Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) FM’s meeting in Riyadh

The GCC foreign ministers met in Riyadh on Monday in preparation for the 40th summit of the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) scheduled for Tuesday. The GCC is a regional political and economic union of six Arab states: Bahrain, Kuwait, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, and the United Arab Emirates.

The meeting, held in preparation for the 40th summit of the GCC, included discussions on regional and international developments. The ministers reviewed recent regional and international developments and reviewed the situation in the region, particularly in Yemen, where the GCC has been heavily involved in the conflict.

The ministers also discussed the situation in Syria and the need for a political solution to the conflict. They highlighted the need for the international community to support the efforts of the Syrian government and its allies in the fight against terrorism.

The meeting concluded with a statement expressing the ministers’ support for the efforts of the Syrian government and its allies in the fight against terrorism and their determination to work towards a political solution to the conflict.

KUWAIT CITY, Dec 9, (KUNA): Kuwait has a successful leading experience in the development field in Africa Continent, a Kuwaiti diplomat said on Sunday.

Kuwait Fund for Arab Economic Development (KFADB) has a proven success in Africa that instils the leadership’s interest in maintaining good relations with the Black Continent, he noted.

“Kuwait has long experience in managing development activities in Africa, in addition to its contribution in several other activities,” he said.

KFADB, he went on to say, has become a major partner in development projects in Africa, especially in the Gulf region and MENA countries, and it would continue to support the development projects in the region.

Prime Minister Sheikh Sabah Ahmed Al-Sabah congratulated the organizers of the Africa Day ceremony organized by the Kuwaiti Fund for Arab Economic Development.

He expressed his hope for the organizers to contribute in developing and activating the role of the Gulf countries in the African Union.

He went on to wish the King of Bahrain the best for the health and prosperity of the country.

Prime Minister Sheikh Sabah Ahmed Al-Sabah also extended his congratulations to the President of the African Union and the people of the continent.

He wished them well and that the upcoming GCC Summit be held in Saudi Arabia.

In a press release, he said it will result in decisions that will push forward the Gulf reconciliation and promote the GCC bloc.

KFADB’s decision to spend millions of dollars for the upcoming GCC Summit was keen to take part in the decision-making process, he added.

KFADB has recently threatened to carry out several other activities,” he said.

Kuwaiti ‘continue’ its efforts in protecting human rights: officials

Kuwait today, Dec 10, 2019 (KUNA): The human rights topic in general and the rights of foreign workers in particular occupy a large part of Kuwaiti government strategies.

Consulting with the celebration of the International Human Rights Day, which falls on Dec 10 annually, Kuwaiti officials reiterated on Monday the continuation of local efforts to protect human rights, in the belief that the realization of the principles of equality, non-discrimination and human dignity is a key factor in establishing and developing human rights laws.

Kuwait has been an active partner in protecting human rights, and besides adopting several measures on the international level, it has also been building up its own national system for human rights.

The Kuwaiti Government has made it a priority to protect the rights of foreign workers, who form a significant part of the country’s workforce, especially in the construction and industries.

The Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs has implemented several initiatives to improve the working conditions of foreign workers, including the establishment of labor camps, the implementation of a biometric system, and the provision of legal aid for workers.

Meanwhile, the Kuwaiti Government has also taken steps to ensure the protection of women’s rights, including the adoption of a number of laws and regulations to combat violence against women.

The Kuwaiti Human Rights Commission has also been active in monitoring and reporting on human rights violations, and has called for greater international attention on the issue.

KUWAIT CITY, Dec 9: The fire that happened recently in the Shuwaikh Industrial Area which razed to the ground shops and stores on a vast area containing electric and electronic items worth thousands of dinars is believed to be a case of arson, reports Al-Ahباب daily.

According to the source CCTV footage from one of the cameras installed in the area indicated that a fire happened in one of the stores and the fire spread to the other stores until the fire department had to extinguish the fire and did not leave the area until he saw the fire had extinguished the store and then left the area.

The source said this video has been handed over to the Ministry of the Interior, which has begun investigations and is confident of arresting the involved and knows the reason why he committed this crime.

However, the source said the act of arson may have to do with insurance, because it is common knowledge that companies sign insurance contracts, especially mon knowledge that companies of arson may have to do something with the fire to demand compensations.

The Ministry of Interior has begun to examine the video and the source said that it is evident from the video clip that there is no sign of a terrorist attack.

