UAE’s Amal rockets toward Mars

By Dr Abdullah Al-Sanad and Al-Jabri, also NCCAL Chair, and Al-Jabri, also NCCAL Chair,

The UAE launched its first satellite into space, named “Amal”, which means “Hope” in Arabic.

Amal was sent into orbit on a seven-month journey to Mars, kicking off the Arab world’s first interplanetary mission.

His Highness the Prime Minister Sheikh Mubarak bin Hamad Al-Khalifa congratulated the team of engineers on the launch.

The probe was sent into a 127-day orbit around the Earth before being sent toward Mars last week.

At the space center in Dubai, people watching the launch were welcomed by the Ushs, their chopped and chopped, with one message to the other:

“Wishing you success and success to the people of the UAE.”

The probe was launched from the Tanegashima Space Center aboard a Mitsubishi H-IIA rocket.

The liftoff of the Mars orbiter was 6:58 am (2158 GMT Sunday) after being assembled at the Emirates Space Agency’s headquarters.

The launch comes 12 years after the UAE announced its space program.

A new wave of corruption has swept through Kuwait, according to a source. The source indicated that the malpractices have led to the smuggling of large sums of money, which has caused the Kuwaiti government to lose billions of dinars. The source added that the authorities have failed to stop the corruption, which has continued for many years.

The source reiterated that the Kuwaiti government has attempted to address the issue of corruption, but its efforts have not been effective. The source alleged that the government has been influenced by the interests of certain individuals and groups, which have hindered its ability to tackle the corruption problem. The source emphasized that the Kuwaiti government has failed to take decisive action against the corrupt officials, and instead has allowed them to continue their illicit activities.

The source concluded that the situation in Kuwait is dire and requires immediate attention. The source called for the Kuwaiti government to take bold and decisive measures to address the corruption problem, and to hold the corrupt officials accountable for their actions. The source emphasized that the Kuwaiti people have a right to live in a country that is free from corruption, and that the government has a responsibility to protect the interests of its citizens.

Real estate market not greatly affected by Covid19: report

General elections in 2020, reports Al-Seyassah daily.

The board of the Legislative Commis- sion, Ministry of Interior, and the National Assembly approved the bill on Sunday, the day the KPC (the Kuwaiti Parliament) has completed its work and said the report will be ad- opted at the National Assembly for what the commission called ‘to take appropriate action, dealing at the lowest possible stages, without delay’. The sources revealed that the committee has notified many viola- tions and observations recorded in the corporation during the past financial years, as a result of which many employees have noticed violations and many specialized citizens have been deprived of the opportunity to work in the field.

The sources emphasized that the board of the KPC and its members and staff are not free from violations and mis-representations of the entire field, but the law and regulations that give many violations, and the lack of proper inspection and supervision. The sources stressed the respon- sibility is now with the National As- sembly, which is required to vote on the report. The sources added, the General Assembly and Prime Minister, President of the KPC (Al-Abdullah Al-Madlaf) has been called on to increase the number of employees and other violations observed in governance and other areas.

Tehran-Baghdad ties won't be shaken: Zarif

Court halts death sentence

BAGHDAD, July 20, (AP): Iraq's judiciary on Sunday stressed that Iran-Iraq relations won't be "shaken" after the Iraqi police minister's planned visit this week to Saudi Arabia, Iran's regional neighbor.

Several hours after Mohammed Alwahaibi visited his counterparts in the Gulf, three mortars struck near the U.S. Embassy in the heavily fortified Green Zone in Baghdad on Sunday, according to security officials. The attacks are among dozens of mortar and rocket attacks Iraq has witnessed as tensions escalate in the region.

"Iran has good relations with Iraq and will not be "shaken" ahead of Zarif's visit." Alwahaibi said on Sunday in a statement that the Iraqi police minister's visit to Saudi Arabia was the first visit of a senior police officer from the Islamic Republic of Iran to the kingdom.

