UK sets out proposals for EU citizens' rights

LONDON, March 2 (Reuters) - Britain's new Prime Minister Theresa May has offered in talks with the European Union that EU citizens granted rights under the European Convention on Human Rights will be able to stay in the country even if they lose their jobs, study or seek work after withdrawing from the European Union in March 2019, an official said on Wednesday.

Like those who arrive before Brexit, those EU citizens and their families will be able to stay indefinitely after five years of continuous residence, and for any reason they may choose.

However, they will be required to register with the authority where they first reside, and the government will have the ability to impose requirements, such as a language test, on those who are granted residence rights.

And relatives who wish to join them after Brexit will have the right to stay only if they have a special status, such as work or family ties, or if their family member is an EU citizen.

The EU's new executive arm, the European Commission, must now begin negotiations with Britain on a treaty to provide legal guarantees for EU citizens in Britain and their families, the official said.

May's top aide said the EU's aim was to maintain the status quo for EU citizens already in Britain, as well as ensure a smooth transition for EU citizens already in Britain, as well as ensure a smooth transition for EU citizens living in Britain and their families.

The EU is expected to negotiate a number of issues, including the rights of EU citizens already in Britain, the rights of EU citizens after Brexit, and the rights of EU citizens after Brexit.

Malaysia on fire: Hot weather to hit state

The Malaysian government has declared a state of emergency due to the extreme heatwave affecting the country.

A state of emergency has been declared across the entire state of Sabah, which is one of the states most severely affected by the heatwave. The emergency measures include restrictions on outdoor activities, mandatory use of air conditioning, and a ban on the sale of bottled water.

Over a thousand firefighters and emergency personnel are deployed across the state, with hundreds of water tankers and helicopters on standby to provide much-needed relief.

The government has also urged residents to stay indoors whenever possible and to conserve water by limiting non-essential uses.

The heatwave, which has been linked to global warming and climate change, has led to widespread water shortage across the state, with many communities experiencing a lack of water supply.

The state of emergency is expected to remain in place for at least a month, with the government monitoring the situation closely and making necessary adjustments as required.

India okays historic law to jail traffickers for life

CHENNAI, India, March 1, (AP)—India’s cabinet approved a tough new law last year which could jail human traffickers for life, a minister said today.

The law, which will be implemented in July, is the latest in a series of tough measures taken by the government to combat human trafficking.

The country has long been a major source of human trafficking, with millions of people, mainly from South Asia, being trafficked to the Middle East.

The new law will make it easier to prosecute traffickers and will allow for life sentences in cases where traffickers are found guilty of trafficking.

The law will also provide for the establishment of anti-trafficking cells in each state, which will be responsible for monitoring and investigating cases of human trafficking.

The cabinet today also approved a new bill to set up a National Human Rights Commission to look into cases of human trafficking.

The commission will have the power to investigate cases and recommend action to be taken against traffickers.

The cabinet also approved a budget of Rs 100 crore for the commission.

Antarctica climate change laboratory

B.L. Du Bois, Geregere, Antarctica March 1. (AP) — A decade ago, a thick layer of ice on Antarctica's King George Island was slowly melting. Now the rocky landscape is lush with vegetation, and scientists say it is a victim of a lab experiment for climate change.

"That the opportunity to come here was a 15-year period, and even within those years, we've seen changes. And we're talking about changes brought about by climate change," the director of the Chilean Antarctic Institute (INACH), Marisol Leyva, told AFP.

"Observers can now see "reeds" that were not present five or 10 years ago, and that is direct evidence of the shrinking of these glaciers and loss of mass," he said.

"Every 26 months, we are able to measure the scientific world, the presence of species change together; new conditions have also sparked hope for a warming planet." Pacifico Pizarro, a biotechnology researcher from the University of Chile, said in a statement that this finding "has an impact on the climate change." And it has implications for the fight against global warming, he said.

"We could transfer a gene for these plant and animal life, to make them more resistant to climate change." Pizarro told AFP.

Scientists also fear the effect of warming on the rest of the world. According to NASA's National Snow and Ice Data Center, the world's ice sheets are and continue to be a significant factor in terms of climate change. "They supply nutrients to the rest of the ecosystem," she said. "We could transfer a gene linked to the increased number of species in the same ecosystem.

Lebanese soda radioactive cylinder:

A metal cylinder containing a "radioactive substance" has been found buried in a beach near Beirut’s outskirts, Lebanese authorities said Wednesday.

"We are looking into the cause of the contamination, but we have no immediate results," said Nelson Valdivia, a professor at American University of Beirut.

"The radioactive substance is of a category B or C, so the affected area is very small," he said.

Launched into the sea in 1991, the cylinder was part of a joint project between Lebanon and the United States to clean up the aftermath of the Chernobyl disaster.

The US Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) said in a statement the substance was a low-level radioactive material used in medical treatments.

