Opinion

End the plight of dud cheques

By Ahmed Al-Jarallah

Editor-in-Chief, the Arab Times

IT goes without saying that the Court of Cassation is a source for interpretation of legislative work, particularly the law, with the principles it establishes through its rulings.

This is due to the fact that the judge of the Court of Cassation uses his intellect and experience to interpret the legal rules, and seeks the wisdom of the legislation. Therefore, his rulings are considered judicial norms that can be referred to, and reliable precedents so that there is no flaw in the future rulings.

Based on this principle, the Court of Cassation built the rulings related to the issue of the dud cheque, and considered it a tool of fulfillment that does not carry bad faith, but rather a purely commercial transaction.

Al-Jarallah

It is a principle that many countries have established in their modern laws, after judges sensed premeditated bad faith through the creditor's insistence on the debtor to issue a cheque, knowing that he has no funds. This is a kind of blackmail because failure to pay the amount was considered a criminal case.

This strange legal principle is still in effect in Kuwait, although there are many rulings issued by the Court of Cassation that deny it.

However, stakeholders insist on circumventing the principles derived from the Court of Cassation by refusing to legislate what renders a dud cheque not a crime that requires physical coercion to be exercised on its issuer.

That is why I began demanding since 1999 the abolition of the so-called "penal protection", which is imprisonment, to relieve pressure on the investigative authority, the judiciary, and the relevant agencies.

In addition, when banks issue a cheque book to a customer, they are confident that he has solvency; otherwise they would not have done so. For greater credibility, there is the so-called "certified cheque"

For this reason, most countries in the world have abolished the laws that criminalize the issuance of dud cheques, and considered it a commercial transaction that does not amount to physical

In Kuwait, it is completely different because the legal principle was based on an error, and the legislator did not view the provisions of the Court of Cassation as reliable principles for updating

Therefore, the creditor must preserve his right by knowing whether the debtor has enough funds or not.

Those with bad intentions are working to establish the principle of coercion, which is why they refuse to abolish this crime. This is happening at a time when many observers and jurists are calling for amending the law, because they are relying on principles established by the Court of Cassation.

In banking transactions, there are collateral assets against the loans granted to customers. Therefore, when the bank lends, it works on the principle of long-term loyalty.

This is because it realizes that the borrower only resorted to it because he has outstanding assets and is able to pay back; otherwise the banks would throw people in prison.

Hence, the physical coercion practiced in this case contradicts the spirit of legislation and legal principles. It was appropriate for the time when transactions were based on the principle of enslavement and not equality among people.

There is no doubt that decriminalizing the issuance of dud cheque enhances the financial cycle, because it gives the beneficiary the freedom to work in order to repay the debt. But if he is thrown in prison, the creditor loses his money because he prevented the debtor from working.

Therefore, abolishing the law and resorting to the principles established by the Court of Cassation has become a strong necessity today.

Finally, it must be said that those who insist on criminalizing the issuance of dud cheques are the loan sharks and consumer companies who built their principle on bad faith and use the state to collect their debts.

This is why we say to the people's representatives: Rally behind the popular issues.

85 killed in Nigerian drone 'mistake' at religious event

ABUJA, Dec 5, (AP): At least 85 people have been confirmed dead after a "mistaken" army drone attack on a religious gathering in northwest Nigeria, authorities said. The president on Tuesday ordered a probe into the latest in a series of mistakes in Nigeria's conflict zones.

"Eighty-five dead bodies have so far been buried while (a) search is still ongoing," Nigeria's National Emergency Management Agency (NEMA) said in a statement that listed children, women and the elderly among the victims. At least 66 people were injured, the agency added.

Since 2017, some 400 civilians have been killed by airstrikes the military said were targeting armed groups in the deadly security crisis in the country's north, according to the Lagos-based SBM Intelligence security firm.

Qualification must match profession: PAM

Degree holders under 60 years can change 'iqama' from public to private

KUWAIT CITY, Dec 5: The Public Authority for Manpower (PAM) has opened a window for expatriates, whose professions match their university qualifications and whose age does not exceed 60 years, to transfer their residency from the government sector to the private sector, reports Al-Rai daily.

The authority explained that this decision is in line with the steps aimed at addressing the lopsided demographic structure issue and to benefit from expatriates with vast experience who might be needed by employers in the private sector, and in accordance with the regulations and policies on the demographic structure of the country.

The Board of Directors of PAM issued resolution number 239 of 2023 during its third meeting for fiscal 2023/2024, stating "the expatriates employed in government agencies cannot transfer to the private sector, except those under the following three categories:

1. Husband and children of a Kuwaiti woman married to a non-Kuwaiti, and foreign women married to Kuwaitis,

2. Palestinian document holders,

3. Those who hold a university certificate and have not reached the age of 60, provided that the profession is compatible with the qualification and nature of the job occupied in the government sector."

The decision also grants PAM the power to "establish regulations on prohibiting such transfer for some professions and specializations in the interest of the public."

Decision to cut ration items clarified

KUWAIT CITY, Dec 5: The Ministry of Commerce and Industry has clarified that the decision to cancel 42 types of ration food associated with the civil identification card is in the interest of the citizens, reports Al-Qabas daily.

Official Spokesman of the ministry Abdullah Al-Haraz told Kuwait News Agency (KUNA) that the aforementioned decision is based on the results of a comprehensive study carried out by the joint committee whose members are from several bodies, including the Public Authority for Food and Nutrition (PAFN).

Al-Haraz disclosed that one of the most important reasons for taking such a decision, which will take effect on Jan 1, is "the failure of some companies to reduce the market price as stipulated in the regulatory decisions requiring a 25 percent reduction, in addition to the fact that some items are not in demand in the ration supply branch-

Diesel subsidy cut: The Subsidy Study Committee reduced the quantity of subsidized diesel for fishermen by 50 percent effective Nov 1, reports Al-Anba daily quoting sources.

Sources explained that the 50 percent diesel subsidy reduction came after the concerned authorities set conditions that the beneficiaries of the subsidy must meet in order to continue enjoying the privilege, indicating the reduction is the result of their inability to fulfill these conditions.

Sources said the fishermen, who exceed the 50 percent subsidy, can buy diesel at the announced price of 115 fils per liter, which is also a subsidized price as the global price currently ranges from 230 fils to 240 fils.

"We all experienced the impact of media in Kuwait, where freedom of speech scrutinizes economic, political, and social issues," Al-Madaj said.

From his end, Al-Madaj appreciated KU and College of Art for receiving a vast number of participants from several public and private institutions, and linking students with the labor market.

For his part, the event supervisor, Dr. Hussain Ibrahim said, "the exhibition focuses on the crucial role of PR in the governmental and private sector, non-profit organizations, and embassies."

Ibrahim added, "the exhibition highlights the significance of Media studies at KU, where plenty of innovators and leaders in different fields have graduated.

Chronic diseases kill 4K per year

By Marwa Al-Bahrawi

Al-Seyassah/Arab Times Staff

KUWAIT CITY, Dec 5: Director of the Health Promotion Department in the Ministry of Interior Dr Abeer Al-Bahwa said 4,000 citizens die annually due to chronic diseases, reports Al-Seyassah daily.