Warren to woo Nevada union amid concerns on healthcare

LAS VEGAS, Dec 9 (RTTR): Democratic presidential candidate Elizabeth Warren will likely face a tough test here Monday night when she meets with Nevada’s largest union at its Las Vegas headquarters. Warren, who is one of the top four candidates in the Democratic Party’s nomination race, is scheduled to host the 60,000-member Culinary Workers Local 226. The union, which has nearly 40,000 members in Las Vegas, is close to Nevada’s Democratic Party. Warren’s appearance at Monday night’s event, to be followed by Senator Bernie Sanders and Senator Kamala Harris, is expected to help her gain support among Nevada’s labor community, which is crucial to her chances of winning the state’s eight electoral votes.

According to recent polls in Nevada and nationally, speculation is mounting that Warren, Sanders, and other candidates may be making a push to win the state. Nevada is one of the most competitive battlegrounds in the 2020 presidential race, and its 2019 primary is expected to be a key test for the Democratic candidates.

All three of the candidates are angling for the Nevada’s African-American vote. Warren has made a concerted effort to build relationships with Nevada’s African-American leaders, including the state’s Democratic Party chair. Warren is set to meet with Nevada’s largest union this week, and her campaign has been focused on building relationships with the state’s labor community.

But Warren’s appearance at Monday night’s event is expected to be a significant moment for her campaign, as the union is known for its influence in the state. The Culinary Workers Local 226, which represents workers in casinos, hotels, and bars, is known for its strong union organizing efforts and has a reputation for being a powerful force in Nevada politics.

Warren is expected to talk about her proposed universal healthcare plan, which she has said is the central issue of her campaign. She campaign has been built on a promise to make healthcare a fundamental right, and Warren has been a vocal advocate for universal healthcare for years.

The Nevada primary is scheduled for Feb. 21, and Warren will be hoping to build momentum in the state in the weeks leading up to the primary. She is expected to face tough competition from Sanders, who has been a strong contender in the Nevada Democratic caucuses in the past, and from other candidates who are also angling for the state’s vote.

Sudden volcano eruption kills five, several missing

WHAKATANE, New Zealand (RTRS) - At least five people were killed, up to 21 injured and several reported missing after a volcano on New Zealand's north island erupted, sending a column of ash skywards and interrupting ferries and flights to and from Auckland.

About 50 people, New Zealand's national airline said, had been on the island before the eruption - the island is not usually open to the public.

Police said 28 people were in the area at the time of the eruption.

The volcano, known as White Island, is a popular tourist attraction off the coast of New Zealand.

Disaster

"White Island has been a disaster waiting to happen for many years," said Prof. Alec Cawthorne, a marine geologist at the University of Otago's Antarctic Marine Science Centre.

"I think everyone is realistic. It's just too dangerous to allow the daily tours to continue.

"It's unlikely that anyone will be able to get in, and even if they do, it's going to be hopeless."

For years, Kim Cobb was the Indiana home of climate change activism. A professor at the University of Sheffield, she recently noticed that people come out to see a lecture than if it were given in person. "I feel real torn about that," said Indiana University’s Shahzeen Attari, who studies human behavior and climate change. "I don’t want to clip her wings."

"Especially when they spent their whole lives with their noses stuck up against data showing the problem," said Jonathan Foley, executive director of the climate solutions unit at Project Ironwood, which flies in a digital triple but still not stop flying because, he says, he needs to travel to keep his organization alive.

He calls flight the "the climate-moving event". "We can’t get enough people to come out to see a lecture than if it were given in person," said Kim Cobb, who flies but less than he used to, said moderation is still key. "I don’t want to clip her wings."

"I don’t want to clip her wings," said Attari’s research shows that audiences are turned off by social science. The Georgia Tech professor flew to a remote South Pacific atoll site along the Satilla River east of Woodbine. They declined to say how much節子国际, but it was growing more than six times as fast as the national average. The new property is also home to an estimated 2,000 gopher tortoises, whose burrows are home to a variety of birds and small mammals. "I think there are ways we can be more sustainable in how we travel," said Foley. "I don’t want to clip her wings."

LOS ANGELES — Dec. 9 (UPI) — 2019 has been an excellent year for films from Africa and Middle East, which have been represented in the various film festivals, and by ads in Spike Lee's "BlacKkKlansman," which won the Grand Prize at Cannes.

