Day by Day

THE saying "whoever lives by deception dies of poverty" rings true for swindlers whose lives often lead to imprisonment, persecution, and legal proceedings. Those who resort to deception not only harm themselves but also corrupt their children and families. By feeding them ill-gotten gains, they subject their loved ones to a life built on lies, deceit, and falsehoods.

Eventually, the truth comes to light, and they face the consequences of their actions. Such individuals are met with disdain and condemnation from society .. Yet tomorrow is another day

'Amend Constitution'

Court to rule Sunday on 'disqualifications'

By Saeed Mahmoud Saleh and Jaber Al-Hamoud

Al-Seyassah/Arab Times Staff

KUWAIT CITY, March 21: The Court of Appeals has set a session on Sunday to rule on the disqualification cases of 2024 parliamentary election candidates Marzouq Al-Habini, Marzouq Al-Khalifa, Ahmed Mutee and Jaber Al-Muhailbi.

Earlier, the Administrative Court canceled the decision to disqualify Marzouq Al-Khalifa and Ahmed Mutee; thereby, putting their names back to the list of candidates for the upcoming parliamentary election.

The court rejected the appeal of Fifth

Constituency candidates Jaber Al-Muhailbi and Marzouq Al-Habini against the decision to remove them from the list of candidates

The court received electoral appeals from some candidates disqualified by the Ministry of Interior, demanding in their appeals to cancel the decision to disqualify them and re-register their candidacy in the electoral district in which they were registered.

This came after the ministry decided to disgualify some candidates for failing to fulfill one of the electoral conditions due to their conviction for the crime of participating in by-elections.

The ministry informed Ahmed Mutee, Jaber Al-Muhailbi, Marzouq Al-Habini, Marzouq Al-Khalifa, Sheikh Mishal Al-Malik, Mohammad Al-Juwaihil, Walid Al-Nasser, Mohammad Al-Azmi, Hani Hussein, Adel Al-Saeedi and Mubarak Trad about their disqualification; in addition to three other candidates who failed to complete the registration procedures.

Meanwhile, Fourth Constituency candidate Musaed Al-Qeraifa said the Constitution must be amended; because the State should not be managed according to the mentalities of the people in the 1960s, "considering we are in 2024."

In a podcast interview, Al-Qeraifa stressed that Kuwait is no longer a testing field for members of the Sabah Family to be appointed as prime ministers.

10 records set in China-Kuwait relations

By Zhang Jianwei Chinese Ambassador to Kuwait

March 22 this year marks the 53rd anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between China and Kuwait. Since the establishment of diplomatic ties, China-Kuwait relations have withstood the vicissitudes of the international landscape and enjoyed sound and steady growth, ensuring productive cooperation in various fields. Our bilateral relationship, always a pacesetter in China's exchange with other countries in the region, has played an exemplary role, creating many "firsts" and records.

I. Kuwait was the first among Gulf countries to send a senior delegation to visit the People's Republic of China (PRC). In February 1965, the late Amir of Kuwait Sheikh Jaber Al-Ahmad Al-Jaber Al-Sabah who was then Minister of Finance, Commerce and Industry led a delegation to the PRC. The senior delegation, the first from Kuwait and even from Gulf countries to visit the PRC, was given a warm reception by the Chinese side. The then Chinese leaders met with Sheikh Jaber during his visit when he stressed that Kuwait recognizes the PRC and supports the one-China principle. That visit, a prelude to official exchanges between China and Kuwait, paved the way for the establishment of diplomatic relations between the two nations several years later.

II. Kuwait was the first Gulf Arab country to establish diplomatic relations with the PRC. In March 1971, China and Kuwait announced the establishment of diplomatic relations, opening the door to friendly exchanges between Gulf Arab countries and China. In the same year, Kuwait voted in favor of China's return to the United Nations (UN). Over the years, Kuwait has been committed to the one-China principle, and China has been giving Kuwait firm support for its efforts to maintain national stability and explore a development path suited to its national conditions. Our two nations have always supported each other on issues involving our respective core interests and major concerns. After Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, China expressed firm opposition to it, and made utmost efforts in its capacity as a permanent member of the UN Security Council for the restoration of Kuwait's sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity. Following the end of the Gulf War, China has always supported firmly Kuwait's legitimate aspirations on legacy issues of the war and worked to promote the proper settlement of the relevant issues.

III. Kuwait has in China the largest diplomatic presence across the world. Kuwait is now represented by four diplomatic missions that include the embassy in Beijing and three general consulates in the cities of Guangzhou, Hong Kong and Shanghai. The size of its diplomatic representation in China attests to the significance of China-Kuwait relations and the breadth and depth of bilateral cooperation. IV. Kuwait was the first Arab state to offer and has made itself the Arab state offering the largest amount of government concessional loans to China. In 1982, the Kuwait Fund for Arab Economic Development (KFAED) started to offer China concessional loans. Over the past 40 years and more, it has granted concessional loans worth about 305 million Kuwait dinar in total to 40 projects in the areas of infrastructure, education, health, agriculture and environmental protection, making positive contributions to the development of local areas in China especially the central and western regions. Today, China has become the second largest source of foreign direct investment in Kuwait, while Kuwait continues to give China support on the rural revitalization strategy. This longstanding friendship is particularly precious to

V. Kuwait is the only GCC country where a Chinese medical team is stationed. As early as 1976, China began to dispatch a medical team to Kuwait. In the ensuing four decades and more, China has sent to Kuwait a total of 245 medical workers in 24 groups that have diagnosed and treated over 800,000 patients. China sending medical teams epitomizes bilateral cooperation on healthcare and demonstrates the special bonds of friendship between us. Facing the challenges posed by Covid-19, China and Kuwait have stood together and looked out for each other, as China dispatched a medical expert team to assist Kuwait and Kuwait donated medical supplies to China. Our joint efforts to beat the virus has left a splendid chapter in the annals of bilateral cooperation on health safety and healthcare.

VI. China has become the largest trading partner of Kuwait. China has remained the biggest trading partner of Kuwait for nine years in a row, meaning that economic and trade cooperation between the two sides has become and will continue to serve as an important anchor. In 2023, China-Kuwait trade volume reached 22.39 billion U.S. dollars, soaring more than 100 times over the early days of diplomatic ties. And China imported 24.53 million tons of crude oil from Kuwait, making itself the second largest crude oil importer of Kuwait. In addition to traditional trade of crude oil, bilateral trade has been on the upgrade, with a notable increase in China's export of machinery products and automobiles to Kuwait. As China's high-quality development is advancing at a faster pace, economic and trade cooperation between our two nations will embrace broader prospects.

'Bonus to be deposited around Eid'

KPC CEO confirms development of MoSA allocates KD1.5 million for disbursing 'rewards' to workers Durra field jointly with Saudi Arabia

KUWAIT CITY, March 21: Acting Undersecretary of the Ministry of Social Affairs Abdulaziz Sari announced that the Ministry of Finance has approved approximately 1.5 million dinars for disbursing rewards to eligible employees, matching the previous year's allocation, reports Al-Qabas daily.

Despite an increase in the ministry's overall workforce and those entitled to bonuses, efforts are underway to deposit the bonuses into the accounts of eligible individuals before or immediately after Eid al-Fitr.

In a press statement, Sari explained that annual evaluations for all ministry employees have been completed in accordance with the Civil Service Commission's guidelines.

These evaluations are based on job performance, with 70% attributed to ministry performance and 30% to bureau performance, verified through fingerprint attendance records. Efforts are being made to expedite the evaluation process for simple cases. Sari emphasized that rewards will only be granted to eligible employees who meet all disbursement criteria, including having worked a minimum of 180 days throughout the year.

The value of excellent work rewards varies according to job grade, with assistant agents receiving up to 2,000 dinars and department heads receiving up to 1,000 dinars. Employees must contact the Civil Service Commission for approval before receiving rewards for service-related positions.

Regarding automatic linking with the Service Bureau for attendance monitoring, Sari stated that the Ministry completed the process last year and is awaiting approval from Bureau officials.

This linkage facilitates monitoring attendance and implementing penalties for non-compliance, such as delay and sickness deductions. Additionally, the Ministry is awaiting approval from five government agencies to complete the automatic connection for disbursing social assistance conference organized by the agency, "Kuwait Oil Company (KOC) is planning to start work in an offshore oil area for the first time. It will seek assistance from major international oil companies as it aims to enhance its declining production capacity. We are looking forward to a new business model in the new maritime work area to attract global expertise. Kuwait currently produces less than three million barrels Sheikh Nawaf per day due to OPEC+ cuts, but it intends to increase its production to more than four million barrels per day compared to 2.4 million barrels per day in February.

Juha and mission impossible!

By Ahmad alsarraf

One of the Abbasid governors announced that whoever taught his favorite mule, which was then a 13-cylinder Volvo, to read and write, he would give him a thousand dinars, and if he failed, his head would be cut off.

Many idiots applied for the task, failed, and had their necks chopped off! But after a while, "Juha" advanced to the task, and re-this, that it was very difficult to seek help from the Ministry's employees and its army of brave engineers, the majority of whom were not "always creative," men or women, to carry out the task of supervising, even the least difficult and complex work.

It was therefore necessary for someone from "outside the Ministry" to hire for this work, even if temporarily, due to the need to move quickly, especially with the presence of a Sharia graduate

National Guard lauds Amir's HQ visit

Call to implement royal directives

KUWAIT CITY, March 21: Deputy Chief of the National Guard Sheikh Faisal Al-Nawaf recently presided over the meeting of the Supreme tenant

Sheikh Faisal

Sheikh Faisal Al-Nawaf affirmed that he is proud of the honorable visit of His Highness the Amir Sheikh Mishal Al-Ahmad Al-Jaber Al-Sabah, the Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces, to the National Guard General Presidency where he met with his sons – the leaders and officers -- during the holy month. This is an annual tradition that embodies the political leadership's interest in the military sector, he asserted.

He stressed that the lofty directives of His Highness the Amir during the visit are a beacon that lights the way and establishes firm rules and a road map for the continuation of the work and achievement in the National Guard. He confirmed that the National Guard draws lessons from such lofty directives to continue to play its role in maintaining national security and stability; while supporting the ministries of Defense and Interior, Kuwait Firefighting Force and State institutions, especially those of a strategic nature, under the wise leadership of His Highness the Amir.

He said he instructed the commanders and officers to implement the royal directives; follow up the implementation of action, modernization and development plans in all areas; go out to the field and follow the open-door policy in order to achieve the vision of the political leadership, and preserve the process of institutional excellence that always receives praise from His Highness the Amir.

He pointed out that Kuwait is working hard to increase the refining of crude oil in its three refineries to maximize its exports of the most profitable light oil, explaining that these refineries currently refine 1.4 million barrels per day, with expectations to raise it to 1.6 million barrels soon.

He said Al-Zour Refinery works with as much oil refining as possible. "We are trying to maximize the capacity of the refinery, while obtaining lower returns in the refining market. This means that we can increase Kuwaiti oil exports to achieve higher returns.

As for the Red Sea tensions, he indicated that KPC was forced to divert its shipments around the Cape of Good Hope due to the Red Sea attacks; while giving the naval crews of its tankers autonomy regarding sailing to the Red Sea.

211 nationalities pulled: The number of individuals whose nationality was withdrawn from March 4 till date (within two weeks) totaled 211, reports Al-Qabas daily quoting a reliable source.

The source revealed that the forged and dual nationalities files are currently on the table of the Supreme Committee for Citizenship and are subject to scrutiny in preparation for withdrawal after verifying suspicions.

The source explained that the withdrawal files are divided into these categories: counterfeit, fraud, deception in obtaining citizenship, dual nationalities, and non-Kuwaiti women who married Kuwaitis for the purpose of obtaining Kuwaiti citizenship and divorced immediately after their naturalization; that is, through the husband agreeing with the wife to divorce even before their marriage. He said those with dual nationalities can either give up or retain the Kuwaiti citizenship

The source added the Ministry of Interior received 407 reports about cases of fraud and dual nationalities after opening the hotline for receiving such reports, and they are currently being carefully studied and investigated to confirm suspicions before submitting them to the Supreme Committee for Citizenship for the necessary action.

The source pointed out that the citizenship withdrawal decisions are based on relevant decrees and the decision of the Supreme Committee for Citizenship, indicating that such decisions will be issued successively.

Appeal rejected: The Constitutional Court ruled not to accept the demand to halt the 2024 National Assembly elections, in which the plaintiff based the claim on the invalidity of the decree of necessity amending the electoral law, reports Al-Qabas daily.

Lawyer Saad Al-Lamie had filed an appeal and demanded that the elections be halted and that the invitation decree be invalidated due to the absence of a state of necessity and the unconstitutionality of restricting the exercise of the right to vote by adhering to Islamic law.

governor's palace, dragging the mule behind him, amidst the ridicule of the people of the city, and when they asked him about the secret of his madness, when he was known for his intelligence, he responded by saying that he asked the governor to first give him the thousand dinars, and give him ten years so that he could complete his mission!

Everyone laughed at his stupidity. How could a mule learn to read even after ten years? So Juha justified his behavior by saying that he would enjoy the money in the coming years, and then one of the following calamities would most likely occur: the mule would die, or the governor would die, or he would die!