Al-Bahwa also highlighted the prevalence of physical inactivity among Kuwaiti women at a rate of 90 percent.

She said Kuwait is one of the least active countries in the world, revealing that chronic diseases cause the death of about 4,000 Kuwaitis annually, accounting for 72 percent of the total deaths of citizens and about 79 percent of the total deaths in Kuwait.

In a statement to the daily on the occasion of the celebration of the International Day of Persons with Disabilities, she revealed that cardiovascular diseases rank first with 41 percent of deaths, followed by cancer with 15 percent, respiratory diseases and diabetes with three percent each.

She indicated that patterns of physical inactivity differ according to gender and social and geographical considerations around the world. She cited the World Health Organization's report on physical activity in Kuwait for the year 2022 stating "the prevalence of physical inactivity rate among females by 90 percent compared to 79 percent for males for the age group 11 to 17 years, and among adults aged 18 and above, the inactivity rate for females is 75 percent compared to 61 percent for males.

She stated that physical inactivity among elderly women in the age group 70 and above reached 85 percent compared to 76 percent for men.

She confirmed that the World Health Organization estimated the annual cost of healthcare for patients with chronic noncommunicable diseases in Kuwait at $75,753,263 dollars, equivalent to KD 23,350,000, expecting the cumulative cost of healthcare in the country to rise to $833,285,893, equivalent to KD 256,870,000.

She attributed the differences in physical activity between females and males to the conservative social and cultural norms that restrict women's physical activities in the open air, as well as the lack of sports facilities designated for women.

Speaking about the International Day of Persons with Disabilities, which falls on Dec 3 each year; Al-Bahwah highlighted the importance of practicing physical activity for people with disabilities, explaining that it contributes to improving respiratory, cardiovascular and muscular fitness; improving cardio-metabolic health such as blood pressure, dyslipidemia, sugar and insulin resistance; and improving physical functions in children and adolescents in the age group from five to 17 years.

Two ambulances, mobile clinic on board

34th plane with 40 tons aid leaves for Egypt

KUWAIT CITY, Nov 5, (KUNA): The 34th Kuwait relief plane for the Gaza Strip left to the Egyptian city of Al-Arish Tuesday, carrying 40 tons of humanitarian aid.

The plane also carried two ambulances and a mobile clinic, with a donation from the Ministry of Health and the National Bank of Kuwait (NBK).

In a statement to Kuwait News Agency (KUNA), Deputy Chairman of the Kuwait Red Crescent Society (KRCS) Anwar Al-Hasawi praised the political efforts, as well as the continued relief bridge to support the people in Gaza, led by prominent Kuwaiti figures and people.

The continuation of the relief air bridge came from Kuwait's solid stance towards the Palestinian case, to support them against the Israeli occupation's aggression that martyred and left many injured in addition to destroying hospitals, shelters, and other infrastructures, he indicated.

The two ambulances and mobile clinic will be transported through Al-Arish airport to be deployed in Gaza, to support the medical capabilities in the Strip, and maintain medical service to the people of Gaza, he added.

Al-Hasawi said that the situation in Gaza required immediate aid and relief from humanitarian organizations, which the KRCS had done and will continue to do more to support the effected.

He expressed his gratitude towards the Kuwaiti Defense

Ministry for providing airplanes for the air bridge and the Kuwaiti Foreign Ministry on its contributions towards this humanitarian mission.

He reminded people, companies, and banks to donate through the Society's website in the (Relief Palestine) campaign to help the people in Gaza who are in desperate need of direct relief and aid.

Kuwait sent on Monday an urgent humanitarian relief aid convoy to help ease the suffering of Palestinians in Gaza Strip, including 77 trucks of medical supplies and food.

Deputy Director of Kuwait Society for Relief (KSR)
Omar Al-Thuwaini said to KUNA that the aid from Kuwait contains 1,000 tons of food baskets, flour, mineral water bottles and medical supplies.

Al-Thuwaini added that the convoy came as part of an agreement by KSR with Egypt's Dar Al-Orman charity, amounting at USD 500,000 to provide urgent aid for the people of Gaza.

KSR's campaign to aid Palestinians was launched during the first days of the Israeli occupation aggression on Gaza on October seventh, adding that 27 Kuwaiti charities, governmental bodies and authorities all participated to help in any ways possible.

KPC plans to build 181 petrol stations by 2040

KUWAIT CITY, Dec 5: Kuwait Petroleum Corporation (KPC), in coordination with Kuwait National Petroleum Company (KNPC), intends to build 181 gas stations by 2040, reports Al-Anba daily.

This move is aimed at providing retail gas stations to meet the local needs, such that a total of 181 fuel filling stations will be built by 2040 divided into nine groups.

The plan is to construct 100 stations by 2028 divided into five groups. The new fuel filling stations will utilize advanced technology to produce electrical energy through alternative and renewable energy sources.

A total of 18 retail/fuel filling stations were operated within the first group, so the number of filling stations has so far reached 66 stations -- 61 are permanent and five are mobile.

According to data obtained by the daily, the number of gas stations currently stands at 66, which will reach 148 by 2028 and 229 by 2040.

In the private sector, Al-Soor Fuel Company currently owns 42 stations, while Al Oula Local Fuel Marketing owns 42 stations, while Al-Oula Local Fuel Marketing Company owns 43 stations.

Regarding the quantities of products sold in the local market, the data revealed that local market sales for fiscal year 2022/2023 increased to 4.89 billion liters of gasoline compared to 4.46 billion liters in fiscal 2021/2022. The kerosene sales in fiscal 2022/2023 reached about 172 million liters, compared to 177 million liters in fiscal 2021/2022; while gas oil sales reached 2.55 billion liters in fiscal 2022/2023, compared to two billion liters in 2021/2022.

The data also showed details of the sales of three types of automobile fuel in fiscal 2022/2023 when total sales increased by 10 percent or around 4.891 million liters compared to the previous fiscal year. The breakdown of sales are as follows: 1.8 billion liters of special gasoline, three billion liters of premium gasoline and 40 million liters of ultra gasoline.

Kuwaiti, Egyptian to hang for Rashidi kill

Death for maid in colleague murder

By Jaber Al-Hamoud Al-Seyassah/Arab Times Staff

KUWAIT CITY, Dec 5: The Criminal Court yesterday sentenced a Kuwaiti citizen and an Egyptian expatriate, who were accused of the first degree murder of Mubarak Al-Rashidi, to death by hanging.

The Public Prosecution had demanded the Criminal Court to issue the death penalty for the suspects after it was proven that they had committed premeditated murder.

It confirmed that the first defendant committed his crime with premeditation by preparing his equipment, looking for the victim and committing the murder after catching

Weeks after the citizen Mubarak Al-Rashidi disappeared in Subbiya desert, the Ministry of Interior announced the discovery of his body inside a container in Salmi.

