The church, located near the ancient city walls, is famed for its elaborately decorated mosaics. It dates to the 4th century, although the style dates back to the 10th century. The church was used as a mosque during the Ottoman era, before being turned into a museum in 1935.

Trump vision of US 'greatness'

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23 (AP) — Republicans will use a new phrase to portray the image of Donald Trump's presidency — a vision they hope will hold for the rest of the year as the party tries to keep the White House and both chambers of Congress.

Trump is looking to tie his campaign away from being just a convention speech and into the broader image of a candidate he calls ‘Reshaping nat’l conversation’ — one where Republicans highlight the actions of their leaders and the nation's top diplomat, Secretary of the Treasury Steven Mnuchin, to arrest at least nine people who disrupted our town and put our citizens at risk.

LAFAYETTE, La., Aug 23, (AP) — The mother of a young man who died by police gunfire is calling for an end to police shootings.

She said they were battling the flames, including on Saturday night to get the crowd peaceful, but violence later erupted when protesters marched through the suburbs of Aurora.

“Trayford Pellerin should be alive today,” said Alina Golonak, a protestor who said she was there.

“I feel kind of scared about it,” she said.

“We support people’s First Amendment rights,” said Myrick Mangum, a protestor who said he was there.

“It’s a shame that we had to deal with social justice issues and police violence,” said Myrick Mangum, a protestor who said he was there.

The protest was held in response to the death of Trayford Pellerin, who was killed by Lafayette police officers while they were responding to a call.

“Trayford Pellerin should be alive today,” said Natasha McLain, a protestor who said she was there.

“His death tragic.”

“I feel kind of scared about it,” she said.

Pellerin’s death prompted a crowd of people to wake up and protest against the latest fatal police shooting.

The protesters said they were treated like refugees, facing a global reckoning over police tactics that were leveled against them.

“Some officers to arrest at least nine people who disrupted our town and put our citizens at risk.”

No tear gas was deployed, he said.

“We don’t have an easy time living in this country, and that’s why we’re here today,” he said.

Belarusians have been protesting against President Alexander Lukashenko's rule for more than a week, calling for free and fair elections and the release of political prisoners. The protests have been met with brutal force by security forces, with at least 27 deaths and thousands injured. Lukashenko has ruled the country for 26 years and is facing increasing pressure from both abroad and within the country to step down.

The protests began in August after Lukashenko's re-election to a sixth term in office in a vote described by the opposition as a fraud. The demonstrations have spread across the country, with tens of thousands of people taking to the streets in cities and towns throughout Belarus.

Western leaders and human rights groups have called for the release of political prisoners and for free and fair elections. The United Nations has also expressed concern about the use of force by security forces.

Belarusian authorities have dismissed the protests as a foreign plot and have arrested hundreds of protesters. The government has also blocked access to social media platforms and news websites.

Lukashenko has dismissed the protests as a plots by foreign intelligence services to destabilize his government and has called for a referendum on the country's constitution.

Food trucks hit by virus find new suburban fodder

LYNNWOOD, Wash., Aug. 23, (AP)—On a warm summer night, two food trucks pulled into a wide-open alley in a hilltop neighborhood outside Seattle. The smell of grilled meat hung thick in the air, while the small crowd of people talked and laughed on both the drive-in and sidewalk seating.

“Saw this from our window and thought it would be a fun date,” said Yuli Shen, a customer who drove from Lynnwood.

Family-owned Yuli’s Bibimbap, a Korean rice dish, and Vegetarian Eats, a food truck specializing in vegan food, have been able to adapt to the current pandemic through Facebook events, he and other truckers began posting about their locations.

“I’m hoping that even if a vaccine doesn’t come, there will be some other solution,” Matt Geller, president of the National Food Truck Association, said.

It showed investment, consumer spending and trade all declined, signaling a deep washout of economic activity.

South Korea’s virus nears ‘spring levels’

SEOUL, South Korea, Aug 23 (AP) -- Beaches and church services have opened and baseball games were played in empty stadiums across South Korea, and experts there believe that the worst of the country’s coronavirus outbreak may be past. But as authorities’ relief measures are lifted, they are warning that the country needs to stay vigilant to prevent a resurgence.

With travel limited, Hollywood looks to ‘game changer’ tech

NEW YORK, Aug 23 (AP) - New LED video-wall technology used in making last year’s “The Lion King” and “The Mandalorian” series could become game-changing in Hollywood production during the pandemic.

Instead of shooting on location with full cast and crew and navigating stringent social-distancing requirements, it allows filmmakers on a studio stage to spread out individual scenes captured using a variety of techniques.

Unlike a traditional “green screen,” the actor can see the background and cinematographers can study perspectives and camera parallax to vary the location look like a location shoot.

While many of “The Mandalorian” scenes were filmed with the technology, Disney’s visual-effects chief, Matt Johnson, says it represents a “familiar evolution” in the Hollywood effects world, where new technologies have been embraced past years — changing the look of such films as “Jurassic Park” and “Star Wars”.

“We’re really taking advantage of the fact that there’s an Army veteran in our studio, and the Army veteran says to us, ‘I was a part of the 24th Infantry, and they had a hard time because they were in the jungle in the Philippines. And they were in an area where they were surrounded by the Filipinos, and it was really tough for them.’”

EDMONTON, Alberta, Aug 23, (AP): The top line for the Dallas Stars finally came to life, stepping up after a quick turnaround for five impressive starts in round two of the Western Conference playoffs.

Captain Jamie Benn, Alex Chiasson and Taylor Hall scored in the first period, and Dallas rolled to a 5-3 victory over the Colorado Avalanche on Saturday night.

"The effort was there," coach Rick Bowness said. "It's about taking those first steps and scoring the first goal of this particular game. Dallas played well and didn't let the Avalanche in on the goals.

"We were able to get a goal at the right time and it just kept on going," Bowness said.

HOCKEY

The Avalanche has dominated the Western Conference playoffs so far, with star players like Benn, Chiasson and Hall leading the way. Benn and Chiasson have been particularly effective, combining for 12 points in the first five games. Hall, who returned from a long injury layoff, has also been a key player.

The Avalanche's defense has been solid, with a 1.49 goals against average and .937 save percentage. Goaltender Philipp Grubauer has been exceptional, saving 93.7% of the shots he faced, showcasing his ability to restore the Stars' two-goal lead right within 3-2 five minutes into the second period. A nifty poke around the post by Jonathan Bamba's low shot.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Hall said that the Stars' defense has been playing exceptionally well, allowing just five goals in their first five games.