I remembered that anecdote as I read about the Ministry of Public Works beginning to solve the problem of damaged roads and awarding contracts to maintain some residential areas to local companies.

I have no doubt in the good faith of the honorable Minister Noura Al-Mashaan, and in her sincerity. From my meeting with her, based on her generous request, I found in her the determination, the intention to work, and the courage to confront the problems.

She is qualified for the task, and it would not have been advisable to burden her with the "ministry" of the municipality. With all the corruption and concerns of the Ministry of Works, I hope with all my heart that she will return as a Minister of Works (only) in the new ministry

I told her in the meeting that it was necessary to speed up the awarding of contracts to local companies, as the idea of using foreign companies was completely ridiculous and impractical! I also told her, and she was aware of

at the head of a completely technical ministry (!!).

It seems that she was not convinced by my proposal, or did not obtain approvals. I learned from my sources that it is not possible to seek the help of professional and external parties to carry out the supervision process, for logistical and financial reasons, and this is understandable!

Consequently, the ministry's supervision of the contractors' work will be of a quality other than what it requested, which is consistent with logic, and this may result in the situation remaining as it is, and perhaps we will discover after a few years that the condition of the roads has returned to what it was, then the theory of the three possibilities that he developed will apply

Juha had this in mind when he pledged to teach the mule how to read! After five years, when the devastation begins to appear in public, who will remember who was responsible? We hope we are wrong, but we have learned from our experiences with the Ministry of Works to be careful when assessing the level of the Ministry's supervision!

I hope that Madam Minister will ask all contractors to place clear signs in various project sites, clearly showing the name of the implementing company, so that people will remember that it is the one that implemented the project, and the company will subsequently either be praised or cursed and this is a kind of indirect deterrence.

We also do not forget to extend our sincere thanks to Minister Noura Al-Mashaan for her success in overcoming all obstacles to ending the situation of the "Abdul Razzaq" road tunnel, which for years represented evidence of the devastation and destruction of the government administration!

We wish her success, and she deserves all the support and continuation of her "almost impossible" mission.

The discussion on the same topic will continue in tomorrow's article ...

Ex-MP acquitted in various charges

By Jaber Al-Humoud

Al-Seyassah/Arab Times Staff

KUWAIT CITY, March 21: The Court of Appeal has acquitted a former Member of Parliament (MP) of charges related to smuggling and money laundering amounting to 257 million dinars. The ruling also included a verdict for two Jordanians, sentencing them to 3 and 8 years in prison respectively, along with a fine of one million dinars.

The Public Prosecution had accused the defendants of engaging in money laundering, involving a substantial sum of a quarter-billion dinars. The accusation revolved around the deliberate possession and acquisition of funds known to be obtained from fraudulent activities. It was alleged that they collected these funds through various means, including depositing them into personal accounts and a company owned by the former MP.

The investigation revealed a complex network of financial transactions involving banking institutions, real estate companies, an engineering consulting office, and other entities owned by the primary defendant in Kuwaiti banks.

A DIGEST OF PUBLIC OPINION

Every citizen is a sentinel ... and the issue of hotline

"EVERY citizen is a sentinel' is a phrase that officials always repeat to us, and we have imbibed it since childhood, considering that the nation needs the cooperation of officials and citizens in order to preserve its stability, and its growth," columnist Iqbal Al-Ahmad wrote for Al-Qabas daily.

"We often feel this responsibility, considering that the 'citizen is a sentinel' in our daily life af-fairs. If I find water being wasted in a street or on a road, it is my responsibility to report this defect, and if I witness a traffic accident, then I must, from the fact that I am a "citizen sentinel." I contact the responsible party and Iqbal Al-Ahmad report this incident, and if a crime occurs in front of my eyes, it is my responsibility, considering that the "citizen is a sentinel," to go to the relevant authority and inform it and give my testimony there. All of these matters stem from the angle of true citizenship and loyalty to this nation.

"The Ministry of Interior's statement regarding the announcement of a hotline to report any case of fraud in citizenship sparked reactions, most of which are supportive and encouraging, because it is done within the framework of the law and responsibility.

"We all call on the Minister of Interior, for this sharp and resolute approach, and on His Highness the Prime Minister, as he is the one who bears responsibility for the difficult period of corruption that the country has reached, and we hope that this force will continue to deal with the citizenship file, which has been affected by a lot of corruption.

"Reporting anyone who has forged or obtained their citizenship illegally is extremely important and is based on clear legal justification.

"Reporting forgery is reporting betrayal of a country. Reporting forgery in citizenship is reporting the theft of the rights of Kuwaitis from people who facilitated this violation and this crime for many years, when law enforcement and accountability were relaxed and lax.

"Firmness has been the demand of the people of Kuwait for a long time and will continue, and the loud voices rejecting all measures to detect counterfeiters and hold them accountable are nothing but an expression of the state of panic that has struck those who have 'water in their mouths'. Perhaps some will retreat and take their steps backwards... as was happening before and this is extremely unfortunately.

"Today we are in the Kuwait of Al-Hazm ... the Kuwait of Sheikh Mishal Al-Ahmad Al-Sabah, the Kuwait of Sheikh Muhammad Sabah Al-Salem Al-Sabah. and the Kuwait of Sheikh Fahd Yousef Saud Al-Sabah -- the triangle on which we have pinned our hopes on them to rescue the nation from tampering and corruption which has continued unabatedly "Thank you, the Ministry of Interior, for your efforts to uphold the law ... regarding the citizenship fraud file, and the hotline will assist you in accordance with the law, without any inappropriate accusation."

"The most important goal is to reject intolerance and discrimination in all its sectarian, denominational, ethnic and regional forms. This requires the national education subject to instill in the souls of young people pride and pride in belonging to Kuwait only.

"I do not believe that the committee will achieve the goal of its formation, as what we all see of our youth's pride in origin, tribe, and sect, and the occurrence of quarrels and disputes between each other due to their different affiliations during the period of nominations and elections for the National Assembly, student councils, and sports matches, is a clear indication and a sure sign of the spread of the phenomenon of pride in belonging to several trends that are not It includes pride in belonging to the homeland and working for its benefit alone, which is why I do not believe that the "National Education" Committee will achieve its goal."

"The beginning of the repair phase... Everyone knows the extent of what happened in Kuwait over the past years. There is no room to discuss it, as it left negative effects and exhausting consequences," columnist Faisal Al-Jazzaf wrote for Al-Seyassah daily.

"However, when the steps of purification and reform began, voices of opposition surfaced. They do not want reform, as they rather pushed for the continuation of the situation as it was before. They benefited from such a situation and established a mechanism for breaking administrative and legal systems, and the subsequent corruption, plundering of State funds, and infringement on the rights of the country and the citizens.

"Today, we are all with His Highness the Amir, may Allah protect him. When the alarm bell rang, the path of purification and change was opened, and good signs began to repair what time had ruined.

"We also appeal to His Highness the Prime Minister for his efforts and meetings with specialized groups and public benefit associations to form technical and economic opinions. This will add a lot of information for His Highness, based on a comprehensive understanding of the general situation of the State.

"We also hope to accelerate the priorities for citizens, the most important of which is the livelihood aspect, which is a cornerstone. We hope these efforts will not stop. They should continue to open the naturalization files of the counterfeiters and those who facilitated this for them.

"We should not ignore the Bedouns issue, as it is a snowball that has grown over time. Its security repercussions are dangerous to national security. This is in addition to addressing the lopsided demographic structure and problems of expatriate workers, cutting off the exploitation of people, holding everyone who has a hand in this problem accountable, and taking the

84 violating election adverts dismantled

KUWAIT CITY, March 21: The Public Relations Department in Kuwait Municipality has announced the removal of 84 violating election advertisements,

According to the department, 31 election advertisements were installed without a license and 53 were displayed outside the area designated for the 2024 National Assembly election candidates in Jahra Governorate

A team from the Audit and Services Follow-up Department in the Municipality branch in Jahra Governorate carried out an inspection campaign as per the law. This led to the removal of many election advertisements from the roads outside the walls of electoral headquarters or the streets in residential areas, as well as the removal of random advertisements from streets and squares, and advertisements not licensed by the Municipality.

The Municipality confirmed that the supervisory teams are intensifying their field campaigns in the governorates to remove unauthorized and random election advertisements throughout the election period.

The Municipality added that inspectors are continuously monitoring violating advertisements to remove them immediately, stressing the need to adhere to the law to avoid legal problems and payment of fines.

New Mol service: The Ministry of Interior has announced the provision of a service to inquire about electoral registration data through the 'Sahl' application, reports Al-Anba daily.

In a video a clip uploaded on its social media accounts recently, the ministry stated that the citizens have the right to know their electoral registration data through 'Sahl' by accessing the services of the ministry and clicking the electoral registration data; clarifying that voting will be through the original nationality card.

The ministry urged citizens with lost or damaged original nationality cards to visit the Citizenship and Passport Affairs General Department to obtain a nationality card, indicating they should present their civil identification card and four photos.

KUWAIT CITY, March 21: The Supreme Judicial Council (SJC) rejected all the grievances submitted by those among more than 300 male and female law graduates who were excluded from the position of prosecutors. After reviewing the grievances, the council confirmed that all who were accepted had passed the written and oral exams and were most qualified for the position.

The council's decision concerning these grievances came after auditing and examining all the files of the complainants. It was thus confirmed that the decisions of the Admissions Committee in selecting prosecutors were correct and in accordance with the law.

The batch of prosecutors whose acceptance was announced in November 2023 had sparked parliamentary reactions and threats to grill the former minister of Justice, who ordered the grievances to be opened and taken into consideration to ensure justice and equality were achieved among all applicants. A specialized committee had then studied the grievances.

In addition, the applications for the position of prosecutors used to be accepted every two years but are now accepted every year as a step to accept the largest number of people eligible for this sensitive job and with the aim of filling vacancies and training the judiciary.

Gravel issue rears head again as rains subside throughout Kuwait

Measures taken to tackle recurring phenomenon

KUWAIT CITY, March 21: In the aftermath of the recent rainfall, certain highways and internal roads across the country experienced the gravel flying, while streets treated with improved bitumen mixture by the Ministry of Public Works remained unaffected, reports Al-Jarida daily.

This problem, which first emerged in 2014, prompted the formation of a specialized committee by the Public Works Ministry to investigate the causes of gravel flying post-rainfall, as per Ministerial Resolution No. 1 of 2014.

The Ministry disclosed that it had undertaken various executive measures based on the committee's recommendations to address road deficiencies. These measures included amendments to contract specifications, such as ontractors to conduct ting (of earthworks before layer spreading, and limiting bitumen technical specifications to "60/70" specifications only Among the committee's recommendations was coordination with the National Petroleum Company to design new asphalt mixtures and enforce standards for project engineers, requiring a minimum of seven years' practical experience in the field and completion of qualifying training programs. Furthermore, the Ministry outlined 11 conditions for improving bitumen and repairing asphalt, including ensuring project engineers adhere to assigned responsibilities and implementing asphalt works controls. The discount system for asphalt works was replaced with a system compelling contractors to rectify all defective works Studies conducted to develop asphalt specifications for the Gulf region highlighted the necessity of using bitumen performance "10 - 76 PG" to address Kuwait's climatic conditions. This superior performance requires the addition of polymer improvers to enhance bitumen properties. The Ministry affirmed its commitment to repairing roads as per announced contracts and in accordance with the previously recommended conditions and specifications, aiming to eradicate the issue of flying gravel effectively.

"The Minister of Education and Minister of Higher Education and Scientific Research issued a decision requiring the formation of a committee to develop a new curriculum for a subject called 'National Education' with the aim of strengthening national values, belonging and loyalty to the homeland in the hearts of male and female students," columnist Prof. Dr. Bahija Behbehani wrote for Al-Qabas daily.

"A committee was formed in this regard and its tasks relate to identifying the classrooms in which the subject will be taught. National education for its students, preparing a complete curriculum for each classroom for a subject called national education in accordance with the established standards, and preparing an integrated plan for each classroom to teach the curriculum.

"We affirm that national education has a major role in preparing the emerging and educated generations in a way that is consistent with the philosophy that members of society believe in, and the customs and values that it accepts. It is also an effective way to address the problems that society suffers from.

"Definitions of "national education" have varied. Some define it as: "the process of instilling a set of values and principles in young people so that they have the ability to participate effectively in solving all of the nation's issues and problems." "Others explained that: "National education" is preparing young people to perform their role in society as decisionmakers and citizens who keep the interests of the nation in mind. This definition is of utmost importance to clarify the "concept of national education."

"This means that the teacher of "National Education" should be able to prepare a generation for the nation capable of confronting negative ideas such as sectarianism and tribalism with force and determination.

"Young people must believe that the homeland is for everyone, regardless of their origins, religions and sects, and put their hand in their hand to rebuild and defend the homeland.

"Therefore, the general goal of teaching "national education" -- as educators agreed - is "to prepare a good citizen who knows his rights and performs his duties towards his society, and to provide young people with a positive and realistic understanding of the political system of their country, as well as clarifying the rights and duties of individuals.3

maximum legal measures against them. "The reform path of the political leadership or complacency is a reform map that will bear fruit soon. The nation needs the public to panic and stand in support of the leadership, so we can get through this and break the centers of influence wherever they may be, because Kuwait is more important and precious. It was and will be a beacon for all.

