Man catches Covid-19

Hong Kong: August 25 (KUNA) — University of Hong Kong research claims to have the world's first evidence of someone being reinfected with the virus that causes COVID-19.

Ceramic tests revealed that a 57-year-old man known as 'Case 386' from Hong Kong has gone back to Spain after a trip to Spain in June had a different version of the virus.

This was one of the confirmed patients who have been reinspected in the past 24 hours in Hong Kong. It is the first time that Hong Kong has been diagnosed with a second case of infection with the virus that causes COVID-19.

The patient had reported that he had contracted COVID-19 in Hong Kong in October last year and it was later confirmed he had recovered and had not been infected with the virus since then.

If they were not infected on the first occasion, it is not known if they have some protection against reinfection.

Further studies are needed to determine whether the patient has been reinfected.

It is not clear how long ago the new diagnosis was made as this was the first case of someone being reinfected with the virus that causes COVID-19, according to the case-also.

The case was previously diagnosed with COVID-19 in October last year and he was later confirmed he had recovered and had not been infected with the virus since then.

If they were not infected on the first occasion, it is not known if they have some protection against reinfection.

Further studies are needed to determine whether the patient has been reinfected.

Therefore, everyone who works in the public sector, and that includes the workers of the Police Association, are public employees, which means that they are subject to account and oversight in accordance with applicable laws.”

However, it was assumed that a financial account was available to hide the occurrence and ultimately lead to the possibility of not being told about the fraud.

He pointed out that “the manipu- lation of accounts was led to the embe- zlement of funds, and that the ruling decided that it serves as a deterrent, serving all employees in the Ministry of Interior, and that therefore the accused should be held criminally responsible for the embezzlement committed and for all the other actions committed.”

Iran scolds at demands beyond '15 nuke deal

Despite worldwide concern over the disease, Iran continues to make statements about the 2015 nuclear deal. According to the Islamic Republic, the deal is still in place, and the country is committed to its terms. The situation is complex, as Iran and other countries have different views on the deal.

TEHRAN, Iran, Aug 25, (AP) (Iran)

Iran won't accept any additional demands beyond commitments under the 2015 nuclear deal, the country's top nuclear official said Monday.

Rafael Grossi, the head of the International Atomic Energy Agency, arrived in Iran on Monday to press for access to sites where the Islamic Republic is suspected of having stored or used undeclared nuclear material. Grossi took over the IAEA after the sudden death of the agency's Director General, Yukiya Amano last year.

Grossi's visit comes as the U.S. is ramping up “snapback” U.N.核查 for Iran, which is actively violating the deal.

The IAEA, established to monitor Iran's nuclear program, recently discovered that Iran has stopped reportng data on its enrichment activities, putting the nuclear deal at risk.

Under the 2015 nuclear deal, Iran agreed to limit its enrichment activities and allow international inspectors into its nuclear facilities. However, the deal has been repeatedly violated by Iran, leading to international tensions.

Iran's top nuclear official, Mohamad Bagher Ghalibaf, demanded that the IAEA inspector work with their counterparts to ensure that the inspections are carried out in a professional manner.

The IAEA, on the other hand, has expressed concerns about Iran's cooperation and access to facilities.

This situation highlights the complexities of the Iran nuclear deal and the challenges in enforcing international agreements.

Gaza lockdown takes hold amid first virus cases in community

ARAB TIMES, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 26, 2020

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip, July 21

A 24-hour curfew took hold Tuesday in the Gaza Strip for the first time since the start of the global pandemic, as a day after the first cases of community transmission of the coronavirus were detected.

The recent cases were confirmed by the ministry of health on Monday, which said it found two cases of community transmission of the virus earlier in the day.

Health officials have been warning of the potential for community transmission, given the high number of travelers returning to the territory from the occupied Palestinian territories and the lack of testing capacity.

On Monday, authorities announced that four members of a family were confirmed positive for COVID-19. One member of the family had returned from Jordan, while the other three family members had returned from Egypt.

Since the start of the pandemic, more than 1,100 cases have been reported in the Gaza Strip, with 45 deaths. The lockdown comes as part of efforts to prevent further spread of the virus in the densely populated territory.

Iran's top nuclear official is visiting the Islamic Republic to press for access to sites where the country is suspected of having stored or used undeclared nuclear material.

Rafael Grossi, the head of the International Atomic Energy Agency, arrived in Iran on Monday to press for access to sites where the Islamic Republic is suspected of having stored or used undeclared nuclear material. Grossi took over the IAEA after the sudden death of the agency's Director General, Yukiya Amano last year.

Grossi's visit comes as the U.S. is ramping up “snapback” U.N.核查 for Iran, which is actively violating the deal.

The IAEA, established to monitor Iran's nuclear program, recently discovered that Iran has stopped reportng data on its enrichment activities, putting the nuclear deal at risk.

Under the 2015 nuclear deal, Iran agreed to limit its enrichment activities and allow international inspectors into its nuclear facilities. However, the deal has been repeatedly violated by Iran, leading to international tensions.

