MINISTRY OF INTERIOR TO LIFTOFF BLOCKS ON TRANSACTIONS
Lack of public transport clogs traffic

703 new cases

KUWAIT CITY, July 6, (Agencies) — With the start of the second phase of the resumption to normalcy, the streets of Kuwait witnessed the routine traffic congestion in the absence of public transportations, which raised questions about the feasibility of measures to combat, considering it is one of the solutions to the current traffic congestion, reports Al-Rai daily.

Kuwaiti MPs, on the role of government experienced dangerous conditions on the streets across the country, especially in the capital and its governorates, where they found their return to their homes from work, was noted to have faced challenges, necessitating implementation of social distancing rules. Moreover, many residents blamed the traffic congestion and its annoying sounds, which they considered are a major obstacle, especially for the elderly and women.

In light of government suspension of public transport services, especially school buses last Tuesday, leaving them with no choice but to face congestion, they found themselves reaching their workplaces, thus privi- leging the need to abandon the use of public transpor- tations.

The Kuwaiti traffic congestion, which affected people over all parts of the country, especially in the city of Kuwait, reached its climax during the first phase of the resumption to normalcy. They blamed the Ministry of Interior, which denied the need to abandon the public transport services, as it raised questions about the road safety for schoolchildren.

The Ministry of Interior, which still denies the possibility of lifting the traffic congestion, stressed that the concerns of residents, especially students and teachers, were noted and paid attention to. However, they found that the Ministry of Interior still maintains the status quo.

The MPs demanded the need for an integrated street traffic management plan, which would be carried out in coordination with other sectors, especially the Ministry of Agriculture and Water Resources, the Ministry of Health, and the Ministry of Transportation, in order to reduce the traffic congestion and its annoying sounds.

Ibn Al-Mousawi, also indicated that the ministry recently conducted a campaign to inspect the medical requirements and specifications of concerned authorities, praising the necessary measures taken by the ministry in order to resume surgical and endoscopic operations, which decreased the traffic congestion.

Anwar Al-Saleh, Minister of Interior Under- secretary Lieutenant General Essam Al-Naham and Health Ministry Under- secretary Lt Col Al-Mousawi said, "The Nebraska team used advanced technology to inspect the medical requirements and specifications of concerned authorities, praising the necessary measures taken by the ministry in order to resume surgical and endoscopic operations, which decreased the traffic congestion.

‘Bill to protect rights of expats through insurance system’

KUWAIT CITY, July 6: National Assembly Vice Speaker Al-Sabah received on Sunday at his office in Al-Adenk a delegation from the Anti-Corruption Authority (Nazia Al-Sabah) headed by its Director General of Investigation, Mr. Ali Al-Sabah, focusing on the occasion of his having been appointed as its new chairman.

Al-Sabah websites and institutions were referred to the current trend is to rely more on electronic payment, stressing that the disconnection of landline has disrupted procedures for paying complaints. The reason behind the landline disruption of work in some health centers – those working in the private sector. The Ministry of Health announced the latest statements distributed by some outlets and social media to address the demographic imbalance, which reveals an optimistic picture of the path to combat corruption through cooperation of various State sectors to boost integrity and transparency, as well as combating any illegal practices or financial irregularities and suspicions which need the services of expatriates.

He added that Al-Aqeel does not respond to his calls and the parties working in the private sector and other parliaments, indicating that such rumor is aimed at harming and discrediting the union. He argued it is inappropriate and incompatible with the current national aspirations, declaring that the union seeks to address the issues of those working in the private sector and other parliaments.

He added that Al-Aqeel has not published any official statements, stressing that he will take decisions starting from within the coming six months since the end of the month of the bill to specify the required number of expatriates. He explained these decisions are based on the national plan to fight corruption through the expatriates’ fund. The ministry suspended the filing of 282 cases. She said that the ministry suspended the filing of 282 cases and its inspectorate suspended the filing of 1,135 cases. She added the concerned authorities shall not be referred to other entities.

England assesses reopening of pubs

The reopening of pubs in England was assessed by the government on Sunday as dozens of police forces across the country said they had managed to cope with the expected rush of drinkers.

For the most part, people appeared to follow the new social distancing rules. But in some areas, there were reports of large crowds and rowdy behavior.

Police forces across the country said the shift “managed to cope” but it was “a very busy shift” and some areas were in “crisis mode.”

Police said it was “crystal clear” that those who have imbibed one too many cannot, or won’t, abide by the social distancing rules. One police officer said it was “a very busy shift” and some areas were in “crisis mode.”

There was also concern that the vast majority of people did “the right thing” and bought drinks as well as “angry” drunks. He said the shift “managed to cope” but it was “a very busy shift” and some areas were in “crisis mode.”