"We ask Allah to protect Kuwait and its people from all forms of hatred under the leadership of His Highness the Amir, may Allah protect him. "May Allah have mercy on our righteous martvrs.

"Check the Constitution ... There is nothing in the Constitution of the State of Kuwait or its explanatory memorandum or even the Kuwaiti social customs that prevents HH the Amir from relieving his Crown Prince of responsibility any time he wishes, provided that he appoints a new Crown Prince within a period not exceeding one year, even if he is the Crown Prince. The person who was exempted was chosen by the National Assembly from among three names nominated by HH the Amir, or the Assembly approved HH the Amir's nomination for the first time. There are many precedents, such that there is no room to list all of them here -- whether in Kuwait or other Gulf states!" columnist Talal Al-Saeed wrote for Al-Seyassah daily.

"Everyone who issues 'fatwas' on what they do not know should be aware of the above. There is no article in the Constitution stipulating that the next Assembly should choose the next Crown Prince. The appointment is up to His Highness the Amir, may Allah protect him. This is one of his powers. The Assembly has the right to approve or disapprove the name nominated for the first time or in the second round after the Amir nominates three names from which the Assembly chooses one name.

"There is no article in the Constitution that prevents HH the Amir from relieving whomever the Assembly chooses as Crown Prince, without giving reasons. Only HH the Amir chooses his Crown Prince and relieves the latter. The Assembly has no right to relieve the Crown Prince from his position, even if it is the one that chose him from among the three candidates.

"Our real problem is not in the procedures regulated by the Constitution of the State of Kuwait, but those who are bluffing about what they do not know and making the issue of choosing the next Crown Prince a political issue, trading on it and trying to reach the Assembly through it, and then rising and setting in this extremely important issue. They take advantage of some people's lack of understanding of the provisions of the Constitution.

25 speeding violations in 19 days

KUWAIT CITY, March 21: A French man, who arrived in Norway about a month ago, was sentenced to 21 days in prison, because he committed 25 speeding violations within 19 days, reports Al-Rai daily.

Media reports stated that the 23-yearold man went to the Scandinavian country in search of work, but he was arrested 25 times for speeding from Feb 6-25.

VII. Kuwait was the first country in the Middle East to sign Belt and Road cooperation documents with China. In response to the Belt and Road Initiative (BRI) proposed by President Xi Jinping, Kuwait signed in June 2014 memorandums of understanding with China to jointly promote cooperation concerning the Silk Road Economic Belt and the development of Kuwait's Silk City, opening up broader prospects for China-Kuwait win-win cooperation. In recent years, both sides have worked to better synergize China's BRI and Kuwait's Vision 2035, which has achieved positive outcomes in the areas of infrastructure construction, energy, investment and communications. Chinese enterprises have undertaken the construction of many signature projects in Kuwait, making prominent contributions to the country's economic and social development. This year marks the 10th anniversary of China and Kuwait signing the Belt and Road cooperation documents. China is prepared to work with Kuwait to write a new chapter in the joint pursuit of high-quality Belt and Road cooperation

VIII. The Kuwait Investment Office (Shanghai) is the only overseas investment office established by the Kuwait Investment Authority (KIA) after Kuwait's independence. KIA opened its representative office in Beijing in 2011 and then an investment office in Shanghai in 2018 which is the only overseas investment office that KIA has set up after the country's independence, marking a solid step toward stronger cooperation with China and the Asian-Pacific region. Investment cooperation has now become a new highlight of practical cooperation between the two sides. As part of its efforts to diversify investment portfolio, KIA has invested in the Jinan-Oingdao high-speed railway project, making it the first time that a domestic high-speed railway has attracted capital from a foreign institutional investor. IX. The China Cultural Center in Kuwait is the first of its kind in service in the Gulf region. Diverse interactions and cooperation in cultural and people-to-people fields between the two sides have registered many highlights. Over the years, multiple Chinese art troupes have given great performance during their visits to Kuwait, while people of cultural circles in Kuwait have taken an active part in cultural events held in China. On September 17 last year, the China Cultural Center, located in Kuwait's Salmiya, launched its trial operation. Built as the first of its kind in the Gulf region, this center will serve as a key platform for promoting cultural exchanges between the two countries and fostering closer ties between the two peoples. It will also be a gateway for Kuwaiti friends in all sectors to learn Chinese language, understand the fine traditional culture of China and experience the development dynamics of contemporary China. It will play an active role in consolidating the cultural foundations for building a China-Arab community with a shared future. X. His Highness the Amir Sheikh Mishal is the first head of state among the leaders of GCC countries who explicitly expressed his support for three Initiatives proposed by President Xi Jinping. When President Xi Jinping and Amir Sheikh Mishal had a meeting in Hangzhou in September 2023, Amir Sheikh Mishal voiced his support for the Global Development Initiative (GDI), the Global Security Initiative (GSI) and the Global Civilization Initiative (GCI) put forward by President Xi Jinping. During their meeting, they reached broad consensus on deepening China-Kuwait strategic partnership and witnessed the signing of the Joint Statement on the Five-Year (2024-2028) Cooperation Plan between the People's Republic of China and the State of Kuwait, as well as multiple bilateral cooperation documents in such fields as renewable energy, infrastructure construction and environment governance, charting the course for future bilateral relationship Though far apart geographically, China and Kuwait have been working hand in hand, as good friends and good partners that support and trust each other, to pursue a shared future. Our bilateral friendship provides an example for state-to-state relations. Through two fruitful meetings, President Xi Jinping and Amir Sheikh Mishal lay out a new blueprint for future China-Kuwait strategic partnership. Today, China-Kuwait relations have entered a crucial phase of building on past successes to strive for new progress. China stands ready to work with Kuwait to implement the common understandings reached by the two heads of state and develop greater synergy in our development strategies. Through enhanced cooperation in investment, energy, infrastructure, environmental governance and digital economy and closer people-topeople and cultural exchanges, we will be able to build a high-quality China-Kuwait community with a shared future and contribute to the greater vision of jointly building a community with a shared future for mankind

I was lucky to join the Kuwait Red Crescent Society's volunteer medical team. Our visit was arranged in coordination with the Egyptian Red Crescent Society and the Palestinian Red Crescent Society. I thank them for all the assistance they provided and the good coordination and facilitation of our mission in helping the wounded and the Palestinian medical team.

Of course, we cannot cover the acute shortage of medical capabilities and human resources there, as the catastrophic deterioration of the health sector in Gaza cannot be covered by volunteer medical teams from Kuwait, America, Britain and other European countries.

However, our presence served as a psychological and moral motivation for the steadfast Palestinian doctors, who continued to work day and night without receiving salaries for six months. Some of them do not know the fate of half their family members, and most of them were displaced two, three, and four times.

We saw on the ground the frightening deterioration in the field and the catastrophic decline in medical capabilities in the sector. The experience, as sad as it was, instilled within me a feeling that we can do something.

We sparked enthusiasm in the hearts of others, and showed the world that the road to Gaza is not a road of no return. Rather, everyone can travel and offer a helping hand and return safely to their country. Despite the small effort we made, its impact was very large.

The medical team's initiative stems from our country's firm position towards supporting the Palestinian cause. From the first hours of the Israeli attack on the Gaza Strip, Kuwait announced its position to stand by our brothers in the Gaza Strip.

A total of 49 relief planes were directed from Kuwait to Gaza, and were delivered to the Egyptian Red Crescent Society, which in turn put them on the aid schedule to take their turn to enter the Strip."

Regarding the medical assistance provided by the team in the sector, Dr. Al-Quwaian said, "We took medical equipment with us, using which we succeeded in helping in performing 23 emergency and accurate surgical operations. We also saved the lives of two people who were facing certain death. One of them was suffering from a gunshot wound in the abdomen that reached his pancreas, stomach, and liver. Dr. Muhammad Jamal succeeded in extracting the gunshot and saving his life. The other was suffering from a severe injury in the right thigh. and I had to amputate his leg to preserve his life. Thank Allah, he was saved after being so close to death. The bleeding was stopped, a blood transfusion was given, and his health condition stabilized."

He revealed that the wounded Palestinians were transferred to many countries, including Egypt, Europe, Turkey, and others, in coordination with the Egyptian Red Crescent Society, the Egyptian Foreign Ministry, and the relevant organizations, adding that the Kuwait Red Crescent Society's medical team included four doctors, relief workers, and administrators.

aminations and Assessments, KSA, Kuwait & Bahrain, British Council, elaborated further, "I would like to extend my warmest congratulations to all the students for their exceptional achievements in the 2022-2023 UK International School Qualifications. It is worth mentioning that Al-Qeraifa was disqualified in the previous election as per the law on prohibiting those convicted of offending the Amiri entity. He is also among the beneficiaries of the recent amendment of the law, which reduced the rehabilitation period for those convicted of such a crime.

Former MP and Fourth Constituency candidate Fayez Al-Jomhour disclosed that if he wins in the election, his cooperation with the government will be based on how the latter deals with urgent public issues; the most important of which are the bills on improving the standard of living of citizens.

He asked HH the Prime Minister Sheikh Dr Mohammad Sabah Al-Salem Al-Sabah to be careful in choosing ministers. He then voiced objection to the reappointment of Deputy Prime Minister, Minister of Defense and acting Minister of Interior Sheikh Fahad Yusuf Al-Sabah.

Meanwhile, the Consultation Chamber at the Constitutional Court has rejected the appeal to cancel the upcoming parliamentary election and invalidate the Election Invitation Decree due to the absence of a state of necessity and the unconstitutionality of restricting the exercise of the right to vote.

The appellant, Attorney Saad Al-Lamie, argued that there is no state of necessity and that the text restricting the exercise of the right to vote is unconstitutional as per the Islamic law.

The court explained in the merits of its decision that the appellant did not provide any evidence of the actual harm caused to him as a result of the application of the contested decree, such that ruling on its unconstitutionality would remove this harm and achieve a benefit for him. It emphasized the need to show the extent to which the implementation of this decree reflects on his position and status; so the direct personal interest can be investigated in light of that, but there is no evidence in this regard.

The appellant asserted that the opinion on constitutional jurisprudence and the previous ruling of the Constitutional Court state that it is not permissible for the government to dissolve the National Assembly and then issue a decree of necessity to change the electoral map, because this is considered invalid for the electoral process.

The appellant pointed out in his direct appeal that Decree Law No. 4/2024 on the election of Assembly members is unconstitutional due to the absence of a state of necessity, which is required as per Article 71 of the Constitution.

The call for fresh elections is undoubtedly a necessary decree according to the constitutional concept and the decree may not amend the Election Law; but going further, the decree may only amend laws that are approved by an ordinary majority and it should not affect the scope reserved for the legislator.

Najem elaborated on the Kuwaiti and Chinese ties, stating they were "built on the clear foundations of mutual trust and common interests, which reflected not only the shared visions of the leaders, but also the desire of the peoples of the two countries to increase friendship between them."

Since the foundation of the diplomatic relations between Kuwait and China, significant growth has been witnessed in political, economic, cultural and other fields, "effectively contributing to development, construction, and progress," added Al-Najem.

Ambassador Al-Najem recounted the friendly bilateral bonds between the two countries as early as February 1965 with the late Amir His Highness Sheikh Jaber Al-Ahmad Al-Jaber Al-Sabah's official visit, as Minister of Finance, Industry and Trade, to China to meet with former Chinese President Liu Shaoqi.

Loans

It is worthy to note that Kuwait is the first Arab country that provided soft government loans to China through the Kuwait Fund for Development, covering many projects in the fields of infrastructure, education, health, agriculture and environmental protection etc., which has contributed to economic and social development in China, mentioned Al-Najem.

Additionally, bilateral cooperation in the health field revived during the 2020 outbreak of the Covid-19 Pandemic, where China cooperated with Kuwait through sending medical envoys and devices in fighting against the outbreak.

Al-Najem noted that Kuwait Investment Authority opened its office in Beijing in 2011, which moved to Shanghai in 2018, calling it "a good reflection of the special economic significance of China to Kuwait."

He spoke highly of Kuwait Vision 2035, which provides opportunities to increase and develop cooperation between the two countries in various CAIRO, March 21, (KUNA): The Kuwaiti Office for Charitable Projects signed an agreement with Misr Al-Kheir Foundation on Thursday to finance charitable projects in Egypt with a financial donation of USD 10 million provided by Kuwait Finance House.

The Director of Zakat House, Dr. Majid Al-Azmi representing the Kuwait Office for Charitable Projects, and the CEO of Misr Al-Kheir Foundation, Dr. Muhammad Al-Rifai signed the agreement.

Al-Azmi said in a statement to KUNA that the signing included a number of contracts for several development projects in various Egyptian governorates in partnership with the Misr Al-Kheir Foundation.

Results published late Wednesday after votes from abroad were counted to decide the last four lawmakers from the March 10 balloting gave the Democratic Alliance a final tally of 80 seats in the 230-seat National Assembly, Portugal's parliament.