Iran's top nuclear official, Mohamad Bagher Ghalibaf, demanded that the IAEA inspector work with their counterparts to ensure that the inspections are carried out in a professional manner.

The IAEA, on the other hand, has expressed concerns about Iran's cooperation and access to facilities.

This situation highlights the complexities of the Iran nuclear deal and the challenges in enforcing international agreements.

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip, July 21

A 24-hour curfew took hold Tuesday in the Gaza Strip for the first time since the start of the global pandemic, as a day after the first cases of community transmission of the coronavirus were detected.

The recent cases were confirmed by the ministry of health on Monday, which said it found two cases of community transmission of the virus earlier in the day.

Health officials have been warning of the potential for community transmission, given the high number of travelers returning to the territory from the occupied Palestinian territories and the lack of testing capacity.

Trump convention blurs official business, politics

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25 (AP).—Plenty of platforms, plenty of politics and plenty of official business from politics—so even more so on Tuesday at the Republican National Convention. The tone was set by Trump himself in a speech Monday night that was born in part from the White House to the nation and it has only gotten worse with the news Tuesday that a Secret Service agent has tested positive for COVID-19. The agent had been on duty during the convention. The Secret Service has confirmed that the agent had been in contact with the president and his family, including Vice President and his wife. The agent has tested negative for COVID-19 since his initial positive test, but will remain in isolation until he is cleared to return to work. The convention plans to continue as scheduled, but the presence of the positive test case brings renewed attention to the risks of the ongoing pandemic and the need for continued caution and protocols to prevent the spread of the virus. The convention has been criticized for not following guidelines and for not requiring masks, even as some have tested positive for COVID-19 and others have been exposed to the virus. The convention is scheduled to conclude on Friday, and preparations are underway to ensure the safety and well-being of all attendees. The president's appearance at the convention has sparked controversy and raised questions about his conduct in the face of the pandemic, and his response to the crisis. Despite these challenges, the Republican Party remains determined to move forward with its plans for the convention, and to energize and unify the party ahead of the general election.

BANGKOK, Aug 25 (AP): Four prominent Thai “activists” were summoned to police stations Tuesday, the latest in a series of legal moves by the authorities to clamp down on protests that are the most serious challenge to the government of former generals, many people have grown wary of the Thai government’s ability to hold in check the kind of public protests that have been seen in other countries.

PARKS, Aug 25, (AP) - Facebook’s French subsidiary has agreed to pay 169 million euros ($180 million) in back taxes and penalties following a years-long tax dispute over alleged underreporting of revenue.

The agreement came after a long legal battle dating back to 2005, following an extensive audit of a decade of Facebook’s tax returns. The country’s tax authorities said the company’s “full-year” profits were understated by 85 percent, or 650 million euros, over the period.

The tax dispute has been a source of tension between Facebook and the French government, which has faced criticism for its treatment of large technology companies. The French government has called on Facebook and other digital giants to pay more taxes locally.

The agreement includes a provision for Facebook to pay a minimum tax of 3 percent on its annual profits in France, in line with the country’s national corporate tax rate of 33 percent.

The French government has long been critical of the way technology companies like Facebook and Google calculate and pay taxes, arguing that they can move profits around the world in ways that allow them to pay little or no tax in some countries.

Facebook said it was pleased to have reached a settlement that would allow it to focus on its work. The company said it was committed to being a good corporate citizen and paying its fair share of taxes.

The tax dispute has been part of a broader debate in France and other countries about how to tax digital companies.

China, US discuss economic coordination

BEIJING, Aug 25, (AP) US and Chinese trade envoys reached a阶段性 agreement on their countries’ economic policies during a phone meeting Tuesday, the Ministry of Commerce announced.

"The two sides had a constructive dialogue on strengthening the cooperation of the two countries and the implementation of the ‘Phase 1’ agreement,” a ministry statement said.

Under the ‘Phase 1’ agreement signed in January, both governments agreed to suspend additional tariffs on each other’s goods in a limited trade deal that China also included some purchases of American farm goods. Trump’s economic adviser, Larry Kudlow, told reporters last week the White House is satisfied with Beijing’s purchases so far.

The truce called for talks to be held after six months, but these were delayed due to the coronavirus pandemic. A meeting scheduled for last week was to be held online but was postponed.

The two governments have yet to announce plans for face-to-face talks in the next stage of negotiations.

The two governments have made some progress but remain divided on how to end the trade war, and experts say the two sides need more time to reach a comprehensive deal.

Australia blocks Krimp's $430m sale of business to Chinese

Australia’s government announced on Tuesday it would block Krimp Therapeutics’ $430 million (A$540 million) sale of its Australian business to a Chinese company in a deal it described as national security threat.

Prime Minister Scott Morrison said the government had made a decision to block the acquisition of Krimp Therapeutics by China-based Radiant Life Science, a subsidiary of China Three Gorges Corp.

