Diwali is ‘the victory of light over darkness’, ‘the victory of good over evil’, and ‘the victory of knowledge over ignorance’. These are the themes to be celebrated with aplomb and enthusiasm during the festival. The festival signifies the triumph of light over darkness, of good over evil, and of knowledge over ignorance. It is celebrated by Hindus, Sikhs, and Jains to commemorate the victory of good over evil.

In Indian culture, the festival of Diwali is celebrated with great enthusiasm and zeal. The festival is marked by the lighting up of diyas (oil lamps) and candles, which symbolise the triumph of light over darkness. The festival also involves the exchange of sweets, gifts, and wishes.