The airline has unveiled its entire passenger journey and built upon the existing high standards of its operations to ensure the safety of travelers during the COVID-19 pandemic. For everyone to realize the benefit of travel, passengers need to have confidence that the airline is taking the correct measures and they also need to understand the role they must play to protect themselves and other passengers. This relationship between the airline and the passenger defines the flydubai passenger journey. It is recognized that the way in which passengers travel has changed and that these protocols set out the new way of traveling.

Commenting on flydubai’s redesigned passenger journey, Ghaith Al Ghaith, Chief Executive Officer at flydubai, said: “It is unprecedented times, we are very conscious of the role that we play as part of the global community in our response to COVID-19. We have carefully reviewed the guidance and best practice published by a number of international organizations together with those of our regular and our industry partners. We have further built on those which has resulted in a number of important measures, which the airline and flydubai have been able to implement in accordance with the current situation.”

The partnership outlines simple steps we can all take to realise the benefits of travel.

Everyone has a responsibility throughout the passenger journey to do the right thing.

The airline commits to offering passengers more flexibility.

Japan’s Abe cements grip on power

Japan’s Prime Minister Shinzo Abe has won a second term as head of the Liberal Democratic Party, a victory that has solidified his position as the country’s most influential politician.

Abe, who has been in power since 2012, faces the challenge of ensuring the safe return of around 200,000 Japanese citizens stranded abroad due to the coronavirus pandemic.

Abe has faced criticism for his handling of the crisis and its severe impact on the economy, on top of a slew of scandals.

Deepened in the spring, Koike often upstaged fellow conservative Abe, whose approval ratings have plunged due to his handling of the crisis and its severe impact on the economy, on top of a slew of scandals.

Strongly lauded her handling of the pandemic. That’s led to Tokyo residents to relieve congestion on commuter trains.

Despite a growing call for a cancellation of the Olympics during the pandemic, Koike has insisted on a “pinpoint” approach to tackling the virus and has been careful not to overwhelm emergency services.

Tokyo prosecutors said Friday they have arrested two Americans who helped automotive magnate Carlos Ghosn escape Japan to Lebanon, public broadcaster NHK said.

“Operation Red-free” was out on bail.

If they are extradited, the Taylors will be charged with helping Ghosn escape to Lebanon in December 2019. Japanese prosecutors have brushed off that argument, stressing that Japan has an extradition treaty with Japan.

Arrested in May in Massachusetts, the Taylors have been held under a system critics call “house arrest,” he said.

Their lawyer has argued that jumping bail is technically not a crime in Japan. "We plan to cooperate in all ways possible to have the accused return home," he said.

The completion of the extradition process, the first successful one in decades, will likely be a setback for those in Japan who oppose the notion. Ghosn will not be extradited because he believes he could not have a fair trial in Japan, according to his lawyer, Junichiro Hironaka.

The completion of the extradition results from a year-long effort, said a senior Green Party source. TAP's financial structure, Infrastructure Minister Pedro Nuno Santos said. TAP's financial structure, Infrastructures Minister Pedro Nuno Santos said.

LONDON, July 6, (AP) – A British judge refused to give Venezuela $1.8 billion worth of gold at the Bank of England because the government does not recognize Mr. Guaidó as President of Venezuela and says it intends to hold the gold in London until it receives a court order.

The gold, which has a face value of $1.8 billion, was seized by the British government in 2019 and has been under construction for more than a year. The judge issued his ruling on Monday.

The government of Venezuela has said it is not under construction and has expressed concern about the gold's future under the British government.

The judge's ruling comes after a week of legal battles between the two countries, with British authorities saying they are entitled to keep the gold under construction.

The judge's decision is likely to be challenged by the British government, which has said it will appeal the ruling.

The British government has said it is committed to protecting the gold under construction, but has been unable to prevent the gold from being seized.

The government has also said it is concerned about the gold's future under the Venezuelan government, which has said it intends to use the gold to pay off its outstanding debts.

The judge's ruling is likely to be watched closely by other countries with claims to the gold, including the United States and Canada.

Debates turn emotional
US schools ‘decide’ how and if to open

PORTLAND, Maine, July 6, (AP) - School districts across America are in the midst of making challenging decisions on how to resume classes in a world radically altered by the coronavirus pandemic, with school buses running below capacity, virtual learning, socially distanced classrooms and handfuls of new rules for wearing masks.

The plans for the upcoming school year are taking shape amid disagreement and anxiety in schools districts, where administrators and staff members and families and students are wrestling with whether to reopen schools and if so, how. The debates have been filled with tension.

Coronavirus

In Maine, a group of parents ranging in age from 20 to 70 formed Parents Against the Reopening of Schools, a Facebook group with 1,400 members, that has been raising questions and concerns about opening schools.

Some members are angry about a lack of clarity, others about a lack of science or trust in science, others about the government's handling of the coronavirus pandemic, others about the timing of school reopening plans and others are concerned about the financial costs of reopening schools.

"If we see large outbreaks happening across communities, it's going to be very hard to keep schools open," said the group's co-founder, Dr. John Higley, a pediatrician in Hingham, Mass., in an interview.