Biden touts Arizona as America's 'future'

CHANDLER, Ariz., March 21, (AP): US President Joe Biden on Wednesday celebrated an agreement to provide Intel with up to $8.5 billion in direct funding and $11 billion in loans for computer chip plants around the country, talking up the investment in the political battleground state of Arizona and calling it a way of "bringing the future back to America.

The Biden administration has predicted that the cash infusion should help the US boost its global share of advanced chip production from zero to 20%. The Democratic president highlighted the investment while visiting Intel's Ocotillo campus in Chandler, Arizona, where he inspected silicon wafers and expressed amazement at how thin the chips are.

In remarks after a tour, Biden pivto the impact have on the US economy as he tries to translate his policy wins into a political boost ahead of November's election. His message is a direct challenge to former President Donald Trump, the presumptive Republican presidential nominee, who raised tariffs while in the White House and wants to do so again on the promise of protecting US factory jobs from China. Biden told Intel employees during his tour, "You're bringing the future back to America.

Biden narrowly beat Trump in Arizona in 2020 by a margin of 49.4% to 49.1%.

After the announcement, Biden flew to Texas to headline a pair of Dallasarea campaign fundraisers, with the first event a sellout that raised $2.5 million, said trial lawyer Russell Budd, one of the hosts.

Wilders taps 2 officials to lead talks: The Dutch parliament named two new go-betweens Wednesday to lead negotiations to form the next ruling coalition, four months after the anti-immigration party led by Geert Wilders won a national election.

The appointment of economist and former lawmaker Elbert Dijkgraaf, and Richard van Zwol, a former senior civil servant who now sits on a key government advisory panel, sets the stage for a new phase in government talks.

Four parties - Wilders' Party for Freedom, the center-right People's Party for Freedom and Democracy, the reformist New Social Contract and proagriculture populist Farmer People Movement - are seeking to build what they are calling a "program Cabinet" made up of politicians and experts from outside politics.

Irish PM quits for personal reasons: Irish Prime Minister Leo Varadkar announced Wednesday that he is stepping down for reasons that he said were both personal and political.

Varadkar announced Wednesday he is quitting immediately as head of the center-right Fine Gael party, part of Ireland's coalition government. He'll be replaced as prime minister in April after a party leadership contest.

"My reasons for stepping down now are personal and political, but mainly political," Varadkar said, without elaborating. He said he plans to remain in parliament as a backbench lawmaker and has "definite" future plans.

Russia fires 31 missiles at Kyiv: Russia fired 31 ballistic and cruise missiles at Kyiv before dawn Thursday in the first attack on the Ukrainian capital in 44 days, officials said. Air defenses shot down all the incoming missiles, though 13 people including a child were injured by falling wreckage, they said.

Residents of Kyiv were woken up by loud explosions around 5 a.m. as the missiles arrived at roughly the same time from different directions, said Serhii Popko, head of the Kyiv City Administration.

Ukraine's air force said Russia launched two ballistic missiles and 29 cruise missiles against the capital.

Kyiv has better air defenses than most regions of the large country. The missile interception rate is frequently high, rendering Russian attacks on the capital significantly less successful than during the early days of the war.

US national security adviser visits Kyiv: President Joe Biden's top foreign policy adviser Jake Sullivan sought to reassure Ukrainians during an unannounced visit to Kyiv Wednesday that the U.S. will continue to support their efforts to fend off Russia's two-year-old invasion.

The national security adviser expressed optimism that lawmakers in Washington will break a monthlong logjam and approve tens of billions of dollars in military and economic aid to Ukraine. Russian forces have exploited the shortfall to make some gains in the conflict.

"We will get a strong bipartisan vote in Congress," Sullivan said during a press conference. "We will get that money to you as we should, so I don't think we need to speak about Plan B today." He also acknowledged that the process had "taken too long.

Inmate, accomplice still at large: Authorities are still searching for a white supremacist Idaho prison inmate and an ac-complice who fled after the accomplice shot and wounded corrections officers as they were transporting the inmate from a Boise hospital, according to police.

Police said Nicholas Umphenour is suspected of shooting two corrections officers during Wednesday's ambush in the ambulance bay at Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, A warrant with a $2 million bond has been issued for his arrest on two charges of aggravated battery against law enforcement and one charge of aiding and abetting an escape, police said.

He and inmate Skylar Meade drove off early Wednesday after the shooting in a gray 2020 Honda Civic with Idaho plates. It's not known where they are or where they are headed, police said Wednesday evening.

Lee said Dedmon carried out the most "shocking, brutal and cruel attacks imaginable" against the two Black men, Michael Corey Jenkins and Eddie Terrell Parker, and against a white man during a traffic stop weeks earlier.

Dedmon did not look at Jenkins and Parker as he apologized Wednesday, saying he'd never forgive himself for the pain he caused.

Jenkins, who has trouble speaking after being shot in the mouth during the January 2023 attack, said in a statement read by his lawyer that Dedmon's actions were the most depraved of any of those who attacked him. (AP)

Venezuela govt keeps 'arresting' opponents

MEXICO CITY, March 21, (AP): As Venezuela's government would have it, President Nicolás Maduro and members of his inner circle have been the target of several conspiracies since last year that could have left them injured or worse.

Few details have been released about the alleged plots. But the government has cited them in the arrests of more than 30 people since January including a prominent human rights attorney and staffers of the leading opposition presidential candidate.

Local and international nongovernment groups, the United Nations and foreign governments have described the crackdown as a pretext to stifle political opposition ahead of the July 28 president election in which Maduro, in power since 2013, will seek a new six-year term.

The latest arrests took place Wednesday shortly before the country's top prosecutor announced arrest warrants for nine people working with Machado's campaign whom he accused of participating in one plot.

Oscar Murillo, general coordinator for the Venezuelan human rights group Provea, said officials are coordinating actions of the police, military and civic groups to tamp down nt activity

Maduro actions of and civic on any anti-government activity.

"This has translated into greater political repression and a deepening of the policy of persecution that seeks to break civil society at a time when perhaps the ideal thing would be to be talking about the public policies needed to reverse poverty or inequality in Venezuela," Murillo said.

Plots

Attorney General Tarek William Saab has described the plots variously as aimed at attacking military installations, killing Maduro and other officials and de-stabilizing the country. He has publicly presented alleged confessions, planning documents, laptops and other items he has characterized as evidence.

Saab on Wednesday accused the nine members of the opposition, including Machado's campaign manager, of being part of a "destabilizing" plot that included demonstrations, a media campaign and plans to attack military barracks. He said two of the nine people, Dignora Hernández and Henry Alviarez - Machado's political coordinator and national coordinator respectively - had already been arrested.

The arrests of Hernández and Alviarez brings to at least six the number of Machado staffers who are in custody over their alleged participation in the plots the government claims to have foiled.

Allowing free-market proponent Machado to run in the July election would offer Venezuela its best chance of a competitive race because no other candidate has anywhere near the level of support, money or political machinery to challenge Maduro. But the selfdescribed socialist government has barred her from office for 15 years - an administrative order upheld by the country's top court in January.

Other members of Venezuela's opposition have urged Machado to stand aside for another contender, but she has insisted on continuing her candidacy - perhaps hoping that international pressure could force

UN urges stronger int'l action against Myanmar junta Australia, UK sign defense & security treaty

SYDNEY, March 21, (Agencies): Australia and the United Kingdom signed a new defense and security cooperation agreement with the defense ministers of both countries saying it was required to meet "contemporary challenges" to maintain a global rulesbased order.

The treaty was signed by Australian Defense Minister Richard Marles and his UK counterpart Grant Shapps following annual bilateral ministerial defense talks at Parliament House in Canberra on Thursday, as part of the Australia-UK Ministerial (AUKMIN) meeting, which was first held in 2006.

"Australia's relationship with the UK is dynamic and enduring," Marles said in a written statement Thursday. "From the UK's leadership of support for Ukraine and efforts to address the Houthi threat, to increasing contributions in the Pacific and the Indo-Pacific, we continue to work closely together to support a global rules-based order."

"As the world becomes more complex and uncertain, we must modernize our most important partnerships," the statement said.

Subianto confirmed as president-elect as rivals allege fraud in Indonesia polls

JAKARTA, Indonesia, March 21, (AP): Indonesian Defense Minister Prabowo Subianto was announced the winner of the presidential election in the world's third-largest democracy Wednesday over two former governors who vow to contest the result in court over alleged irregularities.

Subianto, who was accused of abuses under the past dictatorship and chose the son of the popular outgoing president as his running mate, won 58.6% of the votes. Former Jakarta Gov. Anies Baswedan received 24.9% and former Central Java Gov. Ganjar Pranowo got 16.5%, the General Election Commission said. It posted polling stations' tabulation forms on its website, allowing for independent verification.

Subianto said he will respect those who made different choices in the vote.

"We call on all Indonesian people to look to the future together," he did

On Thursday morning, Baswedan's lawyers filed a challenge to the results in the Constitutional Court. Pranowo also plans a court challenge. "We do not want to let these various deviations from democracy pass without historical records and set a bad precedent for future election organizers," Baswedan said after final results were announced.

"If the regime believes that with these actions they are going to isolate me, let me be clear: My team is Venezuela," she told reporters Wednesday. She added that her campaign continues organizing across the country and expects "much more than just well wishes" from the international community.

Machado defended her staff, stressing that all allegations against them are false.

The government has not made public any charging documents detailing allegations against the dozens of defendants in the conspiracy cases. PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti: Armed gangs launched new attacks in the suburbs of Port-au-Prince early Wednesday, with heavy gunfire echoing across oncepeaceful communities near the Haitian capital.

Associated Press journalists reported seeing at least five bodies in and around the suburbs, and gangs blocked the entrances to some areas.

People in the communities under fire called radio stations pleading for help from Haiti's national police force, which remains understaffed and outmatched by the gangs. Among the communities targeted in the pre-dawn hours were Pétion-Ville, Meyotte, Diègue and Métivier.

By Wednesday afternoon, another victim had been reported: a police officer killed in broad daylight in a Port-au-Prince neighborhood known as Delmas 72, according to the SYNAPOHA police union.

Senegal votes Sunday: Senegal votes Sunday in a tightly contested presidential election that has fired up political tensions and tested one of West Africa's most stable democracies.

The election will take place after much uncertainty following President Macky Sall's unsuccessful effort to delay the vote until the end of the year, sparking violent protests.

In the latest turn of events leading up to Sunday's vote, opposition leader Ousmane Sonko was released from prison last week, triggering jubilant celebrations on the streets of Dakar and renewed excitement about the contest.

Sunday's election is set to be Senegal's fourth democratic transfer of power since it gained independence from France in 1960. The country is viewed as a pillar of stability in a region that has seen dozens of coups and attempted coups in recent years. Alioune Tine, founder of Afrikajom, a Senegalese think tank, told the Associated Press that Sunday's election had set a grim record in the country's democratic history, with rights groups accusing Sall's government of repressing the media, civil society and the opposition.

"It was the longest and most violent presidential election process, with the most deaths, injuries and political detainees," said Tine.

Human Rights Watch said nearly 1,000 opposition members and activists have been arrested across the country in the last three years. But in a recent interview with the AP, Sall denied that he's trying to hold on to power.

There are 19 candidates in the race, the highest number in Senegal's history. These include a former prime minister, a close ally of Sonko - who was barred from running - and a former mayor of Dakar. A runoff between leading candidates is widely expected.

Despite the violent upheavals in recent months, analysts say unemployment is the chief concern for a majority of young Senegalese. Around half of Senegal's population of 17 million are under 18, according to Afrobarometer, an independent survey research group.

"The big question right now for the Senegalese election is how are we going to break out of poverty," said Marième Wone Ly, a former Senegalese political party leader. "We can't see the end of the tunnel. People don't see it."

About a third of Senegalese live in poverty, World Bank data shows. Thousands have fled towards the West in search of economic opportunity, undertaking risky and often to make it easier for the respective forces to operate together in each other's countries, such as the joint training of Ukrainian troops in the UK.

Shapps said the treaty formalizes how the two country's will consult on issues that affect each other's sovereignty and regional security.

"I think one of the most important elements is it describes a mechanism by which we consult when either of our countries are under threat and we have those discussions more formalized than it is at the moment," Shapps said at a joint press conference with Marles at Parliament House in Canberra on Thursday.

Other areas within the agreement included continued cooperation on capability development, including through the AUKUS alliance, as well as closer collaboration on undersea warfare, intelligence and military exercises.

Refreshing the bilateral defense treaty was a commitment made at the AUKMIN conference held last year in the UK, and is unlikely to have come as a surprise to others powers in the region, namely China.

Dubai sovereign wealth fund plans to sell third of Nasdaq shares

A Dubai sovereign wealth fund that's the single-largest sharehold-er in the Nasdaq stock index plans to sell a third of its shares in the exchange, a deal potentially worth some $1.6 billion that saw the value of the firm fall in aftermarket trading Wednesday.

The announcement from Borse Dubai, owned by the Investment Corp. of Dubai, would make it the second-largest holder in the Nasdaq, a technology-heavy exchange that's one of the three main indexes in the United States.