On May 26, the forensic evidence report revealed that the body belonged to the missing citizen Mubarak Al-Rashidi, and that he had been killed.

The investigations by the Ministry of Interior and its continuous efforts since the disappearance of the citizen Mubarak Al-Rashidi revealed the details and circumstances of this heinous crime.

The investigations extended from Kuwait to Egypt, in coordination with the Egyptian security authorities, to find the Egyptian suspect who had witnessed the crime inside a camp in Kabd and had helped in transporting Al-Rashidi's body to Salmi.

Death sentence upheld: The Court of Cassation upheld the verdict issued by the lower court which sentenced an Ethiopian maid to death by hanging because she stabbed an Indian housemaid to death in Abdullah Al-Mubarak on the first day of Ramadan.

Just minutes before breaking the fast, the Operations Room of the Ministry of Interior had received a report from a Kuwaiti citizen about a quarrel that broke out between his two housemaids which resulted in the death of one of them.

Farwaniya Governorate detectives arrested the perpetrator after they went to the site of the report and recovered the knife that she used to commit the crime.

When questioned, she confessed to committing her crime, revealing that she had killed the victim due to some disagreements between them.

Spying' in the loo: The Misdemeanor

Court, presided over by Judge Issa Al-Hazer, sentenced two expatriates - an Asian and an Arab, who were accused of placing a camera inside a women's bathroom, to two-year imprisonment with hard labor followed by deportation after serving the sentence, and ordered the confiscation of the mobile phone. The court also ordered the referral of the civil case to the concerned civil court after the legal team of the Kuwaiti plaintiff filed a civil complaint, claiming an amount of KD 5,001.

According to the case files, a Kuwaiti

According to the case files, a Kuwaiti woman found a spy camera hidden inside the women's bathroom of a local bank in Farwaniya Governorate. She immediately filed a complaint with the police.

Soon after, the Ministry of Interior announced the arrest of the accused.

The ministry issued a statement, in which it declared that, "The Criminal Security Sector's General Department for Criminal Investigations, arrested an Arab and an Asian on charges of misusing a phone, by placing it inside a bathroom designated for women in a bank in Farwaniya."

Jail in adultery abortion: The Criminal Court sentenced two expatriates – a man and a woman – to three-year imprisonment with hard labor on charges of adultery and abortion. It sentenced another individual to two-year imprisonment for selling abortion pills. The court sentenced a building guard to one-year imprisonment for digging a grave and burying the fetuses of the first and second defendants in the backyard of a building in Farwaniya.

The first defendant was charged with selling abortion pills to his friend (the second defendant) who had asked his help for aborting the fetus of his wife. The second defendant then presented the pills to his wife (the third defendant) to abort the fetus she had carried in her womb for seven months.

After aborting the fetus, the second and third defendants buried it in the backyard of the building where they live in Farwaniya. When their friend (the informant) learned that her friend had purchased abortion pills from her husband, aborted her fetus, and buried it in the backyard of her building, she informed the police.

Detectives

Immediately, the detectives conducted secret investigations and found out that the second and third defendants are married in a common law contract, and she was pregnant and had miscarried.

The Public Prosecution was notified, the grave behind the building was dug up, and the fetus was retrieved, after which the couple was arrested.

After conducting a DNA test on the fetus, it was discovered that the first defendant is the father, and the third defendant had cheated on her husband and became pregnant

Confronting the third suspect, she admitted to aborting her fetus with the help of her husband, and that he had decided to do so because of his intense love for her after she insisted but without knowing that the fetus belonged to his friend. She said she had been married to her husband for six years and was in love with him, but his friend managed to play with her mind and seduce her into committing adultery with him. She said, "I became pregnant, and my husband bought abortion pills from that man, without knowing that the fetus was his friend's and not his."

When the husband (second defendant) was confronted with this information, he admitted what was attributed to him, but was shocked to know that the fetus was not his, but of his special friend who had betrayed him with his wife.

The modern history of the Jewish state

By Ahmad alsarraf

A merican Thomas Tonon wrote an article in the Princeton University Journal, last May 9, relating to the humanitarian and positive positions of the distinguished American scientist Albert Einstein regarding Israel, the establishment of a Jewish state, and his rejection of the offer to become its first president.

Tonon begins his article entitled "A Jew's Journey" with a comment that David Ben-Gurion, the first prime minister of Israel, met the scientist Einstein at Princeton University, where Einstein had previously studied, and subsequently became one of its professors, to convince him to become president of Israel, but Einstein rejected the offer. In a speech Einstein gave in 1938, he said: I would rather see a reasonable agreement with the Arabs on the basis of living together in peace than the establishment of a Jewish state. In a quote dating back to the late 1920s, Einstein said: If we cannot find a way to cooperate and make honest treaties with the Arabs, we have learned absolutely nothing in two thousand years of suffering.

Einstein also previously co-signed a letter on December 4, 1948, addressed to the New York Times, with 28 other prominent members of the American Jewish community, stating that the "Freedom Party," led by Menachem Begin, is a political party very similar in its organization, methods, political philosophy, and social appeal for the Nazi and fascist parties.

Referring to the massacre committed by the Jews against the Arabs in the village of Deir Yassin, the letter stated that the (Jewish) terrorists, far from being ashamed of their action, were proud of this massacre, and spread it widely. The Deir Yassin incident embodies the character and actions of the Freedom Party, headed by Begin.

In an additional description of the Freedom Party, he described the party as containing a mixture of extremist nationalism, religious mysticism, and racial supremacy, and that it bears the unmistakable character of a fascist party that targets terrorism against Jews, Arabs, and Britons alike, and that it used deception as a means.

The letter from Einstein and his companions ended by saying that America should turn its back on Begin and not support "this latest manifestation of fascism.'

Ten years before that letter, Einstein had announced at the Commodore Hotel in New York that the existence of a Jewish state with borders and an army to protect those borders contradicts "the basic nature of Judaism."

As he told the Anglo-American Commission of Inquiry into the Palestinian Question in 1946: I cannot understand why there is a need for a Jewish state. I think it is a bad

There are many quotes about Einstein in Fred Jerome's book, which show the truth about his provocative ideas about the Middle East and his positive position on the conflict

It appears, from current events in Israel, that the nature of its government has not changed much since Einstein's time. The reason for this is that Zionism, as a political entity, is a form of fascism, and no political party in Israel can be truly democratic if it promotes Zionist ideals.

Traces of fire.

5 suffer from smoke

The Public Relations and Media Department of the Directorate-General of Fire Department (DGFD) said acting on information firemen from the Salmiya and Al-Bida'a centers responded to the call and controlled the fire, which had originated on the ground floor of a residential building, reports Al-Rai daily.

The daily added, five people suffering from asphyxiation were given first aid at the site and then taken to a hospital for treatment.

The cause of the fire and the extent of property damage are not known. In the meantime, the authorities are investigating the cause of the fire.

