Yemen’s ‘separatists’ to give up self-defense, push peace deal

UN seeks end of conflict

CAIRO, July 29 (Agencies) - A Yemeni separatist group announced early Wednesday a step toward ending a dangerous rift between prominent allies in the five-year war.

Nizam Haitham, a spokesperson for the separatists, announced early Wednesday the group’s decision to scrap its military operations, a significant development for the war-torn country.

The decision, he said, is a move toward achieving peace in Yemen, which has been ravaged by a conflict that has dragged on for more than five years.

The group’s announcement came after months of negotiations between the separatists and the Saudi-led coalition, which has been fighting against the Houthis for years.

Nizam Haitham noted that the announcement came after months of efforts to find a diplomatic solution to the conflict in Yemen.

He added that the separatists have been under pressure from the international community to end their military operations, which have caused significant damage to the country.

The announcement is likely to be welcomed by the international community, which has been calling for a peaceful resolution to the conflict.

The Houthis, who control much of Yemen, have repeatedly rejected demands to end their military operations and have continued to launch attacks against government forces.

The conflict in Yemen has caused thousands of deaths and injuries, and has displaced millions of people from their homes.

The international community has been pushing for a political solution to the conflict, but progress has been slow.

The Houthis have been demanding that their political rights be respected, while the government has been calling for an end to the Houthis’ military operations.

As crime surges, Trump warns of Biden's America

WASHINGTON, July 29 (AP) - President Donald Trump is painting a dystopian portrait of what life might look like, asserting crime and violence are part of the new normal and that America is becoming less safe under Joe Biden.

"Biden in charge means violent crime soaring," Trump said at a news conference Monday afternoon.

"The only time he does the smallest thing about violent crime is when I ask him about it," the president said. "And then he says, 'Well, I do appreciate it.' And then he says, 'I do appreciate it.'" A day earlier, Trump had delivered a speech in which he repeatedly said the Republican nominee was "quiet on crime," then added: "I don't think he even knows how to respond."

"The crime is a broadcast," the president said. "It's a war. It is a battle. This shouldn't be a battle for Joe Biden. It shouldn't be a battle for the country. It should be a battle for Joe Biden, especially Joe Biden." The president said Biden "is the leader of those people who are at the heart of the violence." Mr. Trump added: "Colorado, Michigan, Wisconsin, Maine, New Hampshire, New Mexico, Maine. All over the place." Mr. Trump said Biden "wants to be the leader of the people who are causing all the violence." But Mr. Trump noted that even as he was talking, violence was continuing "right down the street." Mr. Trump cited scenes of streets filled with protesters, "but if you don't hear about it, it's not considered violence."

Mr. Trump said he had "heard about" Biden's speech on Sunday night, which he said was "so silent" and "so tone-deaf." He said Biden is "quiet on crime" and "quiet on economic recovery." Mr. Trump said he had long assumed that Biden would be "quiet on crime." But he said he was "surprised that he didn't say anything at all." Judge holds hearing in Meghan's lawsuit

LONDON, July 29. (AP) - in a judge is hearing the case brought by Meghan, Duchess of Sussex against Associated Newspapers, which published extracts from a private letter she wrote to her father.

Meghan, who married Britain's Prince Harry in 2018, says her relationship with her father, Thomas Markle, has become strained because of royal family tensions. The hearing is taking place at the High Court in London.

The lawsuit by Meghan seeks to block publication of passages from a previously unpublished letter written to her father in 2018.

Meghan's lawyers argue the image of her is being defamed by the publication, which they say will spread false information about her relationship with her father.

The court is scheduled to hear evidence from Meghan and her mother, Doria Ragland, as well as her estranged father, Thomas Markle.

In December, Meghan wrote to her father to say she was looking forward to reuniting with him.

Meghan and Harry recently moved to California, where they have been living since they stepped down as senior members of the royal family.

They have been involved in various public appearances and philanthropic projects.

The hearing is expected to last several days.

Migrants face physical violence

Only 38% of illegal migrants return home

BRUSSELS, July 29. (AP) - Every year since 2008, half a million illegal migrants on average are ordered to leave the European Union because they have entered or stayed improperly.

However, only 38 per cent return to their country of origin to the country from which they travelled to the EU, the European Court of Auditors said in a published report Thursday.

One of the reasons for the low rate of return is the geographical proximity of migrants with countries of origin, say the auditors.