"Today's offering is being conducted to enhance the capital structure and liquidity within the Borse Dubai Group," said Essa Kazim, chair and CEO of Borse Dubai, in a statement released after the Nasdaq closed Tuesday. "We continue to be a longterm shareholder in Nasdaq and are invested in the success of the company." Kazim did not say what exactly Borse Dubai planned to do with the money. Filings by the Nasdaq put the Borse Dubai sale at some 26.9 million shares. A separate statement suggested a sales price of $59 a share, putting a potential value of $1.6 billion on the deal.

Borse Dubai will retain some 10.8% of shares in the Nasdaq. "Borse Dubai is and continues to be a valued shareholder of Nasdaq underpinned by a shared vision for our future," Nasdaq Chief Financial Officer Sarah Youngwood said in the same statement. "Borse Dubai's insights and contributions have and will continue to shape our path ahead.

Kuwait Finance House focuses on core banking business to achieve sustainable profitability

KFH ranks first among Kuwaiti banks in terms of profits

KUWAIT CITY, March 21: In an interview with The Banker magazine, Kuwait Finance House (KFH)'s Acting Group Chief Executive Officer, Abdulwahab lesa Al Rushood, said that KFH ranked first among Kuwaiti banks in terms of profits. The bank reported a record net profit of KD 584.5 million for the year ended 2023; representing an increase of 63.4% compared to 2022.

Al Rushood added that "KFH reported its highestever profit, not only in its own history but also the largest within the Kuwaiti banking sector. This achievement is primarily attributed to consolidation of AUB Group's financial statements for the full year, following the acquisition's completion in October 2022".

"In general, the higher profit is mainly from the increase in total operating income, lower provision,' said Al Rushood.

On another front, Al Rushood said that KFH future objectives revolve around further focusing on core banking business for achieving sustainable profitability, moving forward in innovation and digital transformation strategy, expanding customer base, and enhancing their loyalty, promoting harmony and synergy among the Group banks, talent acquisition and retention, empowering staff and creating a culture that encourages digital mindset.

Banking technology

Al Rushood noted that KFH is leveraging cutting-edge technologies in the banking industry such as robotics and AI to streamline back-office operations, utilizing big data analytics for informed business decisions. He added that private blockchain applications are revolutionizing transaction settlements, ensuring efficiency and security. These advancements showcase KFH's commitment to harnessing frontier and emerging technologies for comprehensive digital transformation.

Tam Digital Bank

Speaking about the digital transformation strategy,

Al Rushood mentioned Tam Digital Bank, which KFH launched few months back as Kuwait's first Shariah compliant digital bank. "The aim of launching Tam Digital Bank is to complement KFH's mission with delivering superior innovation and customer excellence. That said, Tam Digital Bank is designed to appeal to the younger audience, early entrepreneurs and those who are looking for a different and innovative banking experience," said Al Rushood "Tam aspires to make a paradigm shift in the banking sector within the region.'

He added that besides the standard banking services most banks offer, Tam is focusing on the experience and lifestyle of today's ecosystem leveraging personalization, customer engagement through integrated collection of rewards.

Best services and products

Al Rushood pointed out that KFH is constantly striving to develop and offer the best card payment services and products to customers that exceed their expectations.

He added that the card payment industry is evolving at a very fast pace in terms of technological advancement worldwide, noting that KFH is at the forefront and completely committed to provide customers with the best-in-class product features and with top security levels.

"KFH card customers enjoy the finest loyalty programs such as Baitak Rewards points, airline miles and cashback in partnership with the top local and internationally renowned retailers," he added.

He went on to say that most of KFH rewards programs provide customers with extra earning for crossborder card payments, saying that the Bank has also enabled most of the digital wallets like Apple Pay, Samsung Pay, Google Pay to allow customers to follow the payments method trends with the most secure manners.

Sustainability strategy

As the pioneer in the Islamic finance industry, Al Rushood stated that KFH has strategically positioned itself at the forefront of sustainability in Kuwait.

"KFH's sustainability strategy, deeply embedded in its operations, encompasses over 62 objectives across four critical pillars: Economic, Environmental, Social, and Governance. This comprehensive framework is a testament to our commitment to driving sustainable growth," said Al Rushood.

He also said that a key innovation in KFH sustainability agenda is the introduction of its Green Financing product. This product is designed to support projects and initiatives that are not only economically viable but also environmentally friendly and socially beneficial. It aligns perfectly with KFH vision to address the current and future needs of the Kuwaiti society through sustainable solutions, thereby creating a positive effect across social and economic dimensions.

On the economic front, he added that KFH objectives are geared towards fostering sustainable economic development that is resilient and inclusive, adhering to the core principles of Islamic finance.

As for the growth outlook, Al Rushood expected the Kuwaiti operating environment to remain stable, saying that Kuwait's banking market is experiencing a surge in digital banking solutions, as customers increasingly opt for convenient online banking solutions. Thus, the investment in digital solutions will continue to grow at a fast pace. He also expected further growth in green finance products and sustainability initiatives.

Despite a 0.7% contraction in GDP due to oil production and price declines, Kuwaiti banks saw annual net profits rise by 28.7% to 1.5 billion dinars.

The surge in profits was attributed to a significant uptick in net interest income, which reached 2.6 billion dinars in 2023, up from 2.3 billion dinars the previous year. This increase mirrored global trends, with international banks also benefiting from higher interest rates aimed at combating inflation

With the Central Bank of Kuwait raising interest rates to 4.25%, Kuwaiti banks saw their net interest margins strengthen, reaching 2.78% in the third loan growth to remain relatively strong, between 3% and 4% for the year, supported by continued profitability from higher interest rates. Major Kuwaiti banks are eyeing opportunities in the project market as the government invests in infrastructure projects aligned with Kuwait Vision 2035.

Digital banking is on the rise in Kuwait, with 95% of the population using digital channels for banking. Kuwaiti banks are investing in digital solutions to meet evolving customer demands, particularly among the youth demographic.

KUWAIT CITY, March 21: Financing provided by local banks to the trade sector in Kuwait witnessed a significant surge in January, reaching a total of 672.6 million dinars, a substantial increase from 206.6 million dinars in December 2023, marking a staggering 270% annual growth compared to January 2023 when it stood at 181.7 million dinars.

These figures, unveiled in the monthly statistics released by the Central Bank of Kuwait for the year 2023, underscore a robust expansion in commercial financing activities within the country.

The cumulative balance of commercial financing extended by local banks recorded a modest uptick of 1.1% in January, amounting to 3.576 billion dinars, compared to 3.536 billion dinars in December 2023. On an annual basis, this represents a notable increase of 6.1%, reflecting the resilience and dynamism of Kuwait's trade finance sector amid evolving market conditions.

TOKYO, March 21 (KUNA): Kuwait's trade surplus with Japan surged 53.4 percent from a year earlier to JPY 83.5 billion (USD 652 million) in February, up for the first time in two months, as exports outpaced imports by a big margin, government data showed on Thursday.

In a preliminary report, the Finance Ministry said that Kuwait stayed in black ink with Japan for 16 years and one month.

Overall exports from Kuwait to Japan jumped 34.2 percent year-on-year to JPY 101.9 billion (USD 673 million) for the first increase in two months. Imports from Japan sank 14.4 percent to JPY 18.4 billion (USD 121 million), down for the third month in a row.

As for Middle East's trade surplus with Japan, it edged up 0.4 percent to JPY 804.5 billion (USD 5.3 billion) last month, with Japan-bound exports from the region expanding 1.3 percent from a year earlier.

Crude oil, refined products, liquefied natural gas

Kuwait experienced a notable surge in 2023, expanding by 33.5% or approximately 766 million dinars. Trade financing, a pivotal service offered by domestic banks to support both domestic and international trade transactions through mechanisms such as commercial deals, letters of guarantee, and letters of credit, played a crucial role in facilitating trade activities.

However, it is worth noting that while trade financing flourished, the value of financing extended by Kuwaiti banks for imports witnessed a decline in January 2024, marking the lowest level since June 2022, with a total of 452 million dinars. This decline represents a 37.01% decrease compared to January 2023 when imports financing amounted to 882 million dinars. Additionally, there was a monthly decrease of 32.17% from 819.1 million dinars recorded in December 2023.

Analyzing the breakdown of financing types, financing through other payment orders emerged as the most prominent category, amounting to 363.6 million dinars, despite experiencing a 32.81% annual decrease. Borrowed credits followed with 161.6 million dinars, marking a substantial 67.11% annual decrease, while financing under collection policies witnessed a modest increase of 16.47% at 30.4 million dinars. Regarding the currency denomination for financing, the dollar dominated with financing reaching 438.2 million dinars, while financing in Swiss francs remained minimal at 1.4 million dinars.

The sources further revealed that the KOC has set a limit on the maximum number of drilling rigs that each company can be awarded, with allocations ranging between 7, 4, and 2 rigs based on its strategic vision.

No additional rigs beyond these allocations will be accepted, and bids for excess rigs will be rejected. Moreover, the price quotes must be comprehensive and cover the entire scope

Construction begins on gas flow line network in Western Kuwait

KUWAIT CITY, March 21: According to information obtained by MEED Projects, construction has begun on a project aimed at developing a gas flow line network and associated infrastructure in western Kuwait. The project, expected to be finalized in the third quarter of 2028, involves a contract worth $223 million awarded to the Kuwait Heavy Engineering Industries and Shipbuilding Company (Hesco) in December 2022, reports Al-Qabas daily.

The scope of the project encompasses various tasks, including the construction of gas flow lines, installation of valves, surface safety valves, control systems and panels, as well as the installation of booster pumps and civil works. Additionally, pipe works, fabrication works, and associated facility construction are integral components of the project.

Gas flow lines serve to connect individual wells to a manifold or process equipment, facilitating the transportation of gas in both onshore and offshore fields. These lines are crucial elements in large oil and gas fields, transporting flows from the manifold to pretreatment stages or transportation facilities.

It's noted that Kuwait Oil Company (KOC) has been actively tendering numerous flow line projects since the beginning of 2020. While several projects are valued at less than $100 million, larger contracts, like this one, hover around the $250 million mark.

BoE expected to signal interest rate cuts could happen

The Bank of England is widely expected to indicate Thursday that interest rates could be cut in the coming months following news that inflation across the U.K. is falling faster than expected.

The central bank, which sets monetary policy for the U.K., is expected to keep its main interest rate unchanged at a 16-year high of 5.25%, as it has since August.

But like the U.S. Federal Re-serve, which also kept rates on hold Wednesday, the Bank of England is expected to show that it is inching toward cutting borrowing costs as price rises ease. Central banks around the world raised interest rates ag-gressively in late 2021 from near zero to counter price rises first stoked by supply chain issues during the coronavirus pandemic and then by Russia's invasion of Ukraine, which pushed up food and energy costs. Higher interest rates - which cool the economy by making it more expensive to borrow, thereby bearing down on spending have contributed to easing inflation worldwide, though they also have affected economic activity. Anouncement fuels rally on Wall Street

Fed still foresees 3 interest rate cuts this yr despite the bump in inflation

WASHINGTON, March 21, (AP): Federal Reserve officials signaled Wednesday that they still expect to cut their key interest rate three times in 2024, fueling a rally on Wall Street, despite signs that inflation remained elevated at the start of the year.

For now, the officials kept their benchmark rate unchanged for a fifth straight time.

Speaking at a news conference, Chair Jerome Powell said the surprising pickup in inflation in January and February hadn't fundamentally changed the Fed's picture of the economy: The central bank still expects inflation to continue to cool, though more gradually than it thought three months ago.

The recent high inflation readings followed six months of steady slowdowns in price increases. Economists and Wall Street investors were looking for some clarification Wednesday about how the latest inflation reports were viewed at the Fed.

The January and February data, Powell said, "haven't really changed the overall story, which is that of inflation moving down gradually on a sometimes bumpy road towards 2%," the Fed's target.

In new quarterly projections they issued, the policymakers forecast that stronger growth and inflation above their 2% target level would persist into next year. Overall, the forecasts suggest that the Fed still expects an unusual combination: A healthy job market and economy in tandem with inflation that continues to cool - just

US retail sales to increase between 2.5% and 3.5% in 2024, trade group forecasts

NEW YORK, March 21, (AP): The largest U.S. retail trade group is forecasting that the country's retail sales will increase anywhere between 2.5% and 3.5% this year, a solid but still slower pace than the 3.6% seen last year. The National Retail Federation said Wednesday that it expects retail sales will reach between $5.23 trillion and $5.28 trillion this year. The 2024 forecast is roughly in line with the 10-year pre-pandemic average annual sales growth of 3.6%. "The economy is primarily supported by consumers who have shown much greater resilience than expected, and it's hard to be bearish on the consumer," the federation's chief economist, Jack Kleinhenz, said. "The question for 2024 ultimately is, will consumer spending maintain its resilience?" The group's calculation of retail

Sign that price pressures remain elevated

WASHINGTON, March 21, (AP): Consumer prices in the United States picked up last month, a sign that inflation remains a persistent challenge for the Federal Reserve and for President Joe Biden's reelection campaign, both of which are counting on a steady easing of price pressures this year.

Prices rose 0.4% from January to February, higher than the previous month's figure of 0.3%, the Labor Department said Tuesday. Compared with a year earlier, consumer prices rose 3.2% last month, above January's 3.1% annual pace.

