PARIS: Aquamarine color and sumptuous fabrics reigned at Paris Fashion Week shows, as couturier Alber Elbaz of Lanvin and Keeping Robinson joined in the Parisian fashion pajama party on Saturday.

Bedecked with graphic, angular prints, the collection was held in the Parisian fashion pajama party on Saturday. The show featured a collection of 61 looks, each inspired by a different designer.

The collection included pieces by Rahul Mishra, Vivienne Westwood, and Elie Saab, among others. Each designer brought their unique vision to the collection, with Mishra focusing on intricate embroidery and Westwood on bold colors and print. Saab's designs featured a strong sense of structure and form, with an emphasis on tailoring and fit.

The collection was a celebration of fashion and diversity, with models of all shapes, sizes, and colors featured on the runway. The finale was marked by a dramatic display of the iconic YSL tuxedo dress, which has become synonymous with the brand.

The show was a testament to the enduring appeal of Paris Fashion Week, and a celebration of the city's rich fashion heritage. It was a night of glamour, style, and creativity, with each designer leaving their unique mark on the collection.

Words: 10

PARIS: Elie Saab: Elie Saab's spring-summer 2018 ready-to-wear collections front row seats. It-girl Olivia Palermo on the coveted bie Cornish and Emily Robinson joined Fashion Week shows, as actresses Ab-