The agency said "there is no evidence of significant hazardous effects to human health or the environment from the materials found in the cylinder."
The film includes representations of van Gogh’s most famous paintings such as “The Starry Night.”

Van Gogh, known for his bold colors and unique, vibrant style, is considered one of the most revolutionary painters of the 19th century. During the 55-minute long movie was a painstaking task. Each frame of van Gogh's style was perfect for the project. His paintings show all the details of his life—day-by-day, holidays, his house, his shoes, his dead body. Kobiela and Welchman told AFP about Sunday's Oscar ceremony in Los Angeles.

Even against the tight schedule read at the end of the first Oscar Sunday night, the night’s final moment should be one of high drama.

Usually by now, a convention favorite has emerged as the likely winner of the night’s final envelope. That to at least a front-runner among at least two potential winners. But not this year. Five films have been nominated at the night’s big award. “The Shape of Water,” “Three Billboards Outside Ebbing, Missouri,” “Get Out,” “Dunkirk,” and “Lady Bird” are the film academy’s 90th annual awards.

PARIS: Paris Fashion Week is continuous in the French capital. Themes from the natural world to the Roaring Twenties to the era of Glam Rock have been repeated. Here are some of the fall-winter 2018 highlights.

Lanvin

For his sophomore outing, designer Olivier Lapidus continued to lead Lanvin, which had the natural world, to the Roaring Twenties to the era of Glam Rock. Themes from Paris: "Graphic glam" meets "artful" were evoked, continuing the heady era’s revival on the Paris Fashion Week schedule out for the tours of celebrities, including by designing looks for the artwork for an album by Beyonce and directing an episode for the show "Che Guevara." The 43-year-old Italian, who was credited with reviving the Frenchest of hats is now also bonkers about berets. They are all bonkers about berets.

Nature was the creative starting point for Felipe Oliveira Baptista at Lacoste. Guests entered a nature paradise: a morning shine at the foot of a mountain, sketches of Paris — and all done in that shade of a plant dye that had been impressively stained on the fabric in the center of the catwalk. It was a nod to a major fashion innovation: the morning shine done during World War II. New York — and the fashion itself when the sun is up and the heat is down — was captured by association with the Pyrenean shepherd’s hat, which became the symbol of cool. A few other knits from the house created when Rene Lacoste was in the French capital. Themes from Nature were sometimes just distracting. Belts were sometimes just distracting.

The best looks came when Lapidus stuck to the house DNA. A frothy, generous cut. Lacoste. Baptista at Dries Van Noten continued to lead Lanvin. 3. Nice
The deep blue waters of the Cote d’Azur are the dramatic backdrop for elegant Nice. Breathe in the fresh Mediterranean air as you stroll the waterfront promenade, or get an eagle eye of the whole city from atop Castle Hill. The pedestrian-only Place Rossetti is the heart of the city, with a grand fountain, vibrant buildings, and the beautiful Saints-Peter’s cathedral giving it a provincial French feel.

4. Chamonix
As host of the first Winter Olympics in 1924, Chamonix will always have a place in the history books. Its main attractions are Mont Blanc (Western Europe’s tallest mountain) and the many ski areas that face the Chamonix Valley. Steep slopes and extreme weather conditions suit advanced skiers best, but there are also runs for beginners. Just make sure everyone in your party knows a groom circle from a black diamond. Oh, and another note for the history book-Pierce Brosnan was here filming a James Bond movie, The World Is Not Enough.

We have seen a change in the technology of cameras and its novelty and the speed of the pixels. Consumer photography is no longer either a thing of professional photographers, but a tool that is used to capture personal moments in the most objective, and more visible field of digital photography.

Professional and amateur photographers spend countless hours in the studio or on the set to get the perfect shots that will be used in their work. They may vary from capturing the essence of a scene or story, to creating a perfect portrait. The ability, speed, product quality, value, and customer satisfaction are the key elements that define the success of a photograph.

Facebook jobs service spreading to more countries

NEW YORK, March 1, (Agencies) Facebook on Wednesday announced that it is expanding to more countries, launching its jobs service globally after initially testing it in 40 countries as a "new stage of growth" for the company.

Since adding a jobs posting feature for businesses last year, the US. Facebook has enhanced it to allow users to connect with businesses, applications, scheduling interviews, and apply for jobs directly on the site.

"We’re really excited to see how people feel about having a service that can help them find work and connect with employers," Facebook’s vice-president Alan Bl� said in a statement released to the Associated Press.

"Facebook is expanding this feature to 49 countries, making it possible for people to find local jobs and could be created as part of Facebook’s broader push to help users connect with others.

"We believe that by connecting people, we can help bring the world closer together," Bl� said.

The expansion includes countries such as Indonesia, Mexico, and the Philippines, where Facebook has a large following and is seen as an important means of accessing information and social networks.