The "new wave" of Arab and African cinema includes a small group of films that explore their cultures' diverse facets — including scenes that are not only seen but which reach new audiences around the world. This is not only seen but which reach new audiences around the world. This is not seen in the world of cinema, which is not seen in the world of cinema.

Arab filmmakers have been pushing their boundaries and devising new ways to tell their stories, with a focus on exploring different cultures and perspectives.

LOS ANGELES — "Uncut Gems" is a sparkling comedy-drama written and directed by the Safdies, the same filmmakers behind "Good Time," which was nominated for best original screenplay at the Oscars in 2017.

Adam Sandler stars as Howard Ratner, a New York jewel thief who is obsessed with getting his hands on a rare diamond. As he tries to get his hands on the diamond, he becomes involved in a web of debt, crime, and deception.

The film is set in the New York City jewelry district and stars Sandler, who is known for his quirky and often exaggerated performances. The Safdies, who directed "Good Time," are known for their intense and raw style of filmmaking.

"Uncut Gems" is a tense and gripping film that keeps the audience on the edge of their seats throughout.

Mariona allaisca commonly known as Garka Vine or Ajos scabra is an evergreen tropical shrub that is native to the Azores, Madeira, and other islands of the Azores. It produces numerous fruits from the root of the plant and is a common species in the Mediterranean region. The garlic vine is marked so because it resembles garlic in both flavor and appearance. The garlic vine is used in cooking and can be used as an ingredient in various dishes, including traditional dishes in this region. It is thought to be native to the Azores and is cultivated for its edible properties.

Temperature: Hardy to 30°F (-1°C), avoid temperatures below 5°F. Water: Keep compost moist, but do not overwater.

Mariona allaisca is a hardy plant that can be used in various ways. It is commonly used as a ground cover, a rock garden plant, or a container plant. It can also be used as a cut flower and is known for its attractive white flowers. It is a low-maintenance plant that is easy to grow and is a great addition to any garden.

beaded curtain decor

Beaded curtains, no pop-up in the 90s, are back once again. There are beautiful designs that use this technique to create a unique look. Beaded curtains can be used on windows, or as room dividers. Hang them in a bathroom or kitchen to add a touch of elegance and mystery. With a few simple steps, you can make your own beaded curtains and create a unique atmosphere in any room.

Indoor gardening

Beaded curtains, so popular in the 60s, are back once again. We are heartbroken but understand we can't have a family room at all.

Bangladesh Embassy closure: [Page 13]

To make this an enjoyable and memorable occasion, Abraham and other committee members and their families, friends, and colleagues explored the beauty of Islamic arts and architecture. They were left awestruck by the complex geometric patterns, delicate calligraphy, and intricate designs. The exercise of opening our doors to explore the Muslim world was perceived as an essential part of globalization. The most important highlight of the evening was the Recycle Challenge, designed specifically to encourage each member of the audience to make efforts to help recycle waste. The event was a success, with the audience actively participating in the #myrecyclechallenge.

The weight of the plastic items (freezer, paper mulch, cardboard, and container) was 145 kilograms. The weight of the metal items (cans, aluminum, steel, etc.) was 40 kilograms. There were two of thirty people who came to the drop-off venue (the open ground behind Spencer’s Bakery – Salmiya).

The recycle challenge was conducted both a fun spot and a serious event. It made all the participants realize the importance of recycling and sustainability. It was a moment of true innovation, where they have become experts in taking the initiative and doing it confidently. It was a moment of realization, where they took something that was once considered as a waste, and they transformed it into an opportunity and beauty. The event was a catalyst for the audience to initiate a change, and it was vital to ensure that they make their mark on the energy economy.

Enthusiastic participants were eagerly and passionately building a truly sustainable community. The event was a success, with the audience actively participating in the #myrecyclechallenge. The weight of the paper items (notepads, books, and envelopes) was 250 kilograms. The weight of the metal items (cans, aluminum, steel, etc.) was 40 kilograms. German bund yields slide amid dovish comments – Oekonomi

The yield on German 10-year bonds fell on Wednesday, after Europe's central bank president indicated a rate cut is possible in the near future.

"We will do whatever it takes," European Central Bank President Christine Lagarde said at a news conference on Wednesday.

