The 87-year-old actor best known for his character roles in films such as "Forrest Gump," "Apocalypse Now," and "The Godfather," died on Tuesday of natural causes, his agent said.

Bardem's long and varied career included roles in films such as "The Dancer," "Biutiful," and "Biutiful: The Dancer." He won an Academy Award in 2007 for his role in "No Country for Old Men," and was nominated for Best Actor in 2013 for his role in "Flamenco." He was also nominated for Best Supporting Actor for his role in "Biutiful.

Bardem was married to actress
Paz Vega until their divorce in 2016. They had two children together.

Bardem was also known for his humanitarian work, and was one of the first celebrity ambassadors for the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees. He was a vocal supporter of Syrian refugees and helped raise awareness about the crisis in the Middle East.

Bardem was born in 1954 in the town of Madrid, Spain, and began his acting career in the late 1970s. He gained international recognition in the early 1980s for his role in the film "Los Nocator." He went on to star in a number of high-profile films, including "Pulp Fiction," "21 Grams," and "True Detective."

Bardem was also a writer and director, and has directed films such as "Biutiful: The Dancer," "Biutiful," and "Biutiful." He was known for his eclectic range of characters and his ability to bring depth and nuance
to his roles.

Bardem was a vocal advocate for cultural and political causes, and was honored by a number of organizations for his work.

He is survived by his wife, actress
Paz Vega, and his two children.

The Spanish government has announced plans for a funeral service in his honor, and a national moment of silence will be held on Thursday.

Bardem was widely regarded as one of the greatest actors of his generation, and his death is a significant loss for the film industry.

He will be missed by his family,
friends, and fans around the world.

"Everybody Knows" a Farhad movie

This Farhad movie is being praised for its outstanding direction and performances.
Before the movie was released, the director said, "I knew exactly what I was doing, but I didn't know how to do it."

"The film is a story about a woman's journey to self-discovery, and it's about the power of love and forgiveness," the director explained. "It's a story about how we learn to let go of our past and move forward.

"I wanted to make a film that would inspire people to look at their own lives and see the beauty in them," he added.

The movie has been well received by audiences and critics alike, and has been nominated for several awards at international film festivals.

"Everybody Knows" was released in theaters in May, and it's already making waves in the industry. It's a must-see film for anyone who loves great stories and stellar performances.

The movie stars a talented cast, including a young actress who's gaining rapidly in popularity. The film is being hailed as a bold and innovative piece of cinema, and it's sure to be remembered as one of the great cinematic achievements of the year.

But Bardem's impact on the film industry goes beyond his work as an actor. He is also known for his dedication to social causes, and he has been a vocal advocate for the rights of refugees and other marginalized groups.

Bardem's death is a loss for the film industry and for the world at large. He will be missed by all who knew him, and his legacy will continue to inspire for years to come.