"People will be able to see jobs that are available in their area, and they will be able to apply for those jobs directly on Facebook," Bl� said.

The launch comes as Facebook faces scrutiny over its role in the spread of misinformation and its impact on users' mental health. The company has been under pressure to address concerns about the impact of its social networking platform on mental health and well-being.

"We are committed to providing a safe and healthy environment for everyone who uses Facebook," Bl� said.

"We are proud to be a part of this growing trend toward more inclusive and diverse job opportunities, and we look forward to seeing how people will use this tool to help connect with each other and promote their careers," he added.

Elderly care tech industry sees rapid growth

Sensors help smartphones keep eye on solo seniors

Seniors have come down in price, making them cost-effective for larger, less expensive to use than other monitoring systems in the home, said Voltaware chairman Sergey Vayyar presented a new sensor that relies on radio waves, which can “see” through walls to detect what is happening in other rooms.

"With cameras you would need several and they would have to be placed in a central location because it’s just one per household,” said Vayyar. "Valuable information like someone being found motionless or a situation that is critical might be lost if they are not a minute.

"Other sensors on the market don’t tell you if someone is sitting, or standing, or laying down — and if they are breathing. It would be impossible to detect heartbeats or blood pressure. They are not able to tell us if someone is important," he added.

"With our sensor it’s like having a personal nurse with you. It can tell if you are breathing, if you are sitting, standing, or laying down — and if you are breathing. It would be impossible to detect heartbeats or blood pressure. They are not able to tell us if someone is important," he added.

Exxon withdraws from Russia deal due to sanctions

The deal came under strain, with US sanctions forcing Exxon in 2014 to give up its stake in the Russian oilfield. The US government has been pressuring Exxon to divest itself of its Russian assets.

Exxon had sought approval from President Joe Biden to continue working at the Vostochno field, where it owns a 30% stake and has made a large discovery.

In March, Exxon chief executive Dylan Cantwell had said the company was still considering its options in Russia, but the company’s push had been met with resistance from US government officials.

The company had until March 31 to make a decision on its Russian operations, and any failure to do so could result in sanctions.

Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky has called for a full investigation into the matter and has said that “if Exxon is found guilty, they will pay for it.”

Exxon reportedly plans to pull out of Russia and focus on its operations in the United States and Asia.

Exxon’s decision comes as US sanctions on Russia have intensified, with President Biden announcing new penalties on Russian energy companies.

The sanctions are part of a broader effort by the Biden administration to punish Russia for its role in the crisis in Ukraine.

The EU has also imposed sanctions on Russian energy companies, with the UK and Canada following suit.

The sanctions are aimed at blocking the flow of money to Russian energy companies and cutting off their access to international markets.

Griezmann to Barcelona? By January, Barcelona’s La Liga title challenge had floundered and it was clear the Catalans could not maintain the scintillating form that helped them win La Liga and the Champions League. But now, in Barcelona’s re-ignited league campaign, there is optimism that the team can get back on track and challenge for the top spot.

Parisian international Griezmann has scored seven goals in his last two games, setting fire to league and Champions League. The Frenchman still has a long way to go before he can be considered one of the world’s top players, but his form this season has been impressive, helping Barca win the La Liga title and reach the Champions League final. Griezmann has scored seven goals in his last two games, including a hat-trick against Leganes.

Lionel Messi was named the best player in La Liga for the fourth consecutive season and is one of the main candidates to win the Ballon d’Or this year. He also scored a goal in the 4-0 win over Leganes in their last two games to nudge out of the top four. Barcelona are now one point clear of Real Madrid, who are in second place in the league.

Barcelona, March 1, (Agencies): Ernesto Valverde’s Barcelona are in second place in La Liga early this season, having dominated their opening six matches of the season. The Catalans have won four of their six matches so far, including a 2-0 win over Atletico Madrid in their last league game. They have also conceded just seven goals in those six matches, which is the fewest in the league.

Barcelona have won away at Barca since 2009, however, and so Stoner has often been the catalyst for Barcelona’s La Liga dominance. Barcelona have also been able to beat Ernesto Valverde’s side on their last two visits to the Camp Nou.

The Catalans were a Jiří Wágner in January while right-back Juan Foyth joined from Tottenham Hotspur. Barcelona have also been able to beat Ernesto Valverde’s side on their last two visits to the Camp Nou, with goals scored by Antoine Griezmann and Lionel Messi.

Argentine forward Lionel Messi is a key player for Barcelona and has scored 17 goals in La Liga so far this season. However, he faces a potential one-match ban after being sent off against Valencia in their last game, meaning he will miss their next match against Sevilla.

But, as they go into Sunday’s match, the Catalans can return to the top of the table if they win. Valverde’s side is looking to continue their unbeaten run, which has seen them win six of their last seven league games.
