ABU DHABI, UAE, May 21 The Emirates Mars Mission, the first interplanetary exploration mission by an Arab nation, today announced the scheduled launch of its Hope Probe, which is 495,000,000km journey to reach and orbit the Red Planet.

The launch date set for the Emirates Mars mission, which extends to the 13th August 2020.

The team includes Omran Sharaf Al Hashemi, Project Manager of the Emirates Mars Mission Hope Probe, Dr. Suhail Al Dhafari, Deputy Project Manager, and Mohammed Al-Amri Engineer Ground Operations. The team also includes Omar Al Shehhi who will be part of the core team overseeing the launch of the probe into space via the H-BAE H2A rocket.

The Mitsubishi Heavy Industries’ (MHI H2A) platform was chosen as a result of its proven performance and reputation in space technology around the world, and its high success rates in launching spacecraft and satellites globally. The UAE, for its part, has previously collaborated with MHI to successfully launch the KhalifaSat satellite. Since its successful arrival at ISS in 2006, the Japan Probe has been participating in various operations for the launch. This process completed over 50 working days, entails lifting the fuel tank with about 761 kilograms of hydrogen fuel and ensuring there are no leaks. The process also requires testing the communication and control devices, moving the probe to the launch pad, installing the probe to the rocket that will carry it to space, and ensuring the probe’s batteries are fully charged.

The mission is considered a milestone in the region’s space exploration and a significant step in ensuring there are no leaks. The process will start by charging the batteries to ensure they are fully charged, then moving the probe to the launch pad, installing the probe to the rocket that will carry it to space, and ensuring the probe’s batteries are fully charged. The launch is scheduled for 09:51:27 UAE time (05:51:27, Japan time) from Japan’s Tanegashima Space Center, located on the southern island of the same name.

Omar Al Shehhi will also be part of the core team overseeing the launch of the probe into space via the H-BAE H2A rocket.

New York, May 30, (AP) - More than 600,000 people in New York City are at the top of a wait list for the city’s largest provider of mental health services, according to a new report on a worsening mental health crisis. The city’s Department of Health and Mental Hygiene released the report on Wednesday, revealing that the number of people seeking mental health services has increased significantly since the start of the pandemic.

The report found that the number of people seeking help has increased by 50% since March, with a peak in April. The city’s mental health services were already struggling to meet demand before the pandemic, and the report highlights the widespread shortage of mental health providers.

"It’s everywhere" Film documents virus nightmare

New York, May 30, (AP) - Filmmaker Sarah Gorelik has made documentaries that delve into the darker aspects of society, from homelessness to addiction. But her latest film, "Inside Italy’s COVID-19 Crisis," is a stark and sobering look at the pandemic that has struck her home country.

"It’s a story that needs to be told," Gorelik said. "It’s a story of resilience, but also of pain and suffering." The film follows the stories of several families as they navigate the pandemic, from the stress of isolation to the pain of losing loved ones.

"It’s a very raw and emotional film," Gorelik said. "It’s a story that needs to be told, and I’m proud to have been able to capture it on film." The film is currently being shown at film festivals around the world, and Gorelik hopes it will help bring attention to the pandemic in Italy and inspire others to take action.

"This is not just Italy’s problem," she said. "This is a problem for the world, and we need to come together to face it." The film has received critical acclaim and has been praised for its powerful storytelling and raw emotion.

Uncertainties about the coronavirus remain, but there are remarkable successes in the fight against the pandemic. India’s struggles with the virus are not unique, but its impact is especially profound.

India boomed in Trump use of malaria drug

New Delhi, May 30, (AP) - President Donald Trump’s declaration that his own doctor was given the experimental drug hydroxychloroquine to treat COVID-19 prompted a surge in demand for the drug in India, where it is used to treat malaria.

India’s top drugmaker, Cipla, said it had received requests from hospitals and doctors for the drug, and was working to increase production.

"There’s a huge demand," a Cipla spokesman said. "We’re doing everything we can to increase production and meet the demand." The company expects to produce millions of doses of the drug in the coming weeks.

Many experts, however, warn that there is no evidence to support the use of hydroxychloroquine for COVID-19. They say the drug should only be used under strict medical supervision.

"The drug needs to be used with caution," said Dr. Vikas Shetty, a consultant in infectious diseases. "It’s not the first line of treatment, and it should only be used in specific cases." The Indian government has also warned against the widespread use of the drug, saying it is not effective against the virus.

Meanwhile, the Indian government is working to increase the availability of the drug, and has allowed it to be imported from abroad.

"We’re working to increase production and ensure the availability of the drug," said Dr. Sanjiv Aggarwal, a spokesperson for the Indian government.

Still, there is a growing concern that the drug could be overprescribed, and that it could lead to drug-resistant strains of COVID-19.

"We need to be careful," said Dr. Shetty. "It’s a powerful drug, and it should be used with caution." The Indian government has also warned against the widespread use of the drug, saying it is not effective against the virus.

Libyans lost in mix of war

Sidon, Lebanon, May 20, (AP): Twenty years after Hezbollah guerrillas pushed Israel's last troops from southern Lebanon, both sides are gearing up for a war that neither seems to want.

Critics of the Lebanese government say the outbreak of fighting with Syria and their allies in 2012 stripped Lebanon of its remaining political and military muscle.

The turmoil in the oil-rich country has steadily worsened as foreign backers in- cluding the Islamic Republic of Iran and Russia support Hifter's forces and their allies in an effort to allow families to visit each other safely to celebrate the Islamic holy month of Ramadan.

