Kuwait renews backing to IAEAs sustainable dev.

Kuwait has renewed its backing to the International Atomic Energy Agency's (IAEA) sustainable development agenda in the country.

The country's government reiterated its commitment to the agency's goals at the IAEA Governing Board meeting, which is expected to take place in November.

Kuwait's support comes amid ongoing discussions on the future of the IAEA's Sustainable Development Initiative (SDI), which aims to promote the peaceful use of nuclear energy and the protection of the environment.

"Kuwait renews its backing to the IAEA's Sustainable Development Initiative," the ministry said in a statement. "We believe in the importance of nuclear technology for peaceful purposes and its role in addressing global challenges such as climate change and sustainable development."

The statement stressed the importance of international cooperation in addressing these challenges, and highlighted Kuwait's commitment to promoting peaceful uses of nuclear energy.

Kuwait's backing to the IAEA comes as the United Nations agency faces pressure from some countries to reform its governance and increase transparency.

The agency has been criticized for its role in overseeing Iran's nuclear program, and some countries have called for a review of its activities.

Kuwait reiterated its support for the IAEA's work in promoting nuclear energy for peaceful purposes, and called for a continued dialogue on the agency's role and mandate.

"Kuwait renews its backing to the IAEA's Sustainable Development Initiative," the ministry said in a statement. "We believe in the importance of nuclear technology for peaceful purposes and its role in addressing global challenges such as climate change and sustainable development."

The statement stressed the importance of international cooperation in addressing these challenges, and highlighted Kuwait's commitment to promoting peaceful uses of nuclear energy.

Kuwait's backing to the IAEA comes as the United Nations agency faces pressure from some countries to reform its governance and increase transparency.

The agency has been criticized for its role in overseeing Iran's nuclear program, and some countries have called for a review of its activities.

Kuwait reiterated its support for the IAEA's work in promoting nuclear energy for peaceful purposes, and called for a continued dialogue on the agency's role and mandate.

"Kuwait renews its backing to the IAEA's Sustainable Development Initiative," the ministry said in a statement. "We believe in the importance of nuclear technology for peaceful purposes and its role in addressing global challenges such as climate change and sustainable development."

The statement stressed the importance of international cooperation in addressing these challenges, and highlighted Kuwait's commitment to promoting peaceful uses of nuclear energy.

Kuwait's backing to the IAEA comes as the United Nations agency faces pressure from some countries to reform its governance and increase transparency.

The agency has been criticized for its role in overseeing Iran's nuclear program, and some countries have called for a review of its activities.

Kuwait reiterated its support for the IAEA's work in promoting nuclear energy for peaceful purposes, and called for a continued dialogue on the agency's role and mandate.