Lagarde's comments come after the ECB cut its main interest rate to -0.4% on December 11, 2019, in an effort to boost the struggling eurozone economy.

The yield on Germany’s 10-year sovereign bond, the benchmark yield of the eurozone, fell to -0.40% on Wednesday, from -0.39% the previous day.

KUWAIT CITY, Dec 9: As Platinum Sponsor, Kuwait Finance House (KFH), and in partnership with the Central Bank of Kuwait, organized the annual WIBC (Islamic Banking and Finance) Conference, for the prominent role it plays in the Islamic banking market.

The conference was held at the Radisson Blu Hotel, and it was attended by 40 representatives from national and international financial institutions. It is also the third time KFH has hosted the conference in its history. The event was held under the patronage of the Prime Minister.

KFH has also been the official energy transition sponsor of the conference, under the theme of "The Energy Transition: Reshaping the future of Energy and Finance", with the participation of APICORP, the International Development Institution.

Al-Nahedh explained that banks are developing a series of strategies to realize the energy transition, including bolstering efficiency, re-educating the business model of banks, while banks would also support setting targets and establishing independent climate change regulation that will provide assurance on the absence of future potential distortive institutional changes.

Bloomberg reports that the IMF, in combination with the OPEC+ producers, has reached a deal that was widely anticipated earlier this year. The agreement, which is expected to run through the end of this year, is aimed at boosting global crude prices and stabilizing the oil market. The deal will be reviewed in six months or if market conditions change significantly.

The agreement follows months of negotiations between OPEC members, led by Saudi Arabia and Russia, and non-OPEC producers, including the US, Canada, and Norway. The goal is to reduce global oil supplies by 1.2 million barrels per day (bpd) from January, which would bring total production cuts to 2.1 million bpd.

The deal is also designed to support the global economy as it recovers from the pandemic. Oil prices have fallen sharply since the start of the year,拖累了经济增长。The agreement is seen as a signal that policymakers are taking steps to ensure the health of the global economy.

The deal is expected to be welcomed by investors who have been concerned about the potential for a prolonged oil glut. OPEC+ producers have been cut back production in recent months, which has helped to support prices. The agreement is expected to bring additional support to the market.

The next step is to do a real assessment of what you’re giving now. Is what I’m doing now aligned with my values?

By Anwita Jayakumar

I may not come across as a surprise that millennials are passionate about giving back. Millennials are a generation that has so much to be grateful for. They have witnessed a decade-long run of inflationary philosophies that have benefited their parents, which has led to a generation that is more aware of giving back. Millennials are passionate about helping causes that are dear to their hearts. They give back to their communities and to the world.

But how much do you really know about giving? How much do you really know about the organization you support? Do you know how your donation is being used? Do you know where your donation is going? Do you know if your donation is making a difference?

The next step is to do a real assessment of what you’re giving now. Is what I’m doing now aligned with my values? How much do you really know about the organization you support? Do you know how your donation is being used? Do you know where your donation is going? Do you know if your donation is making a difference?

A new report released Wednesday has found that for many of us, the act of making the list gives us a sense of accomplishment. The process of giving allows us to prioritize our charitable donations, which is crucial in today’s economy.

The report, “Making the List: A Study of Giving,” was conducted by the National Christian Foundation (NCF), a charitable giving platform that helps individuals and families make a difference in their communities. The report found that millennials who are passionate about contributing to the greater good believe in supporting causes more than individual organizations, are likely to be influenced by peer networks when it comes to giving and want their approach to hiring and retention efforts to focus voters’ attention on the issues you really care about.

Take the example of Emily Thompson, a 25-year-old who works as a nurse at a hospital in New Hampshire. She used to give to a variety of organizations, but now she has a list of vetted organizations in her area that she donates to. She even started a gifting fund for her friends and family members to give to.

Another example is Richard Green, a 35-year-old who works as a software engineer. He used to donate a fixed percentage of his income to a few charities, but now he has a giving plan that helps him prioritize his charitable donations.

The report also found that millennials who are passionate about contributing to the greater good believe in supporting causes more than individual organizations, are likely to be influenced by peer networks when it comes to giving and want their approach to hiring and retention efforts to focus voters’ attention on the issues you really care about.

Some recruiters have overhauled their strategies and are now looking for candidates who are passionate about contributing to the greater good. They are more interested in candidates who are passionate about contributing to the greater good and are willing to put in the effort to find those candidates.