Excluding volatile food and energy prices, so-called "core" prices also climbed 0.4% from January to February, matching the previous month's rise and a faster pace than is consistent with the Fed's 2% inflation target. Core inflation is watched especially closely because it typically provides a better read of where inflation is likely headed.

"It's a disappointment, but not a disaster," said Eric Winograd, U.S. economist at asset manager AB. "The underlying details are more encouraging than the top-line number, which was boosted by a few volatile categories - the type of prices that tend not to repeat month-to-month.

Those volatile items include gas prices, which jumped 3.8% just from January to February but are still below their level of a year ago. Air fares surged 3.6% after two months of much smaller increases. Clothing prices rose 0.6% after three months of declines but are unchanged compared with a year earlier.

Housing and rental costs, though, which tend to change more gradually, cooled in February: They rose 0.4% from January, slower than the 0.6% increase the previous month. Measures of new apartment leases, which have cooled, are expected to feed into the government's inflation data in the coming months.

sure to occupy a central place in this year's presidential election. Despite a healthy job market and a record-high stock market, polls show that many Americans blame Biden for the surge in consumer prices that began in 2021. Though inflationary pressures have significantly eased, average prices remain about far above where they stood three years ago.

In his State of the Union speech last week, Biden highlighted steps he has taken to reduce costs, like capping the price of insulin for Medicare patients. The president also criticized many large companies for engaging in "price gouging" and so-called "shrinkfla-tion," in which a company shrinks the amount of product inside a package rather than raising the price.

"Too many corporations raise prices to pad their profits, charging more and more for less and less," Biden said.

Rob Considine, who lives near Minneapolis, said he has noticed shrinkflation in consumer products like deodorant, shampoo, and soap.

Considine, 38, said he doubts, though, that Biden's criticism of shrinkflation, or proposals in Congress to restrict the practice, will have much effect. If companies can't make bars of soap smaller while charging the same price, Considine suggested, they will simply reduce the quality to maintain their profits.

"I don't know how the government can set a price for a commodity like that without affecting it in the long run," he said.

Overall inflation has plummeted from a peak of 9.1% in June 2022, though it's now easing more slowly than it did last spring and summer. The prices of some goods, from appliances to furniture to used cars, are actually falling after clogged supply chains during the pandemic had sent prices soaring higher. There are more new cars on dealer lots and electronics on store shelves.

By contrast, prices for dental care, car repairs, and other services are still rising faster than they did before the pandemic. Car insurance has shot higher, reflecting rising costs for repairs and replacement. And after having sharply raised pay for nurses and other in-demand staff, hospitals are passing their higher wage costs on to patients in the form of higher prices. Still, Fed Chair Jerome Powell signaled in congressional testimony last week that the central bank is getting closer to cutting rates. After meeting in January, Fed officials said in a statement that they needed "greater confidence" that inflation was steadily falling to their 2% target level. Since then, several of the Fed's policymakers have said they believe prices will keep declining. One reason, they suggested, is that consumers are increasingly pushing back against higher prices by seeking out cheaper alternatives.

more gradually than they had predicted three months ago.

For this year, the Fed projected that the economy will expand 2.1% - a big increase from its December forecast of just 1.4%. Yet at the same time, it still expects inflation to keep declining, though slowly.

Michael Gapen, chief U.S. economist at Bank of America, said the Fed's updated projections suggest that it expects improvements in supply chains and the availability of workers to continue, allowing the economy to grow even as inflation slows to the Fed's target. Rising immigration, for example, has made it easier for businesses to hire without having to rapidly raise pay.

"It looks to me like they're embracing that supply-side story," Gapen said. That means "you can cut while growth is solid, and you can cut while the labor market is strong.

Rate cuts would, over time, lead to lower costs for home and auto loans, credit card borrowing and business loans. They might also aid President Joe Biden's reelection bid, which is facing widespread public unhappiness over higher prices and could benefit from an economic jolt stemming from lower borrowing rates.

The financial markets cheered the message Wednesday from Powell and the Fed, with traders sending the Dow Jones industrial average surging 1%, to another all-time high.

"Inflation has come way down, and that gives us the ability to approach this question carefully and feel more confident that inflation is moving down sustainably," Powell said. "It is still likely ... that we will see that confidence and that there will be rate cuts."

The Fed's policymakers did make some small adjustments in their outlook: Their projections showed that in 2025, they now

A strong jobs market and rising wages have fueled household spending, but retail sales have become choppy in the face of rising credit costs and still higher prices. And shoppers have been shifting their spending to services after focusing on buying goods while they were staying close to home during the heart of the pandemic.

The retail group's forecast comes as Americans picked up their spending a bit in February after pulling back the previous month, according to the latest Commerce Department foresee only three rate cuts, down from the four they envisioned in their December forecasts.

One reason may be that they expect "core" inflation, which excludes volatile food and energy costs, to still be 2.6% by the end of 2024, up from their previous projection of 2.4%. In January, core inflation was 2.8%, according to the Fed's preferred measure.

The Fed's foecasts overall, suggest that

Most economists have pegged the Fed's June meeting as the most likely time for it to announce its first rate cut, which would begin to reverse the 11 hikes it imposed beginning two years ago. The Fed's hikes have helped lower annual inflation from a peak of 9.1% in June 2022 to 3.2%. But they have also made borrowing much costlier for businesses and households.

Though consumer inflation has tumbled since mid-2022, it has remained stuck above 3%. And in the first two months of 2024, the cost of services, like rents, hotels and hospital stays, remained elevated. That suggested that high borrowing rates weren't sufficiently slowing inflation in the economy's vast service sector.

While the Fed's rate hikes typically make borrowing more expensive for homes, cars, appliances and other costly goods, they have much less effect on services spending, which doesn't usually involve loans. With the economy still healthy, there is no compelling reason for the Fed to cut rates until it feels inflation is sustainably under control.

"There's no urgency for them," said Luke Tilley, chief economist at Wilmington Trust, a wealth management company. "They've got a strong economy, strong labor market.'

In most respects, the U.S. economy remains heathy. Employers keep hiring, unemployment remains low, and the stock market is hovering at record highs. Yet average consumer prices remain much higher than they were before the pandemic - a source of unhapmore cautious with their money.

Many retailers are stepping up deals heading into the spring selling season, while offering new loyalty programs -both free and fee-based to get shoppers to return more frequently.

For example, in the world of home improvement, customers have been pulling back on big doit-yourself projects amid a still challenging home market. Lowe's, the nation's second largest retailer, launched in January a free loyalty program that features such perks as free shipping and early notification of discounts.

It's similar to Lowe's separate loyalty plan for its so-called professional customers who include contractors.

These accounted for more than 446,000 gallons (1.6 million litres) of oil spilled and more than 1.48 million gallons (5.6 million litres) of water that killed or injured at least 63 animals and impacted at least 6 acres (2.4 hectares) of salt brush and grassland habitat, according to the California Department of Fish and Wildlife's Office of Spill Prevention and Response.

The Department of Fish and Wildlife said it was the largest administrative fine in its history. Most of the money will go to projects to acquire and preserve habitat. A portion of the money will also go to the Oiled Wildlife Care Network at the University of California, Davis School of Veterinary Medicine and to help respond to future oil spills. "This settlement is a testament to our firm stance that we will hold businesses strictly liable for oil spills that enter our waterways and pollute our environment," Department of Fish and Wildlife Director Chuck Bonham said.

Chevron did not immediately respond to a request for comment.

Japan's exports rise nearly 8% in February on strong shipments of cars and machinery

TOKYO, March 21, (AP): Japan's exports rose 7.8% in February from a year earlier on strong shipments of cars and electrical machinery, the government said Thursday.

Exports in February totaled 8.2 trillion yen ($55 billion), marking the third straight month of growth, according to preliminary customs data.

The report showed the trade deficit sank by more than half on-year to 379 billion yen ($2.5 billion), marking the second straight month of a deficit.

Exports to China rose just 2.5% and those to all of Asia edged 2.3% higher on-year, suggesting that demand has moderated. Exports to the United States rose 18% and exports to the EU were up almost 16%.

The picture for imports was mixed, with China supplying 1.7 trillion yen ($236 billion), a nearly 17% annual increase that more than doubled Japan's deficit with its giant neighbor.

In all, imports edged up 0.5%, totaling nearly 9 trillion yen ($60 billion), as prices for key commodities such as coal and liquefied natural gas fell.

The strength in exports come as good news, coming a day after the Bank of Japan raised its key interest rate for the first time in 17 years, no longer setting it at below zero. The central bank has promised to still keep lending easy as it gauges various signs for how growth holds up.

One positive recently is a solid rebound in tourism, which counts statistically as exports, with recent data showing that visitor numbers have exceeded those before the CO-VID-19 pandemic. Japan restricted entry into the country during the pandemic.

Exports have remained relatively strong even as Japan's economy has slowed, hitting a record high of just over 100 trillion yen ($670 billion) in 2023. B

Japan is now the world's fourth largest economy, behind Germany.

Nostalgic romp or just another reboot?

Ghostbusters: Frozen Empire clears low bar

LOS ANGELES: M. Emmet

Walsh, the character actor who brought his unmistakable face and unsettling presence to films including "Blood Simple" and "Blade Runner," has died at age 88, his manager said Wednesday.

Walsh died from cardiac arrest on Tuesday at a hospital in St. Albans, Vermont, his longtime manager Sandy Joseph said.

The ham-faced, heavyset Walsh often played good old boys with bad intentions, as he did in one of his rare leading roles as a crooked Texas private detective in the Coen brothers' first film, the 1984 neo-noir "Blood Simple.

Joel and Ethan Coen said they wrote the part for Walsh, who would win the first Film Independent Spirit Award for best male lead for the role.

Critics and film geeks relished the moments when he showed up on screen.

Roger Ebert once observed that "no movie featuring either Harry Dean Stanton or M. Emmet Walsh in a supporting role can be altogether bad.

Walsh played a crazed sniper in the 1979 Steve Martin comedy "The Jerk" and a prostate-examining doctor in the 1985 Chevy Chase vehicle "Fletch.

In 1982's gritty, "Blade Runner," a film he said was grueling and difficult to make with perfectionist director Ridley Scott, Walsh plays a hard-nosed police captain who pulls Harrison Ford from retirement to hunt down cyborgs.

But as the lackluster 2021 install-"Ghostbusters: Afterlife" ment, showed, the half life of most film franchises today is an ever-lengthening long tail of diminishing returns. Though the options are many, suck-ing "Ghostbusters" dry would make a prime exhibit in Hollywood's nostalgia fix.

Still, it's not quite as simple as that. I'm glad for the female-led 2016 "Ghostbusters." Aside from prompting a minor culture war, it assembled the best comic ensemble since the original with Melissa Mc-Carthy, Kristen Wiig, Kate McKin-

And as easy as it might be to label the new one, "Ghostbusters: Frozen Empire," another half-hashed retread - which it is, a little bit - it's also a significant upgrade from "Afterlife," which relocated the action to Oklahoma and forgot to pack any comedy. "Frozen Empire," back, thankfully, in New York, is a breezier, more serviceable sequel that has a modest charm as an '80-tinged family adventure.

The innate appeal of "Ghostbusters" had to do with its brash mixing of genres - adult-edged comedy with sci-fi toys - that summoned the spirit of "Abbott of Costello Meet Frankenstein." When the sequels have gone astray, it's usually because they get bogged down with solemnity or special effects when all they really need is the it's-the-end-of-the-worldand-I-feel-fine smirk of Bill Murray. I'd forgive bad visual effects a lot sooner than I would bland comic interplay.

"Frozen Empire," though, is organized less around a group of funny people wearing proton packs than it is around a family. The movie more or less opens with the Ectomobile racing down Fifth Avenue with Gary (Paul Rudd) at the wheel, Callie (Carrie Coon) riding shotgun and her kids -Trevor (Finn Wolfhard) and Phoebe (Mckenna Grace) - in the back, all in bickering pursuit of a "sewer dragon" apparition.

The cast is much the same as "Afterlife," but the behind-the-scenes talent has been rejiggered. After Jason Reitman took over directing from his father, Ivan Reitman, he here is credited as a producer and writer. Gil Kenan, who co-wrote "Afterlife," di-rects "Frozen Empire," which is dedicated to the elder Reitman, who died in 2022.

Natural wonders, Napoleon's exile

Journey through history's forgotten isle

St. Helena, a small, craggy island in the South Atlantic Ocean, hasn't seen many tourists in the past for good reason: It's one of the most remote inhabited places in the world.

Until 2017, it took five nights by boat to reach the British overseas territory, which is nearly halfway between southern Africa and Brazil. Today, with weekly commercial flights and the recent arrival of high-speed internet, the government is hoping to breathe new life into a fledgling tourism industry that welcomed about 2,100 leisure travelers in 2023.

The island has just a little more than 4,000 residents, or Saints as they call themselves, and is likely to attract a certain kind of visitor.

"It's people with a real desire to travel and learn rather than, 'let's go somewhere to have a bit of sunshine and some nice food," says Emma Phillips, whose husband, Nigel, is St. Ĥelena's governor.