Israel captured the West Bank, along with east Jerusalem, in 1967. It占领了约旦河西岸，并于1967年占领了东耶路撒冷。

Syria confiscated Makhlouf assets

The United Arab Emirates, May 20, (AP): The US Navy has issued new guidelines for the on- deck operations of aircraft carriers that could impact their ability to quickly engage an enemy, a spokesman for the Tripoli-allied UN-backed government said.

Hezbollah emerged as a major player in the region after the 1979 revolution, when Iran backed the Lebanese group against Israeli occupation.

It was not immediately clear how the announcement, made on Saturday, would affect ongoing negotiations with the United Arab Emirates, which is seeking to annex three territories in the disputed Golan Heights.

In an unprecedented move, Makhlouf took his grievances to social media early this month, challenging claims he once re-ceived from a source that he is re- active of the United States, and how- ered, including as a small-scale producer. Today, he is believed to have more than one million dollars in cash and other assets in the United States.

The group can ill afford another massive clash with Is- rael. Hezbollah operates along the border, in violation of the UN cease-fire that ended the 2006 war. It also has a established a presence in southern Syria, near the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights.

The group also suffered heavy losses in the Syrian civil war, which ended in 2016. The conflict has cost more than 400,000 lives, including many civilians.

The Israeli warplanes detected by Hezbollah were operating in close proximity to targets inside Israel.

Since then, Hezbollah has evolved into the most powerful military and political entity in Lebanon. The party and its allies dominate Lebanon's parliament and the main power behind Prime Minister Hassan Diab's government.

Mnuchin & Powell push differing priorities to aid economy

The administration wants to put more workers at risk to boost the stock market

FRANKFURT, Germany, May 20 — The administration’s approach to share debt with other EU countries and its push for a recovery fund to offer short-term loans to member states is seen as an overall step up in unity in the face of the virus, but Mnuchin has been more vocal than ever in a potential advance beyond deeper integration among its 27 members.

German Chancellor Angela Merkel broke with her country’s tradition of opposition to raising money together with other eurozone countries, but the plan faces opposition from Italy and Spain as well as from the smaller countries of the eurozone, where Mnuchin aims to impose a condition on their continued participation in a recovery fund.

The proposal is the latest among the various proposals that have been raised to help cover the costs of the virus crisis, but the administration’s approach is seen as the most likely to win the support of the 27 members of the union.

President Donald Trump speaks during a Cabinet Meeting in the East Room of the White House, Tuesday, May 19, 2020. "In Washington as Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin, "In the unlikely event that Mnuchin will have to make the decision on which country will receive the money, it is likely that the administration will focus on those that have been the most vocal in their opposition to the plan."

"Our characterization is unfair," Mnuchin said in prepared testimony.

The proposal is the latest among the various proposals that have been raised to help cover the costs of the virus crisis, but the administration’s approach is seen as the most likely to win the support of the 27 members of the union.

The administration says the plan is a way to help the country’s most vulnerable and hardest-hit workers, but the plan is seen as a way to shift the burden of the virus crisis to the rest of the world.

Babe Ruth's Triple Crown will look different this year from start to finish.

The Belmont Stakes will be before the Kentucky Derby and Preakness for the first time and take place at a shorter distance. It will lead off the Triple Crown on June 20 in New York with no fans in attendance and a distance of 1 1/8 miles instead of the 1 1/2-mile "test of the champions" that has been the race’s trademark for nearly a century.

"The way it is in the calendar, it’s a completely different feel than the last 100 years," said New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo, who on Tuesday issued an executive order for the first time since 1931. The Kentucky Derby was moved one year until Saturday. "I think we’re going to have a big field. I think it’ll be really competitive and I think it’ll be an all-time classic.

The pandemic has caused a delay in the return of professional sports. The Associated Press reports that finding a way to return is not as easy as just announcing a plan. The league officials are essentially choosing the best option from a list of both deadly diseases, and it is done in a way that makes no one feel like they are the one to blame. They can’t afford to make the wrong decision. In an interview with The Associated Press, UFC President Dana White said, “You have to do it. You have to keep your feet on the ground and do the right thing.”

The UFC has had to make changes to its operations to accommodate the pandemic. The UFC spent, on average, $125 million per event in 2019, with 70% of that coming from media rights and 30% from gate and commission revenue. In 2020, the UFC will likely see a decrease in revenue due to the pandemic. The UFC has taken steps to ensure the health and safety of its fighters, including mandating that all fighters be tested for COVID-19 before entering the Octagon.

The NFL has also been working to ensure the health and safety of its players. The NFL announced that it will begin testing all players for COVID-19 starting on May 26. The NFL has set up a full-scale testing program for its 30 teams, which will be in place by the end of June. The NFL will also require all players to wear masks and maintain social distancing.

The NBA has implemented a similar program, with players being tested twice per week. The NBA has also set up one-way hallways with arrows to indicate the direction of movement, and has limited the number of people in the arena at one time. The NBA has also banned all non-essential travel into July, the second time the deadline for travel restrictions has been extended since the pandemic began.

The NHL has left open the possibility of a full season being played, as well as the possibility of playoffs and the Stanley Cup being played. The NHL has set up a full-scale testing program for its 31 teams, with players being tested twice per week. The NHL has also set up one-way hallways with arrows to indicate the direction of movement, and has limited the number of people in the arena at one time.

In conclusion, the pandemic has caused a delay in the return of professional sports. The Premier League is trying to find a way to resume play. Some players are concerned about the impact of the illness on their health. Some teams have made plans to return to training, but they are waiting for the official go-ahead. The league has been in contact with the government and health authorities to ensure that they have the necessary resources to resume play safely.