"I hope that Zarif's visit will be the start of the normalization of relations between the two nations and that it will lead to the opening of a regional channel of dialogue between the countries of the region." the statement added.

Meanwhile, Iran suspended the negotiations on the example of the UN nuclear inspector in the Karbala region on Monday, which was the last day of its diplomatic mission in Iraq. The mission was closed down after Iran informed Saudi Arabia that it would resume the talks with the UN inspector in Karbala.

The two diplomats discussed the possibility of opening a new channel of dialogue between the two nations, which would lead to the opening of a regional channel of dialogue between the countries of the region.

"Iraq seeks to assert its balanced position in the region," al-Kadhimi, a day before the premier was killed, tweeted during the meeting with Zarif.

"Iraq's relationship with Iran is more important than any other country in the region," he said.

"The two countries have a lot to offer each other, including economic cooperation, mutual defense, and cultural exchange. It is essential to maintain this relationship, especially in light of the ongoing crises in the region." he added.

The U.S. has blamed Kataib Hezbollah for a string of rocket and mortar attacks in Iraq and Syria, which it says have been "generated by Iran." The group's leader, Abu Mahdi al-Muhandis, has also been killed in the recent attacks.

"Several of our officials have been killed or injured in the recent attacks," a U.S. official said. "We will continue to press for the accountability of the responsible parties." he added.

"The demonstration showed the Iraqi people's determination to protect their country from outside interference," the health ministry said.

"The demonstrations have been a source of hope for a new era of prosperity and stability in Iraq," the ministry added.

"We will continue to work with the international community to achieve a sustainable development in Iraq," the ministry concluded.
WASHINGTON, June 30, (AP): President Donald Trump is refusing to publicly commit to accepting the results of the upcoming White House elections, which American citizens will vote in on Nov. 3, 2020. This decision comes weeks before the 2016 vote, as both candidates refused to publicly commit to accepting the results of Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg’s nomination. The Friday announcement is “to publicly commit to accepting the results of the upcoming White House elections,” White House spokesman Hogan Gidley said. The Biden campaign responded: “The American people will decide the election. And the United States government is perfectly capable of settling outstanding disputes out of state courts.”

“Trust (Joe Biden) is built into the core of his character,” said Nick Ayers, a political consultant and strategist who worked closely with Trump campaign manager Brad Parscale during the 2016 election cycle, when a subcommittee of the California Republican Party selected him as its new campaign manager last month.

Pakistan faces a surge in COVID-19 cases, surpassing the peak recorded last spring. The latest spike is attributed to the highly transmissible Delta variant. Over 800,000 new infections were reported in the past week, with hospitals in some areas struggling to cope. The government has imposed new restrictions to curb the spread, including a ban on large gatherings and the closure of non-essential businesses. However, compliance is a challenge due to economic pressures. Health officials are urging caution among the public and calling for sustained efforts in vaccination and adherence to health guidelines.

Barra took over as CEO of General Motors in 2014. Crank out vehicles that people want to buy is one of the lessons learned about maybe the third shift at a factory in Wenzhou, China. The reason was that clients were sometimes confused and not sure what to do. The customer service team would explain the procedure and keep the environment safe for all employees.

Instead of worrying about making life easier for their own teams, many businesses are now focusing on helping others. For example, if your state department of education is planning a school visit, you might need to use alternatives such as video calls or virtual tours to ensure that the visit is accessible for everyone.

The full story behind loans and lending for students is more complex since Mary Barra took over. We believe we do a very strong job here in terms of our allocation of unexpected students, that could lead to unreasonably high costs and a lack of consumer protection. (AP)

The full story behind loans and lending for students is more complex since Mary Barra took over. We believe we do a very strong job here in terms of our allocation of unexpected students, that could lead to unreasonably high costs and a lack of consumer protection. (AP)

And for many of them, that won’t be affordable.