Cleanliness campaign launched

KUWAIT CITY, Dec 5: The hygiene department's field teams have intensified their inspection campaigns to monitor and rectify hygiene violations and road occupancy across various governorates. This initiative stems from the directives of Engineer Saud Al-Dabbous, the Director General of the Municipality, emphasizing the need to activate regulatory bodies to enforce municipal laws, reports Al-Rai daily.

The Public Relations Department of the Municipality clarified that the Public Cleanliness and Road Occupations Department of the Al-Ahmadi Governorate Municipality Branch conducted a comprehensive campaign in the Al-Ahmadi Industrial Estate. The primary objectives were to enhance cleanliness standards, clear obstacles from roads, maintain the general aesthetic, and discourage the improper disposal of waste outside designated Nawaf Al-Mutairi, the Director of the Public Cleanliness and Road Works Department at the Al-Ahmadi Branch, emphasized that the intensified field campaigns aim to monitor violators and take necessary legal actions. He highlighted the team's dedication to elevating cleanliness standards in their designated areas and eliminating elements that mar the visual appeal and obstruct roads. The department conducts regular field tours to preserve the cultural integrity of the governorate.

Al-Mutairi reported that the recent campaign resulted in identifying 10 municipal violations and the removal of 17 abandoned, scrap cars. He underscored the ongoing commitment of the supervisory team to conduct field tours, emphasizing their unwavering dedication to enforcing legal measures against those who violate public cleanliness and road occupancy regulations.

Remove Xmas decorations from shops – Municipality

Shopkeepers, expats perplexed

KUWAIT CITY, Dec 5: In a surprising move, the Municipality has issued a directive for all shops to pack away Christmas decorations, bringing an unexpected halt to festive prepara-

The announcement has left the expatriate community and shopkeepers perplexed, as the directive means a sudden end to the Christmas celebrations and festive atmosphere that typically sets the city alive at this time of year, say sources.

The surprise move comes at a time when the businesses and individuals alike were gearing up for the holiday season, with store façades adorned with festive lights, ornaments, and Christmas trees.

The municipality's decision has sparked a mix of reactions, disappointment and confusion among residents, who were looking forward to the festive spirit after a challenging

Local shop owners, who had invested time and resources into creating attractive Christmas displays, now have no choice but to comply with the municipality directive.

Kuwait has been experiencing a ban on selling Christmas decorations in shops due to opposition from some citizens who claim that such decorations are incompatible with Kuwait's customs, and traditions.

Last year the management committee of the Avenues Mall, one of the biggest shopping centers in the country, removed a huge Christmas tree that had been put up inside the mall after citizens complained to the Kuwait Municipality about it.

The ban on Christmas decorations in Kuwait is not unique, as many other countries, including some Muslim-majority countries, do not officially recognize Christmas as a public holiday.

Stick to rules, campers warned

Fine for hunting lizards, birds

KUWAIT CITY, Dec 5: The Environmental Police Department at the Ministry of Interior has advised campers to adhere to the regulations to avoid legal problems, reports Al-Rai

According to the department, the fine for hunting lizards or birds of prey is KD250, while the fine for smoking in schools, universities and institutes ranges from KD50 to KD100. This was announced in a panel discussion organized by Kuwait Scouts Association entitled, "Environmental Violations and the Camping Season". The association hosted Major Badriya Sa'ad and First Lieutenant Zaid Abdullah from the Environmental Police Department. They stressed the necessity of obtaining a camping license from the official website of Kuwait Municipality and pay the corresponding fee of KD50 while the security deposit is KD100.

One of the most important conditions for camping is the prohibition of damaging or deteriorating the natural environment, such as uprooting plants and harming wild animals in the form of hunting lizards or birds of prey, as this leads to a fine of KD250 or imprisonment.

The two officers urged the people to stay away from the border strip, natural reserves, and oil installations, as the license will be canceled in the event of a modification to the site chosen for camping through the Municipality's website. They also stressed the need to adhere to the prevention and safety regulations of Kuwait Firefighting Force and the Ministry of Interior. They said people should not dig the soil, not place cement pours, and not burn waste and dump it anywhere.

They also touched on maritime violations and warned against fishing in Kuwait Bay, unless there is a license from the concerned authority and an entry fee of KD5, as entry without a license costs the entrant a fine of KD1,250, along with the seizure of the cruiser. They stressed that the fine for smoking in enclosed and semi-enclosed spaces, such as Nod to request

Family Court shift

KUWAIT CITY, Dec 5: The Ahmadi Governorate Committee approved the request of the Ministry of Justice to renew the Municipal Council's decision regarding the reallocation of a site for the Family Court in the Al-Egaila area, reports Al-Rai daily.

It also approved the Ministry of Awqaf and Islamic Affairs' request to expand the Mubarak Abdullah Al-Dabbous Mosque and parking lots in the Fahaheel area, Sector 12.

The committee referred during its meeting on Monday, to the executive branch, the requests of the Public Authority for Roads and Land Transport for the allocation of only 9 basins, 5 water channels, and 4 connecting links to collect and drain rainwater between Wafra and Qaradan, Al-Hafirah, and Al-Fawwar to protect the Al-Khiran area.

On the other hand, the Mubarak Al-Kabeer Governorate Committee in the Municipal Council approved the PART request to modify the shape and dimensions of the location of the rainwater collection tank, while allocating a path to connect the tank, in the Sabah Al-Salem area, Block 3.

schools, complexes, universities and institutes, ranges between KD50 to KD100, wishing everyone to adhere to the instructions in the interest of the public.

At the end of the discussion session, Vice President of the Scouts Association Hussein Al-Maqseed honored the lecturers.

Team in Shuwaikh, to check prices

KUWAIT CITY, Dec 5: The price monitoring team, headed by Director of the Technical Body tasked to Supervise Commodities and Determine Prices in the Ministry of Commerce and Industry Faisal Al-Ansari, conducted an inspection tour of the wholesale and central markets in Shuwaikh to survey the prices of meat, frozen chicken, and other basic commodities such as edible oil, sugar, cheese, canned beans, lentils chickpeas and table eggs, reports Al-Anba daily.

In a statement to the daily, Al-Ansari confirmed that the prices of basic commodities are fixed according to the list of prices announced to consumers in the markets and

He added the administration will submit a plan to Undersecretary Ziad Al-Najem that includes its work during the coming period to monitor the markets.

He said Al-Najem instructed the management of the technical body to supervise goods and to intensify inspection tours in all regions to survey prices and uncover whether there are violations like raising prices in an unjustified manner and to implement the law against violators.

He pointed out that the price monitoring team took pledges from the central markets and stores not to raise prices and to adhere to the announced prices.

A DIGEST OF PUBLIC OPINION

ARAB TIMES, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 6, 2023

Creating trust, transparency can shut the door on rumors

"POLITICAL rumors pose a significant challenge for many countries, often exerting a considerable impact on political stability and potentially tipping the balance in certain situations. Universally, no country is immune to the prevalence of political rumors," columnist Dr. Ghadeer Muhammad Asiri wrote for Al-Qabas daily.

"A recent study conducted at the University of Basel in Switzerland revealed that 30% of people believe in rumors. This underscores the global need for qualified researchers to analyze the dissemination of political rumors and their effects on individuals.