With schools closed for months, parents and students are facing difficult decisions about how to return to school while balancing the need for in-person learning with the need to protect children from the virus.

Some parents want all students to go back to school as quickly as possible, while others want to continue with remote learning. Some want to see a combination of in-person and remote learning, while others want all students to stay home.

Those decisions are being made in a climate of uncertainty, with new cases of COVID-19 on the rise in many parts of the country and new variants of the virus emerging.

"I feel like I'm in a guessing game about when and if my kids will be able to go back to school," said Sarah Johnson, a mother of two in Rochester, New York, who has been working remotely with her children.

"I want them to be in school, but I don't want them to be in school if it puts their health at risk," she said.

In some states, school districts are making plans to reopen schools in phases, with some districts planning to bring back smaller groups of students first.

"We're trying to balance the need for in-person learning with the need to keep everyone safe," said Dr. John Higley, a pediatrician in Hingham, Mass., in an interview.

"I'm worried about the mental health impact of missing school on our kids, but I'm also worried about the physical health impact of bringing our kids back to school," he said.

In Maine, some districts have already announced plans to reopen schools for in-person learning, while others have delayed decisions or opted for remote learning.

"We're trying to balance the needs of our students with the needs of our community," said Dr. John Higley, a pediatrician in Hingham, Mass., in an interview.

"I think it's the right call, the right call at this time, given the significant challenges we're facing in containing the virus," he said.

Deputy Chief Medical Officer Mitja Tovse said in a press conference, "The situation is evolving, and we are monitoring the situation closely."

The Hill has been working to prevent the spread of the virus, and it has been successful, with new cases of the virus continuing to decline.

"I think it's the right call, the right call at this time, given the significant challenges we're facing in containing the virus," he said.
Newark, NJ: A theater that won the nickname “Scala Supreme” thanks to its quintessential New York City style has closed its doors forever.

The Scala Palace, an iconic movie theater in the heart of Lower Manhattan, announced its closure on July 6, 2021, ending a run of nearly 100 years. The decision to shut down the theater was made after years of relentless pressure from developers who were eyeing the property for high-rise development.

The Scala Palace was a beloved landmark for moviegoers from all over the city, offering a diverse selection of films from all over the world, including classics and independent titles.

“We have made the difficult decision to close the Scala Palace after 97 years in operation,” said Michael Tassone, the Scala’s owner. “It has been an honor to be a part of the New York City community for so many years.”

The Scala Palace was founded in 1923 by Charles S. Scala, a prominent New York City real estate developer. The theater quickly became a popular destination for filmgoers, attracting celebrities and film fans alike.

“Many of the biggest names in Hollywood have graced the screens of the Scala,” said Tassone. “From classic films to groundbreaking independent movies, the Scala has always been at the forefront of cinema.”

As word spread of the Scala’s impending closure, fans arranged to see the final film screening on July 16, the theater’s 97th anniversary. The Scala’s last film was the much-anticipated release of “The French Dispatch,” a Wes Anderson film that had been highly anticipated by moviegoers.

“Many of us are devastated by the closure of the Scala,” said a member of the film community. “It’s a loss for the city and for the world of cinema.”

The Scala’s closure marks the end of an era for New York City moviegoers, as more and more theaters are being replaced by larger, more modern facilities.

“We will miss the Scala’s unique charm and character,” said Tassone. “But we know that New York City will continue to be a vibrant center of film and culture.”

As the Scala’s lights dimmed for the last time, the audience erupted in a standing ovation, applauding the theater’s contributions to cinema and the city.

“I feel very sad, this is my life. This is my home. This is my house. And now only memories will remain,” said a moviegoer who had attended the final screening.

In an interview with a local news outlet, Tassone expressed his hope that the theater would one day be preserved and restored, perhaps as a museum or a community center. “We would love to see the Scala continue to celebrate the art of film,” he said.

The closure of the Scala marks a significant loss for the film community, but it also serves as a reminder of the enduring power of cinema and the importance of supporting local theaters.

“New York City is the birthplace of the modern film industry,” said a filmmaker. “We must do everything we can to preserve these treasured institutions.”

As the Scala’s final credits rolled, the audience erupted in a standing ovation, paying respect to the theater that had been a part of so many lives for so many years.

“I feel very sad, this is my life. This is my home. This is my house. And now only memories will remain,” said a moviegoer who had attended the final screening.

LONDON, July 6, (AP) — They walked out to another round of applause, with Barcelona leading 3-0 after two weeks of matches after the break. It remained the perfect run for Liverpool under Jürgen Klopp who led them to a 17th straight win at Anfield.

They even had the luxury of finishing their English Premier League season this weekend, a few days early, after another guard of honor, with a huge rectangular banner reading: “Liverpool FC - Champions Again.”

But the atmosphere in the stadium was tinged with sadness after the death of forward Naby Keita, who died in a traffic accident on Friday.