But don’t assume that because you borrowed a $37,200 loan that you won’t be able to go to school. The reason was that clients were sometimes confused and not sure what to do. The customer service team would explain the procedure and keep the environment safe for all employees.
Developers cancel long-delayed, $8b Atlantic Coast Pipeline

NEW YORK, July 20, 2020 (AP): Bank of America Corp. reported a second-quarter profit of $3.1 billion, or 74 cents a share, in the same period a year earlier. This file photo shows two Dominion Energy buildings in downtown Richmond, Virginia. The developers of the Atlantic Coast Pipeline announced that they are canceling the multi-state natural gas project, citing delays and increased costs. The pipeline would have transported natural gas from west Virginia through North Carolina and Georgia to South Carolina. Opponents also questioned whether the pipeline could be built in time for a fall – stunned American's labor unions. The project’s opponents, who lauded the cancellation, said it would “show that our country is ready to think critically about its energy future.”

FDA okays COVID test for pooled sample use

WASHINGTON, July 20, 2020 (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration has given emergency approval for a new virus test that allows up to 10 samples to be mixed together, speeding up the process of testing for COVID-19.

The test, made by Quest Diagnostics, can be used in laboratories to expand testing capacity in states with limited supply. It’s designed primarily for large facilities, like hospitals or schools, that test a large number of people, but it could also be used in small labs.

The FDA said Monday that it received the emergency authorization to use the test. The agency described the test as a "significant step forward in making tests widely available to all who need them, especially in settings were there are limited resources.

Afghanistan’s health care system risks collapsing

Families step in to care for patients

The number of confirmed infections worldwide has passed 12 million. As the virus spreads, families are increasingly stepping in to care for their infected relatives, causing a strain on the health system in many countries.

In Afghanistan, where the health system has been overwhelmed by the pandemic, families are stepping in to care for patients who have tested positive for the virus. The country's health minister, Ferozuddin FEROZUDDIN, has said that the number of fatalities is likely to increase as the health system struggles to handle the growing number of cases.

A health worker gives a polio vaccine to a child in Karachi, Pakistan, July 20, 2020. Polio is an acute paralyzing disease that affects primarily children under the age of five. Although the virus is common in many parts of the world, the virus is transmitted primarily through the mouth by the faecal-oral route, and can also be spread by contaminated water. The disease can be prevented by the polio vaccine. The vaccine is given as part of a National Polio Immunization Day (NPI) campaign. The campaign targets children aged one to two years. In the past few years, Pakistan has made significant progress in reducing the spread of polio, with the country being declared polio-free in 2016. However, outbreaks continue to occur in remote areas, and the virus is still present in some parts of the world.

In the worst-case scenario, experts say the virus could become even more transmissible, with the potential to spread rapidly around the world. The pandemic has already caused significant economic damage, with many countries struggling to pay bills and salaries.

Experts say the only way to prevent the spread of COVID-19 is through widespread testing and contact tracing. However, many countries lack the resources to do this, and the pandemic is spreading faster than the testing capacity can keep up.

Home learning hard in rural, poor Africa

KAMPALA, Uganda, July 20, (AP): Lessons via radio or mother in the Kuwadzana suburb of Zimbabwe’s capital, Harare, are helping some of the country’s 1.8 million primary school students keep studying while schools remain closed because of the coronavirus pandemic. But they fall far behind and possibly drop out of school for good. It is an all-too-common consequence of the global pandemic.

“I think education now is more of an emergency than the health crisis,” said Dr. Mary Garett Nakamazile, a former U.N. official who heads a Uganda-based group of tutors called Corazon. “I think the government is yet to realize the potential of the radio to help the children who are off school.”

Uganda has the largest number of out-of-school children in Africa, at 8.4 million. But rising food and health costs have made it even harder for families to afford school fees.

In the capital, Kampala, and other urban areas, schools remain open, but many have been closed by a lack of reliable electricity. Many government schools do not have the means to pay for electricity, and even those who do have the funds often do not have the ability to access electricity.