After all, weather can be unpredictable and supplies occasionally run low when you're 1,200 miles from the nearest continent.

"You've got to be prepared to embrace all of that," Phillips says, while extolling the island's wel-coming locals, rich history and natural wonders. "Come with an open mind."

Perhaps best known as the site of Napoleon Bonaparte's exile from 1815 until his death in 1821, St. Helena features multiple heritage sites honoring the deposed French emperor. Visitors can tour his homes and his original burial grounds. His remains were returned to France in 1840.

The capital city, Jamestown, is an eclectic mix of new and old. British Georgian-era colonial buildings house small retail and grocery stores. There are a couple DVD rental shops - remnants of the island's pre-high-speed internet days.

For a workout with a view, climb the 699 steps of Jacob's Ladder on the edge of town. The 600-foot-high outdoor staircase was originally a donkey-powered cart track used to transport goods between the city and fortifications on the cliffs above.

Plantation House's well-manicured vard is home to one of the island's most famous residents, a venerable tortoise named Jonathan. At the approximate age of 192, Jonathan holds the Guinness World Record for the oldest living land animal. He has met several royals, including Queen Elizabeth II, who visited St. Helena in 1947, and Prince Edward, who made the trip in January. "Jonathan is an enigmatic tortoise," says Teeny Lucy, one of his caretakers for over a decade. "If you come to St. Helena, people usually know two things: Jonathan the tortoise and Napoleon Bonaparte." She's not sure who is the bigger celebrity. Jonathan has lost his sight and sense of smell, but remains a major draw for tourists like Gilly Hill, who traveled from the U.K. to snap selfies with him.

"I just think he's the most amazing creature," she said.

Other bucket-list activities include swimming with Chilean devil rays or whale sharks, which are often spotted December through March. There's also humpback whale watching from June to December. Come in January to catch peak nesting season for the wirebird, also known as the St. Helena plover, which can only be found on St. Helena.

Roughly one-third of all en-demic biodiversity in U.K. territories can be found within the 47-square-mile island. More than 500 species are not seen anywhere else on earth, including 45 flowering plants and ferns.

Microclimates that range from cool tropical forests to sunny rolling grasslands and windswept volcanic cliffs can all be experienced within an hour's drive. With two dozen scenic trails, St.

Helena can satisfy even the most avid hiker's wanderlust. Serious trekkers might opt for the highest point, Diana's Peak. The 2.3-mile hike takes you 2,690 feet above sea level and into Britain's last remaining natural cloud forest.

Echoes of elegance: Ballet's timeless tale

KHARKIV, Ukraine, March 21, (AP): In a dance studio that doubles as a bomb shelter in northeast Ukraine, the little girls in pink tutus prance in like gusts of air.

Timed to classical music, the 9-year olds jump and glide. Occasionally, they misbehave, prompting a curt rebuke from Marina Altukhova, their instructor.

The Princess Ballet Studio is a spartan, windowless space under an apartment complex, but for an hour, the ballet class offers levity and escape from the daily horrors playing out above ground in the northeastern city of Kharkiv.

Reminders of Russia's war against Ukraine are inescapable: buildings lie in piles of rubble, and sirens are constant. Practicing in a bomb shelter means the girls can keeping dancing through the almost hourly air raid alerts.

Owner Yulia Voitina has done what she can to lighten the place up: Pink ballet slippers hang from a door knob, a bean bag offers comfortable seating for waiting parents.

Altukhova tells her students to plié, and the little girls bend their knees, staring at their reflection in a large mirror to perfect the stance. As the music swells, she tells them to rise up on the balls of their feet and raise their arms. Some lose their balance.

"Very good," she says.

The Kharkiv region cuts across the snaking 1,000-kilometer (620-mile) front line, where Ukrainian and Russian forces have been locked in vicious battles for over two years since Moscow's invasion.

Voitina ran a chain of ballet studios before the war, but she closed them when she left to seek shelter in western Ukraine. When she came home in March 2023, she realized she didn't have the money, or the students to reopen them. But she decided keep one open for nearly no profit. From 300 students before the war, today her studios serve 20.

She felt she had to. "There is nothing for kids in Kharkiv, no school or kindergartens, kids are online all the time," she said. "They need to apply their energy somewhere to feel nice emotions. So ballet, in particular, is like salvation for them.

Across the Kharkiv region, civilians are putting lives back together as best they can.

In nearby Izium, all but levelled after months of Russian occupation, Hanna Tertyshna is gardening. The front lines are not far, but she has had enough of being displaced after fleeing the Russians once. "It's all unpredictable," she said. "But it's good to be home, the birds are chirping and children are playing."

A short distance away, Evgeny Nepochatov looked at the rubble that used to be his family home. "It's so sad," was all he could say

Yuri Sevastianov, an 80-year-old former Soviet agricultural director, bicycled by to gather firewood from the remains of Nepochatov's house. "It's the only way we can survive," said Sevastianov, grimly, and sped off.

Back in ballet class, Altukhova has a complicated exercise for the girls that will require them to do a complete turn of the body on one foot - a pirouette. Nine-year old Myroslava Ponomarenko goes in for the move, her expression fixed in a mask of concentration as though the whole world were at stake.

From the door to the small waiting room, her mother Hanna watches with pride.

"That is her favorite thing to do, she has been attending classes since she was 3," the 32-year old says.

Her husband works for the State Emergency Service, and is rarely at home. Often, he is called to rescue civilians after Russian missile strikes, move rubble and assess the damage.

Like Voitina, Ponomarenko fled the city with her family early in the war, only to return last year. She was among the first to sign up her daughter for ballet classes once the studio reopened.

Ât first, little Myroslava was not impressed.

"When my daughter came here at first, she said, 'Oh my God, mom, this is a basement, there are no windows" she said.

She was used to Kharkiv's finest ballet conservatory, where concert pianists played live during lessons, and she could watch professional dancers practice.

But she has come to terms with the new reality. She told her mother, "Well, it is what it is, let it be," Ponomarenko said. "I will agree to anything."

Excess niacin fuels inflammation, cardiovascular disease through newly discovered pathway

Cleveland Clinic-led study discovers link between 'high levels' of Niacin

CLEVELAND, March 21: Re-searchers from global health system Cleveland Clinic have identified a new pathway that contributes to cardiovascular disease associated with high levels of niacin, a common B vitamin previously recommended to lower cholesterol.

The team, led by Stanley Hazen, M.D., Ph.D., discovered a link between 4PY, a breakdown product from excess niacin, and heart disease. Higher circulating levels of 4PY were strongly associated with development of heart attack, stroke and other adverse cardiac events in large-scale clinical studies. The researchers also showed in preclinical studies that 4PY directly triggers vascular inflammation. The findings provide a foundation for potential new interventions and therapeutics to reduce or prevent that inflammation.

"What's exciting about these results is that this pathway appears to be a previously unrecognized yet significant contributor to the development of cardiovascular disease," said Dr. Hazen, Chair of Cardiovascular and Metabolic Sciences at Cleveland Clinic's Lerner Research Institute and Co-Section Head of Preventive Cardiology in the Heart, Vascular & Thoracic Institute. "What's more, we can measure it, meaning there is potential for diagnostic testing. These insights set the stage for developing new approaches to counteract the effects of this pathway." Dr. Hazen adds, "For decades, more than 50 nations have mandated niacin (vitamin B-3) fortification in staple foods such as flour, cereals and oats to prevent disease related to nutritional deficiency." Yet one in four subjects in the researchers' patient cohorts appear to be getting too much, and had high levels of 4PY, which appears to contribute to cardiovascular disease development.

Dr. Hazen compares our intake of niacin as multiple taps pouring wa-ter into a bucket. Once that bucket is filled, it begins to spill over. The human body then needs to process that spill-over and produce other metabolites, including 4PY.

The main takeaway is not that we should cut out our entire intake of niacin - that's not a realistic approach," said Dr. Hazen. "Given these findings, a discussion over whether continued mandates of flour and cereal fortification with niacin could be warranted."

Dr. Hazen notes broader use of over-the-counter supplements made with different forms of niacin have also become popular because of presumed anti-aging purposes. He adds that patients should consult with their doctors before taking over-thecounter supplements and focus on a diet rich in fruit and vegetables while avoiding excess carbohydrates. The new findings also might help explain why niacin is no longer a goto treatment for lowering cholesterol. Niacin was one of the first treatments prescribed to lower LDL or "bad" cholesterol. However, eventually niacin showed to be less effective than other cholesterol-lowering drugs and was associated with other negative effects and higher mortality rates in previous research.

Sharp increase seen in Community Eligibility Provision

Free school meals for all may reduce childhood obesity while easing financial and logistical burdens for families and schools

By Anna Localio, University of Washington and Jessica Jones-Smith, University of Washington

The Conversation is an independent and nonprofit source of news, analysis and commentary from academic experts.

School meals are critical to child health. Research has shown that school meals can be more nutritious than meals from other sources, such as meals brought from home.

A recent study that one of us conducted found the quality of school meals has steadily improved, especially since the 2010 Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act strengthened nutrition standards for school meals. In fact, by 2017, another study found that school meals provided the best diet quality of any major U.S. food source.

Many American families became familiar with universal free school meals during the COVID-19 pandemic. To ease the financial and logistical burdens of the pandemic on families and schools, the U.S. Department of Agriculture issued waivers that allowed schools nationwide to provide free breakfast and lunch to all students. However, these waivers expired by the 2022-23 school year.

Since that time, there has been a substantial increase in schools participating in the Community Eligibility Provision, a federal policy that allows schools in high poverty areas to provide free breakfast and lunch to all attending students. The policy became available as an option for low-income schools nationwide in 2014 and was part of the Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act. By the 2022-23 school year, over 40,000 schools had adopted the Community Eligibility Provision, an increase of more than 20% over the prior year.

We are public health researchers who study the health effects of nutrition-related policies, particularly those that alleviate poverty. Our newly published research found that the Community Eligibility Provision was associated with a net reduction in the prevalence of childhood obesity.

Well-being

President Harry Truman established the National School Lunch Program in 1946, with the stated goal of protecting the health and well-being of American children. The program established permanent federal funding for school lunches, and participating schools were required to provide free or reduced-price lunches to children from qualifying households. Eligibility is determined by income based on federal poverty levels, both of which are revised annually.

students are directly certified to receive free meals, meaning their household participated in a means-based safety net program, such as the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program, or the child is identified as runaway, homeless, in foster care or enrolled in Head Start. Some states also use Medicaid for direct certification.

The Community Eligibility Provision increases school meal participation by reducing the stigma associated with receiving free meals, eliminating the need to complete and process applications and extending access to students in households with incomes above the eligibility threshold for free meals. As of 2023, the eligibility threshold for free meals is 130% of the federal poverty level, which amounts to US$39,000 for a family of four.

We analyzed whether providing universal free meals at school through the Community Eligibility Provision was associated with lower childhood obesity before the COVID-19 pandemic.

To do this, we measured changes in obesity prevalence from 2013 to 2019 among 3,531 low-income California schools. We used over 3.5 million body mass index measurements of students in fifth, seventh and ninth grade that were taken annually and aggregated at the school level. To ensure rigorous results, we accounted for differences between schools that adopted the policy and eligible schools that did not. We also followed the same schools over time, comparing obesity prevalence before and after the policy.

We found that schools participating in the Community Eligibility Provision had a 2.4% relative reduction in obesity prevalence compared with eligible schools that did not participate in the provision. Although our findings are modest, even small improvements in obesity levels are notable because effective strategies to reduce obesity at a population level remain elusive. Additionally, because obesity disproportionately affects racially and eth-nically marginalized and low-income children, this policy could contribute to reducing health disparities.

The Community Eligibility Provision likely reduces obesity prevalence by substituting up to half of a child's weekly diet with healthier options and simultaneously freeing up more disposable income for low-to-middle-income families. Families receiving free breakfast and lunch save approximately $4.70 per day per child, or $850 per year. For low-income families, particularly those with multiple school-age this could result savings that families can use for other health-promoting goods or services. Childhood obesity has been increasing over the past several decades. Obesity often continues into adulthood and is linked to a range of chronic health conditions and premature death. Growing research is showing the benefits of universal free school meals for the health and well-being of children. Along with our study of California schools, other researchers have found an association between universal free school meals and reduced obesity in Chile, South Korea and England, as well as among New York City schools and school districts in New York state. Studies have also linked the Community Eligibility Provision to improvements in academic performance and reductions in suspensions. (AP)

When earth, moon and sun line up perfectly

'Solar eclipses' result from a fantastic celestial coincidence of scale, distance

By Christopher Palma

Penn State

The Conversation is an independent and nonprofit source of news, analysis and commentary from academic experts.

On April 8, 2024, millions across the U.S. will have the once-in-alifetime chance to view a total solar eclipse. Cities including Austin, Texas; Buffalo, New York; and Cleveland, Ohio, will have a direct view of this rare cosmic event that lasts for just a few hours.

