no failures), and the GPC for submitting the last correct program on time.

The GPC also has an informal category in which GUST’s ‘e-LEMON-ators’ team won top position. The team includes students Zaid Shafei, Muhammad Abdulrahman, and Hisham Aboodman.

The Gulf Programming Contest provided an opportunity for students outside the region to gain experience from around the region majoring in Computer Science, Computer Engineering, and related fields. It aimed to display first-hand its programming and problem-solving skills. The event was open to all programming problems to be solved using one PC only. Participating in this contest gives the students the opportunity to practice and develop their skills in software development and competition for Computer Machinery — International Collegiate Programming Contest (ICPC) — World Finals. Many students who qualified for the national and world programming competition programs worked with Google, Facebook, Yahoo, Amazon, and Booking.com.

GUST’s winning team members were Kuwait University, American University in the Emirates, Khalifa University, Zayed University, BITS Pilani - Dubai Campus, University of Petroleum and Minerals, King Faisal University, and others from Kuwait and the region.

The Gulf Programming Contest, which is an extension of the National Programming Contest, was first initialized in the United Arab Emirates in 2011. The decision was made to expand the contest to include Gulf universities in the GCC to increase participation outside the UAE and to support the first country to participate from outside the United Arab Emirates.