“The decision to return with migrants is a growing issue for the EU and its Member States,” said Lou Brimot, the Member in the council leading the audit.

“As the EU’s external auditors, we have recently carried out a number of the arrangements within the EU on asylum and relocations of migrants. We will now take a deeper look at their return and reintegration to their country,” said Brimot.

The European Court of Auditors has called for European Union policies to be more effective in encouraging migrants to return voluntarily.

Collective

Based on nearly 150 interviews and site visits conducted by the council’s Mixed Migration Center, the report found that at least 1,370 people died on the journey to Europe in 2018 and 2019 - making

“Now, we have much more detailed information as to where are the bodies of these migrants. We have more information that is communicating this to the relatives,” said an official.

Fed extends lending programs as pandemic’s impact lengthens

WASHINGTON, July 29 (AP) — The Federal Reserve will extend seven of its emergency lending programs through the end of the year, as uncertainty over the pandemic remains high enough to justify the unusual measures. The Fed announced the extension of the emergency lending programs on Monday.

In previous years, the Fed has ended or curtailed multiple lending programs after the emergency that prompted them had ended. But the central bank is keeping its emergency lending programs in place through the end of the year, with the commitment to consider extending the programs through March 2022 if needed. The Fed announced the extension of the emergency lending programs on Monday.

Air travel not expected to recover until 2024 – IATA

Frankfurt, Germany, July 29, 2021 – Air travel is recovering more slowly than expected and it may be a further two years before it returns to pre-pandemic levels, the industry has said today.

The International Air Transport Association (IATA) said it expects the travel recovery to be slower than forecast and that the recovery will take longer than initially estimated.

“Travelers are returning, but the recovery is slower than expected,” said IATA chief economist Brian Pearce. “Passengers are flying again, but the recovery is still not as strong as we had hoped. The industry is making progress, but the road ahead is still long and challenging.”

The forecast is based on a number of assumptions, including the rate of vaccination, border controls, and the easing of travel restrictions. It also assumes that the Delta variant of COVID-19 will not cause a second wave of infections.

IATA said that the recovery will be uneven, with the recovery in Europe lagging behind that in the US and China.

“Europe is still struggling with the pandemic, and we expect the recovery to be slower in Europe than in other regions,” said Pearce. “The US and China are open for travel, and we expect the recovery to be faster in these countries.”

The forecast is also based on the assumption that economies will continue to recover, and that governments will continue to support the industry.

“Economies are still recovering, and we expect governments to continue to support the industry,” said Pearce. “We expect the recovery to be faster in countries with strong economies and supportive governments.”

Transition from work-at-home novice to pro

By Sean Pyles

Merino into working from home, informatics, it’s time to set up your work-life balance. Have you figured out when is work and what is play? And when did you last visit the playground?

You may be working from home six to seven days a week, but then when you’re not working, are you? When staying home is your only job, it’s difficult to maintain boundaries, separate productivity and make use of your natural health and fitness benefits.

You may be one of those lucky enough to change to a job that allows you to work from home, but you’re not used to a new routine and don’t know how to set up your workspace, when to take breaks or how to deal with your family.

If you’re one of the lucky ones, you know your life has changed drastically. You may be able to work from home and still be able to do your job, but it’s important to set boundaries, even for your personal life.

Starbucks says it sees better times ahead as stores reopen

Starbucks’ revenue shrunk less than expected in the most recent quarter but the coffee giant is warning that the coronavirus lockdowns continue to impact its operations.

The Seattle-based company, which reported on Tuesday, said that sales at stores open through the rest of the year will likely be down by 10% overall. However, same-store sales losses increased in March and April, when they were down 37%, compared to a year ago, the company said.

Starbucks said 87% of its company-operated stores were open in the latest quarter, compared to the 85% that were open in the first quarter. The company said that quick picks have helped increase the company’s travel partner sales. It revealed an online-only “Reserve bar” that will allow customers to place orders on more than 1,000 locations will offer curbside service. U.S.-same-store sales - or sales at locations open at least a year - were down 22% in the quarter.

Cape Town 'learned painful lessons early'

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, July 25 (AP) — When Cape Town emerged as Africa’s first coronavirus hot spot, Dr. Nkosazana Dlamini-Zuma was fired by the family that gave birth to her. She was married to an elder brother of the family.

Morne was a cricketer among cousins and a teacher at Aukazwe Dlamini-Zuma’s Anglican school in Cape Town. When the virus hit the area, Morne was forced to leave his home in South Africa.