While you can see many astronomical events, such as comets and meteor showers, from anywhere on Earth, eclipses are different. You need to travel to what's called the path of totality to experience the full eclipse. Only certain places get an eclipse's full show and that's be ecause of The relatively small size of the Moon and its shadow make eclipses truly once-in-a-lifetime opportunities. On average, total solar eclipses are visible somewhere on Earth once every few years. But from any one location on Earth, it is roughly 375 years between solar eclipses. I'm an astronomer, but I have never seen a total solar eclipse, so I plan to drive to Erie, Pennsylvania, in the path of totality, for this one. This is one of the few chances I have to see a total eclipse without making a much more expensive trip to someplace more remote. Many people have asked me why nearby eclipses are so rare, and the answer is related to the size of the Moon and its distance from the Sun.

Solar eclipses happen because of a few factors, including the Moon's size and distance from the Sun. (AP) blocking some or all of the Sun from view. For people on Earth to be able to see an eclipse, the Moon, while orbiting around the Earth, must lie exactly along the observer's line of sight with the Sun. Only some observers will see an eclipse, though, because not everyone's view of the Sun will be blocked by the Moon on the day of an eclipse.

its shadow is round as it lands on Earth. The only people who see the eclipse are those in the area on Earth where the shadow lands at a given moment.

The Moon is continuously orbiting around the Earth, so as time goes on during the eclipse, the Moon's shadow moves over the face of the Earth. Its shadow ends up looking like a thick line that can cover hundreds of miles in length. Astronomers call that line the path of totality.

From any given location along the path of totality, an observer can see the Sun completely eclipsed for a few minutes. Then, the shadow moves away from that location and the Sun slowly becomes more and more visible.

Solar eclipses don't happen every single time the Moon passes in between Earth and the Sun. If that were the case, there would be a solar eclipse every month.

If you could float above the Earth's

In 1966, the Child Nutrition Act piloted the School Breakfast Program, which provides free, reduced-price and full-price breakfasts to students. This program was later made permanent through an amendment in 1975.

The Community Eligibility Provision was piloted in several states beginning in 2011 and became an option for eligible schools nationwide beginning in 2014. It operates through the national school lunch and school breakfast programs and expands on these programs.

The policy allows all students in a school to receive free breakfast and lunch, rather than determine eligibility by individual households. Entire schools or school districts are eligible for free lunches if at least 40% of their

You can observe a solar eclipse when the Moon passes in front of the Sun,

The fact that solar eclipses happen at all is a bit of a numerical coincidence. It just so happens that the Sun is approximately 400 times larger than the Moon and also 400 times more distant from the Earth.

So, even though the Moon is much smaller than the Sun, it is just close enough to Earth to appear the same size as the Sun when seen from Earth. For example, your pinky finger is much, much smaller than the Sun, but if you hold it up at arm's length, it appears to your eye to be large enough to block out the Sun. The Moon can do the same thing - it can block out the Sun if it's lined up perfectly with the Sun from your point of view

When the Earth, Moon and Sun line up perfectly, the Moon casts a shadow onto the Earth. Since the Moon is round, North Pole and see the Moon's orbit from above, you would see the Moon line up with the Sun once every time it orbits around the Earth, which is approximately once per month. From this high point of view, it looks like the Moon's shadow should land on Earth every orbit.

However, if you could shift your perspective to look at the Moon's orbit from the orbital plane, you would see that the Moon's orbit is tilted by about 5 degrees compared with Earth's orbit around the Sun. This tilt means that sometimes the Moon is too high and its shadow passes above the Earth, and sometimes the Moon is too low and its shadow passes below the Earth. An eclipse happens only when the Moon is positioned just right and its shadow lands on the Earth. (AP)

Verstappen says plans to fulfil Red Bull contract

MELBOURNE, Australia, March 21, (AP): Formula 1 champion Max Verstappen wants to stay with Red Bull until the end of his contract in 2028 amid rumors of a switch to Mercedes, even as he admits to actively avoiding knowing any more than he does about the ongoing turmoil at the team.

Verstappen said on Thursday he was flattered by comments at the last race in Saudi Arabia by Mercedes boss Toto Wolff, who said he'd "love" to have the Dutch star as a driver. Verstappen said he wants to stay with his Red Bull "family."

"That's why I signed the deal in the first place," Verstappen said.

"As I've said before, I'm happy within the team and, of course, it's very important that we try to keep the key players in the team (together) for a longer period of time because that's, of course, where the performance is as well - and at the end of the day, it's a performance business.

"It's also my intention to be here until the end (of it) because, of course, it would be a great story for me personally to see it out, because it basically means that I've been part of one family, and one team."

Rumors that Verstappen could seek a move to Mercedes were wide of the mark, he said.

"We all want the same, and we want to just perform on track, so that's what we want to focus on as a team," he said.

"The problem is also that (speculation is happening) not only within the team, but from the outside and that is something that I cannot control. The only thing you can control is, of course, (getting everyone moving) on the same direction within the team, and I feel that is what we are doing.

He also defended the way Red Bull is handling the saga surrounding team principal Christian Horner, stating it was all done "in the right way," though necessarily distanced himself from the process.

"I also don't want to be too involved with these kind of things," Verstappen said. "At the end of the day, I'm the driver who's here to look at the performance side of things, that's what I'm hired for.

"But from what I know, everything is handled in the right way and I'm not going into any further details on that side. I don't know more than that, and I also don't want to know because that's not my job or my task within the team."

The team's parent company last month dismissed a complaint of alleged misconduct by Horner toward a team employee. Verstappen's father Jos has been sharply critical of Horner, claiming the team could "explode" if he remains in charge.

The employee whose complaint sparked the investigation has since been suspended. The employee has exercised the right to appeal Red Bull's clearance of Horner and filed a formal complaint with F1 governing body, the FIA.

Earlier Thursday, Verstappen's Red Bull teammate Sergio Pérez downplayed speculation that three-time champion Verstappen could be considering a switch to Mercedes.

"The team is in a very strong position, because with the results we're currently having, the harmony that there is in the team, I think to achieve that it takes a couple of years probably," Pérez said before the first practice sessions in Melbourne.

Verstappen won the first two F1 races in Bahrain and Saudi Arabia. Perez finished second in both

"Right now, the dynamic, everyone in the team is working really well together, the whole engineering group, it's really united," Perez said. "And you can see that on-track, and how efficient we've been in the last year. So I don't see any reason to change it.'

He added it would "obviously be a blow for the team if Max were to leave." Pérez denied any knowledge of an exit clause in Verstappen's Red Bull contract, which has been the subject of intense speculation.

The Australian Grand Prix is set for Sunday. There are two practices scheduled for Friday and another on Saturday before afternoon qualifying.

In Melbourne, Australia, Seventime Formula 1 world champion Lewis Hamilton has criticized FIA while supporting Susie Wolff's "bravery" for filing a criminal complaint against the sport's governing body in the French courts.

Wolff, who is married to Mercedes F1 team boss Toto Wolff, and director of the all-female junior racing series F1 Academy, on Wednesday said she had begun legal action "in relation to statements made against me" by the FIA.

The Wolffs were the subject of an FIA investigation last December which sought to determine if the couple shared confidential information. It followed allegations of a conflict of interest published in BusinessF1 magazine.

But FIA closed the investigation after just 48 hours, following nearidentical statements from the remaining nine teams denying they'd lodged the complaint required to commence it, with Susie Wolff beginning legal action on March 4.

Hamilton, though, firmly backed Wolff during a media session Thursday at Albert Park ahead of Sunday's Australian F1 Grand Prix, in which he lamented the lack of accountability in the sport.

"I'm incredibly proud of Susie Wolff," Hamilton said. "I think she's so brave, and she stands for such great values. She's such a leader. And in a world where often people are silenced, for her to be standing up sends such a great message. "I love that she's taken it out of this (F1) world to fight it from the outside because there is a real lack of accountability here within this sport, within the FIA. Things that are happening behind closed doors, there is no transparency, there is clearly no accountability.

Haaland played down concerns: Erling Haaland plays down injury concerns he sustained an injury in training with Norway this week - and revealed a message he was sent by Manchester City manager Pep Guardiola before going away on international duty.

Haaland has linked up with his national team ahead of friendly matches against the Czech Republic on Friday and Slovakia on Tuesday.

Footage from a Norway training session on Tuesday showed Haaland in apparent pain, even if the Norwegian team doctor said afterward there was no problem with the striker's fitness. Speaking at a news conference in Oslo on Thursday, Haaland said he was "feeling fine."

"I didn't walk off the training - I don't know who wrote that," he said in English. "I trained the full training and I'm feeling good and ready to

Blow for Germany: Germany's preparations for the European Championship were dealt a blow with Manuel Neuer's thigh injury ahead of the

It said the 37-year-old Neuer will miss Germany's upcoming friendlies against France and the Netherlands but didn't give any further indication of how long he will miss. Neuer had

On this, the leaders of tennis can agree: There is more money out there to be made. And they see eye-to-eye on this, too: The sport's current structure could stand to change.

The how's and why's and when's of it all? Well, that's open to discussion - and there is plenty of that happening now behind closed doors, conversations and negotiations about the future of tennis among the folks who run the Grand Slam tournaments and other events, the women's WTA and men's ATP professional tours, the players, their agents and others with a hand in the sport, including Saudi Arabia's Private Investment Fund (known as the PIF, it is the entity behind LIV Golf).

coach of the United States until Hayes can join the team. Kilgore recently led the team to the title in the CON-CACAF Gold Cup.

"The bottom line is we're excited to have a path, to know who we're playing for the most part, to be able to start working on specific game plans," Kilgore said following the draw. "But also just to know the logistical path. There's so much that goes into an Olympics with a short turnaround and congested games." The U.S. hasn't won Olympic gold since 2012 and is coming off a disappointing Women's World Cup last year when it suffered its earliest exit from the tournament after being knocked out by Sweden on penalties in the round of 16. It had never finished worse than third at previous World Cups.

Hayes has established herself as one of the sport's leading coaches. She can further add to her record by winning a clean sweep of trophies this season including the Champions League, which is the one competition she is yet to deliver at Chelsea.

Defending champion Canada was drawn in Group A with host France, Colombia and New Zealand. Before winning the gold medal at the Tokyo Games, Canada won back-to-back bronze medals in London and Brazil.

The U.S. is competing at the Games for the first time since Beijing in 2008 and faces a potentially daunting task after being drawn alongside France, coached by soccer great Thierry Henry, in Group A.

Also in the group are New Zealand and the winner of a playoff between teams from the Asian and the African confederations.

World champion Argentina was drawn in Group B with Morocco, Ukraine and a qualifier to be confirmed from the AFC.

Spain, runner-up in Tokyo, is in Group C along with Egypt, Dominican Republic and another qualifier from the AFC, which is yet to be confirmed. Group D features Paraguay, Mali

NEW DELHI, March 21, (AP): Virat Kohli against MS Dhoni. For the lucrative Indian Premier League and its billion-plus audience, the head-to-head encounter is a perfect prime time opener for the eight-week season.

The 2024 season begins with the star-studded encounter in Chennai Friday when the defending champion Super Kings host Royal Challengers Bengaluru.

Dhoni will be leading Chennai against Kohli and Bengaluru.

Kohli returns to action after missing international cricket for nearly two months - he skipped India's test series win over England owing to the birth of his second child.

Attention will be also be heavy on Dhoni, who returns from 10 months out. After leading Chennai to its record-equaling fifth IPL title last year, he announced his intention to retire at the end of this upcoming season.

"He (Dhoni) is the greatest-ever captain, and I am very lucky that I have spent some time with him over the years," Bengaluru skipper Faf du Plessis told host broadcaster Star Sports. "That's probably the biggest thing in my career, my years at Chennai. It shaped me from a leadership perspective, just observing MS. As a young leader, it was special to my growth."

Three-time runner-up Bengaluru have never won the IPL title - an oddity for their record-breaking star Kohli. Their women's team only recently ended the franchise's trophy drought, winning the 2024 Women's IPL trophy on Sunday.

Meanwhile, India's current captain across formats Rohit Sharma has made way for a new skipper at Mumbai Indians. Allrounder Hardik Pandya was brought in through a high-profile player trade with Gujarat Titans in November.

Pandya, who played for five-time champion Mumbai from 2015 to 2021, had signed with Gujarat ahead of IPL 2022. He captained the new franchise to a maiden title that season and they finished runner-up to Chennai in 2023.

Mumbai had won all their five titles under Sharma, the last in 2020. A barren three-year run prompted a first regime change after 11 years, which has sparked backlash among the Mumbai fan base ahead of the new season.

Shubman Gill will take over as captain at Gujarat Titans in what will be his first major leadership stint.

In other major news ahead of the IPL season, star wicketkeeper-batter Rishabh Pant has been declared fit for Madrid, Manchester City and AC Milan striker.

Robinho was sentenced in Italy to nine years in prison for his part in a group assault in 2013 when he played for AC Milan.

Brazil doesn't extradite nationals, which led Italy to seek his imprisonment in his home nation.

"Brazil cannot be a shelter for criminals," judge Mauro Campbell Marques said during his vote.

Judges wrapped up their voting in less than a day. Most Brazilian legal analysts expected the court's decision to take days, possibly weeks.

The swift decision came on the same day a Spanish court decided that Brazilian soccer star Dani Alves could leave prison if he pays a bail of one million euros ($1.1 million) and hands over his passports while awaiting the appeal of his conviction for raping a woman in Barcelona
