Al-Shehhi delivers lecture on 'Palm Tree House'

Abdulaziz Saleh Al-Shehhi delivered a lecture on 'Palm Tree House in the Past' at the Yarmouk Cultural Centre on Monday evening as part of the Dar Al Athar Al Islamiyyah's weekly lecture series in its 25th cultural season.

He is the chairperson of the Historical Documents Center affiliated to the Architectural Heritage and Antiquities Department in Dubai Municipality. He holds a Masters Degree in Modern and Contemporary History and has several published articles on topics ranging from the history of canons in the UAE to the Ottoman-English conflict in the Arabian Gulf Region through the Ottoman documents.

The Palm Tree in the Emirates and the Arabian Gulf has its architecture style, touch, beauty and environment, which are in harmony with it to form a heritage painting that embodies the history of man in the Arabian Peninsula, and despite the simplicity of this construction, it has its styles and shapes. In his lecture, Al-Shehhi shared that there are summer and winter houses, and both of them have distinct features to deal with its surrounding environment in a manner that protects it from the scorching summer heat and freezing winter.

Through Al-Shehhi's interviews with builders of palm leaf houses in Dubai and the rest of the Emirates, he presented the audience ample material to document the building of such houses.