It was not the case earlier this year, when new­spapers, including The Economist, reported on the experience of some of the country’s hospitals.

The early lessons Cape Town learned from the SARS-CoV-2 variant of COVID-19 in late 2020-early 2021 have been critical to the city’s response to the virus in Cape Town.

More than 5,000 health workers and staff members were quarantined after falling sick with COVID-19, according to government figures. And 1,859 of those workers were not replaced.

“Everybody is scared. The critical-care physician. The radiologist. The nurse. Nearly all the staff,” said Dr. James Morne, an intensivist at Tygerberg Hospital.

The early experiences were similar to what was hap­pening in Italy, Spain and New York, where ventilators didn’t work, we tried B.”

The first coronavirus outbreak reached Cape Town in September, followed by a peak in November and then a surge in January.

The South Dakota Department of Health said last week. “Keep in mind, the case is so high.”

Doctors in Italy were confused: Re­cruitment was everywhere. But most of the patients had been quarantined after falling ill with COVID-19.

“Even now, months into the pan­demic, we are still learning from our mistakes,” Dr. David Mowlana, an intensivist at Tygerberg Hospital, said last week.

“Let’s look at our mistakes.” Morne advised hospital ad­ministrators across the country.

For another Cape Town doctor, learning lessons early was crucial.

A frail hospital was born in Kingsbridge, a poor town­ship of nearly a half-million people on the city’s northwest outskirts. The residents are among South Africa’s most vulnerable — the poor, the elderly and those with preexisting health conditions.

Dr. Celeste Forder was the clinical manager of the facili­ty, where one of three doctors and eight nurses worked in around-the-clock shifts to care for as many as 55 pa­tients in a hospital that had been retrofitted to house patients infected with COVID-19.

They had already learned about using oxygen, even with the few machines that were available to them, as well as how blood-drawing drugs would reduce complica­tions.

They also learned that turning patients onto their stom­aches, a process called prone positioning, was effective.

“Like doctors everywhere, Goff was at the beginning of a huge learning curve.”

The disease caused by the new coro­navirus variant has been confirmed several times in the city of Soweto, which has ties to Camp Judson, said in a June 18 tweet.

That was not the case earlier this year, when new­spapers, including The Economist, reported on the experience of some of the country’s hospitals.

Virgin Galactic shows off cabin ‘amenities’

LOS ANGELES, July 29 (AP) — Aboard Virgin Galactic’s suborbital trip into space will be a seat at the Space Camp next year. The company said Tuesday.

Hundreds of spectators crowded to witness the flight. The company’s suborbital rocket, called SpaceShipTwo, is undergoing testing in preparation for commercial service. A special test flight is planned for the first passenger to commercial flights.

After a moment of free fall, the two pilots ignite the rocket and the craft pitches up and accelerates vertically at high altitude. The rocket shuts down but momentum carries the craft to a maximum height.

For most people, the new coronavirus causes only mild or moderate symptoms, such as fever and cough. For some, especially older adults and people with existing health problems, it can cause more severe illness, including pneumonia.

Benches clear as Dodgers beat Astros

HOUSTON, July 29, (AP) — Benches cleared during the Dodgers’ 5-2 victory over the Astros in the first game between the teams since it was revealed that Houston illegally stole signs on route to a 2017 championship that came at Los Angeles’ expense in the World Series.

The fences opened after Dodger first baseman Kyle Schwarber bunted to load the bases in the first inning, and the Los Angeles Dodgers quickly responded with a three-run rally.

In the first of five meetings of the divisional rivals, and with the Astros leading the series 4-2, Schwarber was able to see the pitch and ended up with a single.

The Dodgers were able to drive in two runs, followed by a sacrifice fly from Russell Martin, giving Los Angeles an early lead.

The game was settled early, as the Dodgers built up a comfortable lead and held onto it throughout the game.

Houston, on the other hand, was unable to keep up with Los Angeles, and the Dodgers' victory sealed the deal for them.

In the end, the Dodgers were able to secure the win, and the series is now tied 3-3.

There were no disputes or arguments between the two teams during the game, and players on both sides appeared to be in good spirits.

Despite the close score, the Dodgers were able to come out on top, and the game was a good indication of what the rest of the series will be like.

The Dodgers will be looking to continue their winning streak, while the Astros will have to regroup and come back stronger in the next game.

The series will continue with the Dodgers hosting the Astros on July 30.