Nakamazile, a former U.N. official who heads a Uganda-based group of tutors called Corazon, said the government needs to ensure that children have access to the radio and other learning materials and that they are not left behind.

“Education is the only way for children to have a chance in life,” she said. “We need to make sure that children have access to learning materials and that they are not left behind.”

Support

With the help of outside groups, some African governments and organizations are working to ensure that all children have access to education, even in remote areas. In Zimbabwe, for example, the government has distributed 10 million radios and over 130,000 solar-powered TV sets, but those numbers are far from enough to reach all children.

The development research institute noted that school dropout rates may depend on existing social realities and preferences, and sometimes clean water and sanitation. School closures in rural areas in eastern Africa were linked to the spread of the Ebola virus and other diseases.

The government of Zimbabwe has faced criticism from teachers and parents alike, with many calling for more support and resources to help the country’s education system.

In Uganda, the Ministry of Education and Sports has announced plans to launch a national digital library to provide free access to learning materials for all students.

The government has also announced plans to distribute millions of free masks to students and teachers to help prevent the spread of the virus.

In this picture, sunlight is obscuring the comet’s nucleus, which produces tails of cometary dust and gas, creating nearly circular streaks that are easy to spot in the sky. COLUMBIA, SC: ‘We wanted to find a way to actually continue to play live’

Forsooth: Coronavirus brings Shakespeare to Vermont backyards

Variety

BURLINGTON, Vt. July 28, (AP) – On an idle summer evening not far from the shores of Lake Champlain, the internal notes of William Shakespeare’s Fools are born to a professional – for an audience of 3.

Jane Neumann of the Vermont Shakespeare Festival throws herself into the role of Helenka in “A Midsummer Night’s Dream” noting the vagaries of the heart. Her husband John Nagle follows, performing Jason’s foolery. Simply put: “All the world’s a stage.”

Shakespeare casts in the audience – a Burlington couple, their son and three of their middle school aged sibling friends, who took a break from bicycling – through a program established after COVID-19 forced the festival to cancel its summer season.

So Neumann, Nagle and about a dozen other actors have performed about 30 times, sometimes in backyards (usually socially distanced). The show is free and anyone can attend, via Zoom or in the open. It is all for charity.

“Instead of having to say yes and no, we now have to say there’s nothing we can do today except things that are virtual” online, we wanted to do something actually connecting people,” Neumann said after the recent Burlington performance. “Theatre is always an opportunity to have conversation, dialogue, connection, joy, problem solving activities.”

The festival had planned to present “The Merry Wives of Windsor” in its summer 2020 production. The show was postponed for researchers, the performance had been scheduled and the venue (the Barn) then was virus excepting the world.

Festival officials pushed “Merry Wives” to 2021, but they wanted to find a way to give it to the community, especially in uncertain times. Their solution Shakespeare in the Year, shown here as Read Your Yard. “The idea is just a single person going solo to a park, where they dress in their own costume, read a few lines Shakespeare monologues or monologues as a way of connecting in a live, face-to-face, final yard.”

Performance

To operate a performance, aspiring auditors go to the Vermont Shakespeare website and choose from among a dozen Shakespeare solos. Under the Shakespeare website’s “Romantic and Rail” the site also offers a free, themed, daily line from “Romance and Rail” and “Fire and Ice”.

Anthriller that feels safe second time around

‘Fatal Affair’ retelling of ‘Fatal Attraction’

By Mark Kennedy

I’m no of a certain age, much of the new Netflix thriller “Fatal Affair” will be very familiar that it’s already a扎实 rendition of another, similarly named film – 1987’s “Fatal Attraction.”

Wouldn’t, that doesn’t mean this one – running a few bits and some larger, very worthy incremental a patch of paint and coloring in? When the kids 4 is also a bit of a warm-up for the cast to get back into the swing of things. This is a thriller that feels safe the second time around.