"Numerous countries actively seek to analyze and categorize rumors with precision, utilizing them strategically to manage conflicts and their repercussions on public sentiment.

"Major powers employ electronic Dr. Ghadeer Asiri communication as a weapon to achieve political, economic, and military objectives, manipulating people's emotions to influence both domestic and international affairs. This influence can be wielded positively or negatively, shaping the narrative through organized means.

"Political rumors are employed as a weapon by countries or foreign policies, often involving financial incentives or official documents to sway individuals

"This strategy may extend to the acquisition of media outlets, electronic platforms, and programming, influencing public opinion in specific directions. The objectives behind such tactics may range from undermining national unity to promoting ideological conflicts, bias, and fanaticism, disrupting peaceful coexistence and societal stability.

"The destructive nature of political rumors becomes evident in their efforts to dismantle the state of peace and societal coexistence. They aim to induce psychological instability among citizens by generating doubt and distrust through the dissemination of hypothetical scenarios. Kuwait, undergoing political changes akin to its neighbors, faces an influx of political rumors, exacerbated by a unique space of official statements caution against the spread of misinformation, the absence of a proactive official body in communicating changes swiftly contributes to citizens relying on potentially inaccurate sources, such as WhatsApp or other electronic communication programs

"To address this challenge, solutions are imperative to provide citizens with realtime and accurate information, acknowledging their right to access pertinent and trustworthy data affecting their lives. The state must prioritize creating trust, awareness, and transparency by disseminating authentic information that aligns with citizens

"Leveraging official media institutions becomes crucial in this context, as they serve as authoritative sources for correct, prompt, and transparent information.

"The constitution emphasizes the vital connection between citizens and the state, underscoring the need for transparency in conveying facts to ensure stability and prosperity for the nation's future, thereby diminishing reliance on false rumors in the pursuit of information.'

Also:

"The Israeli state's policy towards Syria is unequivocal and well-known, considering Syria as a primary target due to its perceived role as the tip of the spear against the occupying state. Since the establishment of the Israeli entity, Syria's stability and its resistance to occupation have marked it as a key focus. Over the years, the Israeli state has targeted the airport and its vicinity, often claiming the presence of Iranian weapons or forces as a pretext for its attacks," columnist Fakhri Hashem Al-Savvid Rajab wrote for Al-Qabas daily. "These strikes, particularly on the airport, have intensified, with periods of it being rendered non-operational. After the Gaza War, the Israeli state not only targeted the airport but also struck military barracks in the southern part of the country. The final blow to the airport occurred thirty-five days after its initial disablement, leading to a halt in flights, including those at Aleppo International Airport.

"The Israeli state remains steadfast in its obstructionist approach. The official spokesperson, Avichai Adraee, issued a warning, declaring that any act of sabotage against Israel would be met with an iron fist, exempting no warnings.

"In response, Syria issued a statement through its Foreign Ministry, cautioning the Israeli state about the consequences of these attacks on Syria, Palestine, and southern Lebanon. Syria vowed that the occupying state would pay the price for its reckless-"The Israeli state's interest in disrupting the airport is rooted in its belief that Iranian weapons enter Syria through this route. Even if this hypothesis were valid, the question arises: does this legitimize the actions of the occupying state?

"Amidst the complexities of the Syrian reality, where the nation battles occupiers in the north and east, there is a strange regional silence and occasional support for the occupier. The perplexing situations prompt questions without clear answers.

"Why doesn't Syria reciprocate? The truth contradicts the Israeli state's claims, as the notion of weapons passing through Damascus International Airport is deemed false. The real objective is to eliminate the axis of resistance, with Damascus at its

"Since the last third of 2022, attempts to disrupt Damascus Airport have increased, coinciding with a rise in movement and visitors to the city. The Israeli state even targets United Nations planes delivering aid, showing a willingness to exacerbate Syrian suffering amid the economic blockade. "The future remains uncertain, with many in the nation left in a state of anticipation, unsure of the direction events will take and who will emerge victorious or defeated in a reality filled with contradictions and variables. The destiny of many in this nation seems to be one of waiting."

"Nawaf ... our great love. For those who know us, or who do not know us, we are the people of the beloved State of Kuwait. We Kuwaitis differ among ourselves on many matters, but we all agree on two constant things: the love of Kuwait and the love of Sheikh Nawaf Al-Ahmad, may God protect and preserve him," columnist Talal Al-Saeed wrote for Al-Seyassah daily.

"We in Kuwait do not have declared parties, but every citizen or every group of citizens who represent a party themselves, has their own point of view that they defend strongly, and some of us try to impose our point of view on others!

"Yes, there are undeclared parties, some of which are managed from abroad, and there are disputes and disagreements that have a beginning and no end, but what is certain is that we all come together in love for Kuwait, and love for His Highness the Amir Sheikh Nawaf Al-Ahmad, may God protect and preserve this great leader who enjoys an unparalleled popular support. It is unprecedented and no country in the world has witnessed it. The young before the old, the woman and the man, without exception, all unite in their love for the Amir, the leader, the humanitarian father, who imposed his love and respect on evbelieving in God Alm ing God Almighty for himself and for his people.

"He has a great character and a thankful, witty tongue. He puts his interlocutors to shame with his extreme humility and fragrant conduct. It is not only the Kuwaitis who love him, but even the expatriate brothers residing on the land of Kuwait who have the same feelings for the Amir, may God protect him. As for the people of Kuwait, there is no Kuwaiti family that does not know this great personality closely, and even feels that he is a caring father for the one who loves him and he loves in return.

"This is an unprecedented consensus on the love and respect of Nawaf Al-Khair, who has white hands, a big heart and clear patriotic stances. Therefore, you find everyone on the land of Kuwait sincerely praying for his speedy recovery.

"Oh God, you know that our human prince is fair to us and loved by us. Oh God, hasten his recovery and grant him good health and well-being.

"We call on you by your greatest name, by which if we call on you, you respond, to remove all harm from Sheikh Nawaf Al-Ahmad, return him to his people unharmed, and reward him on our behalf with the best reward in this world and the hereafter. From us is sincere supplication, and from you, Glory be to You, is the answer, and our last supplication is praise be to God, Lord of the

Al-Zaid participates in Doha forum

DOHA, Dec 5, (KUNA): Kuwait Red Crescent Society (KRCS) has stressed the importance of developing and strengthening work in the volunteer and relief fields in communities, refining them through participation in specialized forums.

This came in a statement made by the Director of Public Relations and Media Department at KRCS Khaled Al-Zaid to KUNA on the sidelines of participation in the Fourth Gulf Voluntary Work Forum for Red Crescent societies from the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) countries, which Doha is hosting for two

In the forum, volunteers will participate in exchanging experiences between them, he said, indicating its importance in highlighting capabilities and talents in the fields of volunteer and relief work.

The volunteers presented KRCS' vision regarding plans for volunteers in dealing with disasters and emergency crises and their efforts in relief work, Al-Zaid pointed out.

