Breast cancer most common among women: Al-Shaheen

By Marwa Al-Bahrawi

KUWAIT CITY, Oct 25: A board member of the Cancer Society (CSO) Dr Maha Al-Shaheen affirmed that breast cancer is the most common type of cancer among women in the world. She attributed the increase in the incidence of this cancer in Kuwait and around the world to the fact that the disease appears in the average age of women around 35 years. She also highlighted the importance of early diagnosis and treatment, self-examination, preventive measures, breast cancer and other important factors.

She stressed that the rate of cases affected ten years earlier than other western countries.

On her part, Specialist on International Medicine and Head of Internal Medicine and Head of Internal Medicine, Dr Al-Sayed indicated that breast cancer is the first in the list of women's diseases in the Arab countries and the second in the world. She said, “Despite the many causes of breast cancer, science did not pay the direct cause until incidentally.”

However, Dr Al-Sayed pointed out that a lack of risks such as following some unhealthy lifestyle, obesity, which is regarded as the main cause of breast cancer.
