In a press interview with a Saudi-based "Al-Rajul Magazine", Al-Ghanim expressed adoration for the late Amir Sheikh Jaber Al-Ahmad Al-Sabah, describing him as one of the most excellent personalities in the history of Kuwait, stressing that logic played a vital role in the development of Kuwait.

He declared Kuwaiti businesspersons have contributed immensely to make Kuwait what it is today. He pointed out that the businesspersons initiated consolidation of democracy in Kuwait basically to organize their relationship, indicating "they were those who chose Al-Sabah Dynasty to become the ruling family and stood solidly behind the family until date".

He stated the businesspersons served as the major source of funding for the state in the pre-oil discovery era, and counted himself lucky with his marriage to Professor Faiza Al-Kharafi, because she was committed to an ideal upbringing and education of the children. He said the wife built a strong academic background for the children to the point that they became successful in their chosen fields. He cited Marzouq Al-Ghanim who's the youngest National Assembly Speaker, in addition to his siblings, who are strong in business administration.

Al-Ghanim described Saudi Arabia as the fortress repelling dangers from all directions in the Arabian Gulf, seizing the opportunity to remember the heroic role the Kingdom played during the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait. He stressed that cordial relationship between Kuwait and Saudi Arabia dates back to the era of the founding fathers King Abdul-Aziz and Mubarak Al-Sabah, adding "the tie remains as strong as ever and impossible to be polluted".