He stated that International Volunteer Day falls on December 5 yearly, which comes in honor of volunteers and in recognition of the great humanitarian services they provide to local communities everywhere.

'Building dhows one of oldest crafts'

Kuwaiti retirees master handicrafts making amid govt encouragement

By Fawaz Karami

KUWAIT CITY, Dec 5, (KUNA): Hussein Al-Bazzaz carefully examined an unfinished statuette of a wooden dhow, the "Kuwaiti Al-boom," relishing the moments of gazing at the product of meticulous work that had lasted for a month and a half and now decorated center of his diwaniah.

The 74-year-old Kuwaiti craftsman, Bu Waleed, said in an interview with Kuwait News Agency (KUNA) that building dhows is one of the oldest Kuwaiti crafts and has remained a symbol of prosperous trade in the old times and ancestors' skills both in commerce and handwork.

Nowadays, building the wooden boats, "Al-Gallafa," is a craft on the verge of extinction and has become a hobby for some retirees, such as Bu Waleed who spends much of his time in constructing small figures of the

On a recent government resolution to back up Kuwaiti craftsmen and workers, namely the young ones, Bu Waleed said that maintaining traditional professions needs more than financial support because only a countable number of Kuwaitis are practicing the crafts.

He called for establishing special workshops, securing sufficient support for the young citizens willing to turn into artisans and engaging government institutions, citing as a successful example the training of inmates at the central prison on some crafts.

Bu Waleed said that he had met many young Kuwaiti artisans who practice the traditional handworks, in addition to their jobs, however they would need government incubation and care to render these works a reliable source of income.

Salman Boland, President of the Craftsmen Association, Kuwaiti echoed Bu Waleed's hope that the government support would eventually develop to render the crafts a sustainable source of income for the skilled juniors.

Up to 200 handworks disappeared after the oil discovery and many others would follow, Boland said, noting that the crafts' products are only promoted and sold at exhibitions, popular mar-kets and even through personal acquaintances.

The handcraft requires a lot of time, effort and high costs in addition to difficulties in selling the products, thus government intervention is very much needed to save them, Boland said, suggesting that the relevant authorities organize training courses for the young craftsmen, specialize pavilions for their works at exhibitions and organize

In some Gulf countries, authorities have allocated plots of lands and booths for craftsmen and craftswomen in exchange for token fees. Moreover, the craftsmen are allowed to sell their items at airports, where majority of the clients are tourists interested in carrying souvenirs with them back home.

The ancestors-created handworks are honorable professions that maintain the national identity and heritage, he said, alluding in part to the making of "bishts" and "sadu" weaving in addition to pottery and gold works.

On the other hand, MP Abdulkareem

Al Kandari forwarded queries to all ministers about the procedures they have adopted to respond to the comments of the State Audit Bureau (SAB). He wants to know the number of comments included in SAB's reports from fiscal 2018/2019 to 2022/2023 that were not addressed immediately or within the same fiscal year, comments that were not addressed because of overlapping functions with other institutions, if those responsible for the comments were referred to the Public Prosecution, number of financial violations that SAB recorded against the ministries and their subsidiaries in the last five years, if committees were formed to investigate these violations, recommendations and conclusions of the committees if the response is in the affirmative, copies of decisions issued by the concerned minister, undersecretary or assistant undersecretary to implement the recommendations of investigation committees, number of comments recorded by SAB against the ministries and their subsidiaries from fiscal 2018/2019 to fiscal 2022/2023 which were addressed, number of those not addressed till date, number of repeated comments, if senior officials in the ministries discussed the comments with SAB offimeetings if the answer is 'yes'. In another development, MP Dawoud Maarefi has launched an attack on Minister of Education, Higher Education and Scientific Research Adel Al-Manea; describing him as "a formal minister who lacks the capability to manage the ministry and whose decisions are not considered by some departments.'

cials, and copies of the minutes of such

He wonders how HH the Prime Minister Sheikh Ahmad Nawaf Al-Ahmad Al-Jaber Al-Sabah chooses his ministers and how an official who lacks the required leadership qualities is appointed to a leadership position. He said he received several complaints from citizens about the problems they have encountered at the ministry; indicating that his tasks as a lawmaker do not include the functions of the minister and his senior officials.

He revealed the Coordination Department at the Ministry of Education did not consider the family conditions or traffic jams when it assigned teachers to schools; as a teacher who resides in Bayan or Mishref was assigned to a school in Jahra. He added this departmentis simply ignoring the directives of Al-Manea.

individuals like criminals. He then urged the minister to "address the shortcomings or resign." Al-Manea has been subjected to a series of parliamentary queries, which seem to support the allegation that a grilling motion will be filed against National Assembly Deputy Speaker Muhammad Al-Mutair forwarded the same queries to Minister of Finance Fahd Al-Jarallah and Minister of Electricity, Water and Renewable Energy and acting Minister of Public Works Jassem Al-Ostad. Before starting his queries, the lawmaker highlighted the importance of the establishment of Terminal Two (T2) and its essential role in realizing the Kuwait 2035 vision and transforming the country into an international financial center. He pointed out that despite its utmost importance, the project has been delayed and the total cost increased by almost KD2 million. He disclosed that some parties like Jazeera Airways are manipulating State properties by allocating land for the establishment of its own Terminal Six (T6), as mentioned in the meeting held on Nov 7, 2023 by the investment analysts at Jazeera Airways; while the chairman of Kuwait Airways Corporation (KAC) said the national carrier will provide services at T2 without additional advantages.

Thus, Al-Mutair asked the two ministers to provide him with copies of all relevant correspondences, including the approvals of concerned institutions on the allocation of land for Jazeera Airways; economic and operative effects of not allowing Jazeera Airways flights at T2 which constitute roughly 30 percent of the Kuwaiti air transportation market. He quoted the KAC chairman as saying that half of the revenues of Jazeera Airways come from its investment in Terminal Five (T5); so he wants to know the legal basis for Jazeera Airways to obtain such revenues, if any. He added the KAC chairman also revealed that Jazeera Airways is getting more privileges than KAC, because of certain official decisions. Therefore, he inquired about all the privileges granted to Jazeera Airways compared to that of KAC; as well as all the fees collected from the passengers of Jazeera Airways, either directly or indirectly.

in the shadow of the unprecedented and dangerous tragedy and humanitarian catastrophe resulting from the Israeli aggression on the Palestinian

Addressing the summit inaugural session, the Amir said the Israeli occupiers breached in the occupied Palestine all humanitarian, moralistic and religious norms and values. Regretfully and in spite of the scope of the "crime and the wide-spread protests throughout the world, some official quarters continue to neglect the Palestinian people's calls for a cease-fire," he said. He was alluding to the ongoing Israeli aggression on Gaza Strip that began more than 55 days ago, claiming nearly 16,000 lives among the Gazans.

"It is shameful that the international community has allowed this brazen crime to proceed for nearly two months, with systematic killing of the innocent and the unarmed namely children and women," the Qatari Amir said.