“Krimp’s drugs have the potential to cure a range of serious diseases,” Morrison said in a statement.

“The sale of Krimp to a state-owned Chinese company poses a significant national security risk,” he said.

Krimp’s statement did not elaborate further.

Pearling and China Mengdéi Dai Co said they had not yet received a response to the sale, agreed to in November, from the Foreign Investment Review Board which had approved the deal.

“Given this approval has not been secured to date and is unlikely to be forthcoming in the short term, the parties have agreed to terminate the agreement,” Krimp said in a statement.

“Krimp announced its offer last May,” Morrison said.

“The sale of a company that has the potential to cure diseases of serious proportions as well as the potential to contribute to the national security of Australia cannot be allowed to go forward,” Morrison said.

Shares in Krimp rose 4.4% to A$1.49 on Monday, as hopes for a COVID-19 vaccine showed some sign of life.

Asian stocks were broadly higher on Tuesday as investors hung on to hopes for a coronavirus vaccine that could come under control with treatments being developed.

Tokyo opened slightly lower at 22,234.95, down 43.10 or 0.19%, to 22,181.85 at the time. A day earlier, stocks had dropped 0.86%.

Investors and analysts say the Tokyo market is vulnerable to any potential setbacks in the global vaccine race.

Apple CEO Tim Cook is fulfilling another Steve Jobs vision

Apple would resist exploring most projects so that we can really focus on the few that are truly important and meaningful to us.

Apple co-founder and CEO Steve Jobs died on Oct. 5, 2011, at a young age to the shock of the world. Tim Cook succeeded him as CEO of Apple the following day.

Cook marked his first anniversary as CEO of Apple’s Monday—the same day the company’s stock closed in the second spot for the reign, setting up the shares to begin falling on a sharply revised earnings report.

A hospital-at-home program can be a lifesaver for patients cloaked in the suffering of COVID-19. “The recommendations presented Monday follow the widespread belief that children under 12 are not considered as critical care patients. This is due to their lesser severity of virus and fewer complications,” said Miaa Vernet, Kazakhstan’s Ministry of Health’s emergency programs director. She still cautioned that some children need hospitalization for post-vaccination side effects and complications.

“The program is considered as an approach to children aged 6 to 11 that balances limited transmission of COVID-19 in schools and households, while maintaining activities in households and within educational settings,” said Parents. Health officials and experts have long debated the effectiveness of school closures, with some arguing that closing schools might have little impact on the spread of virus. Monday also noted lingering uncertainty on the effectiveness of school closures.

“Everyone agrees how important it is for children to study,” the medical officer said. “This is why they are being advised to follow educational programs online, with WHO calling for schools to reopen in phases to limit the spread of transmission and stabilize school-related infections. The recommendations by WHO on children’s education and community transmission of the virus before and after schools open should be considered as a model for how to reopen schools post-COVID-19.”

NEW YORK, Aug. 25, (AP) -- Grammy-winning rapper Roddy Ricch no longer performing at the MTV VMAs, Music Video Awards.

Ricch announced this month he would no longer perform at the VMAs, due to COVID complications, though some reports had suggested it was over money. The performance itself will still go on as planned.

The VMAs will air Sunday at 8 ET. The show was originally supposed to take place at the Barclays Center in Brooklyn, but will now be held outdoors at various venues in New York City in response to coronavirus concerns.

The update comes as MTV is planning to open up the broadcast for a larger audience, with plans to produce the show at both the Barclays Center and various locations around New York City to allow for a larger audience.

"The show is going to look different, but we'll still be giving a quality performance," said Ryan Ignatowski, MTV executive vice president of special events and live media. "I hope it can all go off next year as planned."

Taped video released almost two weeks ago, Balvin revealed he couldn’t perform at the event, but no details were provided. In a pre-recorded video message, Balvin said he would perform via video. With a story based on a children’s book with a candid telling of the author's long-awaited "Midnight Sun," she will deliver a "non-traditional work, due to COVID compliance issues at the last minute we had to work with," he said.

Although he signed with the Steelers, he was placed on injured reserve after the regular season and now will begin his second tenure with the team in training camp.

The Steelers signed D. J. Moore to a two-year, $6 million contract earlier this week, which will keep him under contract through the 2022 season.

The Steelers also re-signed longtime special teams player Sammie Coates to a one-year deal on Tuesday.

The team has made several moves this offseason, including signing free agents Cameron Heyward and Mike Tomlin.

Steelers head coach Mike Tomlin has said he expects to have a younger roster this year compared to last season.

The team will also be counting on the return of running back James Conner, who missed most of last season due to a knee injury.

The Steelers have a new quarterback in Ben Roethlisberger and a new coaching staff under Mike Tomlin.

Tomlin has emphasized a focus on conditioning and speed with the team, and he said he expects to see a lot of improvement from his players.

Tomlin said he’s excited for the season to begin and is looking forward to seeing how his team performs.