Both films share a DNA – a middle-aged man smitten with a woman. He’s a married man who stalks her. His lines are familiar. Then that lover goes on a folly predatory rampage. When that happens, then there is a body heat.

“Fatal Affair” scrubs the decks but not by much. McGregor, who is that adoring we’re looking for in a thriller, is cast as a businesswoman. She falls in love with a married man. Dugan is cast as the husband.

Dugan, who studied an Elle 20 years ago, is still smoking and works a harsh line in this guise. You wound up to be with a man who demonstrates you don’t have kids. They make out in one of those dirty in the bed, eating the midpoint and clean nightstand is an itchy monster, sports. They suffer at the top. There is no sign of resistance. Elle is a man who is driven myy, he is a clever ruff, we have to know.

There are some nice updates to the old story, especially the addition of ammunition and some curiosity longing to make things feel intimate. And the filmmaker has incorporated some old tech, namely an LP of that decades favorite “Forget Me Now,” which is now made entirely creepy.

If you recognize when Dugan appears about with some 20 minutes to go in the film, you are spot on. Did you expect that that would all be about Elle makes her marriage in a living room? Oh no. This will end in blood.

Just kidding not a lot – happy landings for all the main male characters. No, you are correct about the film. In fact, it makes much more sense now from memory like butter in that popcorn bowl. For the kids.

In September 2019, Deadline reported that Netflix had partnered with Hybrid Films with Peter Sid- wed directing the film project. Long, Omar Epps and Jeffrey Schenck would serve as producers on the film. In November 2019, it was announced J. Smith-Cameron would play the titular role. /n

This is a thriller about a woman who is stalked by an unstable acquaintance from her past. She is taken hostage. She is an example.

S.G. GOODMAN, "Old Time Feeling" (Verve)

S.G. Goodman's new album, "Old Time Feeling," is a nostalgic journey that celebrates classic styles and pays homage to the artists who shaped those sounds. Goodman's music is a direct descendant of the "Old Time Feeling," which he traces back to the early jazz and blues recordings of the early 20th century. With his unique take on these styles, Goodman explores the roots of American music and its enduring influence. His arrangements are masterful, incorporating a range of instruments and influences, from the simplicity of piano and guitar to the richness of horns and strings. "Old Time Feeling" is a testament to Goodman's deep understanding and reverence for the genre, and a reminder of the timeless appeal of these classic musical styles.

Quarataro wins Spanish Grand Prix as MotoGP resumes

It was the start of seven races in Spain in a reduced season that was originally scheduled to start in March. The second of the three races scheduled for this weekend will also run at the same weekend.

MotoGP class leader Fabio Quartararo of France is the only rider to have won one of the three races scheduled for this weekend, and he has won with a great victory in MotoGP.

Márquez, a six-time defending MotoGP champion, said on Monday that he expected the right recovery time is not yet known.

Márquez started out strong, building on his lead, but was unable to close the gap in the hectic final laps of the race. But he then lost his 2019 victory and turned in a strong performance in the same race.

TOWNSVILLE, Australia, July 20, (AP): Fabio Quartararo won his maiden race in MotoGP since Regis Laconi in 1999. It was the start of seven races in Spain in a reduced season that was originally scheduled to start in March. The second of the three races scheduled for this weekend will also run at the same weekend.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, July 26, (AP): Formula One champion Lewis Hamilton won the Hungarian Grand Prix on Friday for the eighth time equaling Michael Schumacher’s single-season record and take the championship lead.

Hamilton’s latest victory from pole position was as comfortable as the nearly 9-second margin over second-place Max Verstappen suggested.

The British driver’s 76th career win moved him just two behind the German great Schumacher’s F1 record of 91.

“Would have been so far-fetched that I could possibly come out on top today,” the driver, who also took pole position, said.

Verstappen had spun at the start.

The Dutch driver: “I don’t know how they did it but they looked on anxiously as mechanics retouched on the slick tires for damp track conditions, causing a flurry of activity.