The aggressors have targeted the infrastructure in Gaza, cut off power and water supplies, stopped entry of medicines, demolished hospitals, mosques and key installations in the enclave. "All this has been done at the pretext of self defense although the occupation cannot be justified as such according the international laws."

The Qatari Amir Sheikh Tamim said peoples throughout the world "have been wondering what is the meaning of the term international community. Why it has turned its back to the killing of the children in Palestine ...'

"The international legitimacy may become a victom of this barbaric war.' Qatar that had mediated a truce in the past was ready to renew it "but truces are not alternative to a compre-

KUWAIT CITY, Dec 5: The Ministry of Communications recently announced the start of the nomination process for supervisory positions in all sectors from those who had not previously applied, in accordance with the regulations accompanying resolution No. 184/2023.

The ministry invited those wishing to submit an application to visit the Administrative Affairs Department in Shuwaikh - Building No. 2, floor 3, Employment Affairs Department during the period scheduled to receive applications, which is from December 4 to December 14.

Meanwhile, informed sources in the ministry revealed a tendency towards implementing the electronic messaging system in all its sectors for sending internal letters between sectors and departments, as this will contribute to avoiding delays and slowness in the documentary cycle that disrupts the work mechanism

within the ministry

The sources explained that electronic correspondence will enable the ministry to respond to all letters and correspondence received to and from other government agencies, especially with the regulatory authorities, including the Financial Controllers Bureau and the State Audit Bureau.

They affirmed that the ministry provides full support to the bureau's team to enable it to complete all the documents and send the information it re-

Decree issued to amend retirement pension law

PADA chief hails nod to amending law

KUWAIT CITY, Dec 5: A decree has been issued amending the Retirement Pension and Benefits for Military Personnel Law, which stipulates the minimum retirement pension for those supporting seven children or more shall be KD1.615 based on the total pension, contributions and due increments; regardless of the year of their determination, name and the party bearing them, reports Al-Anba daily.

The amendment stipulates that through the decision of the concerned minister and after the approval of the board of firectors of the Public Institution for Social Security (PIFSS); the minimum pension of other retirees is KD1,010 for a single woman; KD1,126 for a married person with no dependents; KD1,196 for a person supporting one child; KD1,265 for a person who supports two children; KD1,335 for someone who has three children; KD1,405 for someone who has four children; KD1,475 for someone who has five children and KD1,545 for someone who supports six children.

The decision also specifies the rules and conditions for the subsidy and the consequences of changing the social status of the pensioner in terms of continuing to disburse the amount of the increase of the minimum or modifying it. The decision may be issued by the minister in case of the absence of the board of directors, provided that it is presented at the first meeting.

The decree allows the minimum limit for retirement pensions to be amended upward by a decision of the minister after the approval of the board of directors. The decree stipulates that in all cases, what is due in accordance with the amended provisions of Article Seven may not be less than what is due before the date it takes effect and PIFSS shall bear the financial burdens resulting from the application of the provisions of

Meanwhile, the Director General of the Public Authority for Disabled Affairs (PADA) Al-Humaidi Al-Mutairi expressed his happiness over the approval of some amendments to Disabled Affairs Law No. 8/2010, reports Al-Anba daily.

As per the directives of His Highness the Amir Sheikh Nawaf Al-Ahmad, His Highness the Crown Prince Sheikh Mishal Al-Ahmad and Minister of Social, Family and Childhood Affairs Sheikh Firas Al-Saud; the country focuses on comprehensive care for people with disabilities. The amendments are aimed at supporting those taking care of people with disabilities and the handicapped themselves to provide them with a decent life, Al-Mutairi disclosed.

On the other hand, Al-Mutairi confirmed that the concerned entities like the Activities and Media Department in welfare homes affiliated with the Medical, Psychological and Social Services Sector: and welfare homes and the Vocational Rehabilitation Department affiliated with the Educational and Rehabilitation Services Sector at PADA will organize the celebration of the International Day of Persons with Disabilities with the theme, "I Am Talented", at the Avenues Mall on Dec 7.

He said this event will highlight the importance of the role of the disabled, their skills and abilities, wavs to integrate them into society, identify the outcomes of integration, activate and employ them in developing society and raise their status economically, socially and psycho-

In addition, Deputy Director General of Educational and Rehabilitation Services and the authority's official spokesman Mubarak Al-Badah revealed that Kuwait is one of the first countries that paid attention to persons with disabilities. He said this has been demonstrated since the 1950s through

UK unveils rules to 'cut' net migration

LONDON, Dec 5, (AP): The British government announced tough new immigration rules Monday that it says will reduce the number of people able to move to the U.K. each year by hundreds of thousands.

Home Secretary James Cleverly said he was taking "robust action" to lower authorized immigration, which hit a record level of almost 750,000 people in 2022. Critics said the moves would leave overstretched sectors like health and social care at a break-

Freezing rain kills 3: Freezing rain and cold weather buffeting Germany were blamed for traffic accidents that left three dead on Tuesday while Munich Airport temporarily suspended flights.

One student was killed in a crash involving a school bus in the Erzgebirge mountains in the eastern German state of Saxony, police said. At least 10 other schoolchildren were taken to a hospital. Two adults, including the bus driver, were seriously injured.

The bus skidded into the side of a winter road maintenance vehicle in Sehmatal county near the Czech border, German news agency dpa reported. It then crashed head-on into a tree and and the impact was so strong that it completely destroyed the front of the vehicle.

In Munich, all flights were either canceled or post-poned between 6 a.m. and noon (0500-1100 GMT), with the airport warning that many flights scheduled for later in the day might also be affected by the severe weather conditions

Russian shelling hits city, killing 2: Russian artillery struck the southern Ukrainian city of Kherson on Tuesday morning, local officials said, killing at least two people in the street as the 21-month war drags into

'The medics who arrived promptly at the scene could only declare their deaths," Prokudin said of the victims on Telegram.

The head of the Kherson city administration, Roman Mrochko, added that a medical facility also was struck, wounding two medics.

Heavy snowfall hits Moscow: Heavy snowfall has hit the Russian capital, disrupting traffic on roads and flights in and out of three Moscow airports, officials and media reported on Monday.

The snowfall that began Sunday and continued overnight has brought an additional 23 centimeters (nine inches) to already high levels of snow in Moscow, according to deputy mayor Pyotr Biryukov. About 135,000 people and 18,000 pieces of equipment were involved in the snow-clearing effort.

Nearly 200 trucks got stuck in the snow over the past 24 hours, and required assistance from road traffic workers, the Moscow transport department reported.

A total of 53 flights were delayed and five more were canceled on Monday morning in three out of four Moscow airports, Russian business daily Vedomosti reported. Most of the delays occurred at the Sheremetyevo airport north of the capital.

'Strategic discussion needed first': Hungarian Prime Minister Viktor Orban demanded on Monday that Ukraine's membership in the European Union and billions of euros in funding meant for the war-torn country be taken off the agenda at a summit of the bloc's leaders next week.

In a letter to European Council President Charles Michel, who will chair the Dec 14-15 summit in Brussels, Orban insisted that a "strategic discussion" is needed first about Ukraine's European future and warned that forcing a decision could destroy EU unity.

Decisions on EU's enlargement and a review of its long-term budget, which includes 50 billion euros ($54.1 billion) in aid for Kyiv, can only be taken unanimously by all 27 member countries.

Plane makes emergency landing in Paris: A small twin-engine plane was forced to make an emergency landing Monday in the southern Paris suburbs, France's civil aviation safety agency said.

French media said the aircraft landed near a populated area in the town of Villejuif.

Sebastien Barthe, the communications director for the safety agency known as BEA for short, said the cause of the unplanned landing was a "technical problem" and that four people were on board the plane, including the pilot.

Judges reject demand by prosecutors: International judges on Monday rejected a demand by prosecutors for a nearly complete ban on prison visits for three former Kosovo Liberation Army leaders on trial at The Hague for war crimes.

Kosovo ex-President Hashim Thaci, former parliamentary Speaker Kadri Veseli and ex-lawmaker Rexhep Selimi face charges including murder, torture and persecution during and after the 1998-1999 war with Serbia.

The three defendants have been in custody since November 2020. Prosecutors called on the judges to limit their prison visits to only their lawyers or close relatives, saying that the three were attempting to tamper with witnesses and leak confidential testimony.

Explosion leveled home in Va: A massive explosion at a duplex where police were investigating reports of shots fired shook a Washington, DC, suburb Monday and destroyed the home.

All officers escaped serious injury but it was unclear what happened to the suspect who was inside the home when it was leveled by the explosion, Arlington County, Virginia, police spokesperson Ashley

Officers went to the home at about 4:45 pm after receiving reports of shots fired. They later determined the shots came from a flare gun, Savage said. While police investigated, they obtained a search warrant for the home.

When police later attempted to execute the warrant the suspect fired several rounds inside the home and the explosion occurred just before 8:30 p.m., shooting flames and debris into the air police said. (AP)

5.1 quake hits Hawaii: A magnitude 5.1 earthquake on the Big Island of Hawaii was felt widely Monday, but there were no reports of damage or injury, officials said.

The earthquake hit at 5:54 pm near the Kilauea volcano at a depth of 1 mile (1.6 kilometers) below sea level, according to a statement from the Hawaiian Volcano Observatory. The initial quake and a magnitude 3.0 aftershock were not related to volcanic activity, the statement said.

"Aftershocks will likely continue, some large enough to be felt locally. We see no detectable changes in activity at Kilauea as a result of these earthquakes," the observatory said. There was no risk of a tsunami, officials said. (AP)

Burgum ends '24 GOP presidential bid

BISMARCK, North Dakota, Dec 5, (AP): North Dakota Gov Doug Burgum ended his long-shot presidential campaign on Monday, blaming his inability to resonate in the race on the Republican National Committee's strict requirements to qualify for the debate stage.

The second-term governor and wealthy software entrepreneur dropped his bid just hours before the RNC was to release the list of candidates who had met the polling and donor qualifications for the fourth debate, being held Wednesday in Alabama. He also failed to qualify for the third debate last month.

He blamed the RNC, which sets qualifications for the debates, for "nationalizing the primary process and taking the power of democracy away from the engaged, thoughtful citizens of Iowa and New Hampshire."

Mission

"It is not their mission to reduce competition and restrict fresh ideas by 'narrowing the field' months before the Iowa caucuses or the first in the nation New Hampshire primary," Burgum wrote in his statement announcing his departure. "These arbitrary criteria ensure advantages for candidates from major media markets on the coasts versus America's Heartland. None of their debate criteria relate to the qualifications related to actually doing the job of the president."

An RNC spokesperson did not immediately respond to a request for comment on Burgum's remarks.

Burgum was little known nationally when he launched his 2024 presidential campaign in June, touting his priorities of energy, the economy and national security, as well as his small-town roots and leadership of the sparsely populated state.

He participated in the first two Republican debates, meeting donor requirements of the Republican National Committee by offering $20 Biden Relief Cards - a jab at rising inflation rates during President Joe Biden's term - in exchange for $1 donations. The tactic drew skepticism over its legality, though Burgum's campaign said its legal advisers had reviewed and approved the method.

Ultimately, he was unable to gain much traction against his rivals in a contest dominated by former President Donald Trump. He joins former Vice President Mike Pence, Sen Tim Scott of South Carolina, radio show host Larry Elder, businessman Perry Johnson, former Texas congressman Will Hurd and Miami Mayor Francis Suarez in suspending his bid.

Burgum had been one of two lowertier candidates scheduled to appear this coming weekend at an event billed as an "action conference" in South Carolina, hosted by the state GOP.

Burgum injected millions of his own money into the race, accounting for $12.2 million of the $15.1 million raised by his campaign from March through September, according to Federal Election Commission filings. A super PAC supporting his bid spent over $19 million from July to November, according to filings.

Burgum nearly missed his first opportunity for national public exposure when he ruptured his Achilles tendon the day before the inaugural debate in August in Milwaukee. But he persevered through, later telling reporters that he stood on one leg behind the podium.

Former North Dakota Republican Gov Ed Schafer called Burgum's campaign "pretty gutsy." But hailing from such a little-populated state, with just three electoral votes and little national profile, brings no leverage or power, Schafer said.

"In the structure of a presidential race, it's virtually impossible for a state like North Dakota to play in the game," said Schafer, a former US agriculture secretary. Raising campaign money from North Dakota also presents an increasing challenge, he added.

Burgum is in his second term as governor and is eligible for a third in 2024, though he hasn't indicated whether he plans to run again. He and his family will gather over the holidays "to consider future possibilities," said senior

Ex-career US diplomat charged: A former career American diplomat was charged with serving as a secret agent for communist Cuba going back decades in what prosecutors portrayed as one of the most brazen and long-running betrayals in the history of the US foreign service. Manuel Rocha wept as he sat handcuffed in Miami federal court on charges that he engaged in "clandestine activity" on Cuba's behalf since at least 1981 - the year he joined the US foreign service - including by meeting with Cuban intelligence operatives and providing false information to US gov-

"This action exposes one of the highest-reaching and longest-lasting infiltrations of the United States government by a foreign agent," Attorney General Merrick Garland said in a statement. Niger's junta revokes security agreements

ABUJA, Nigeria, Dec 5, (AP): Niger's junta on Monday scrapped two key military agreements that the West African nation signed with the European Union to help fight the violence in Africa's Sahel region as the country's army leaders and a senior Russian defense official discussed military cooperation.

Before the coup that deposed the country's president, Mohamed Bazoum, Niger had been the West and Europe's last major security partner in the Sahel, the vast region south of the Sahara Desert that Islamic extremist groups have turned into the global terror hot

In a memo, Niger's foreign affairs ministry said the government has decided to "withdraw the privileges and immunities granted" under the EU Military Partnership Mission in Niger that was launched in February and consequently "has no legal obligation" related to that partnership.

It also dismissed the EU Capacity-Building Civilian Mission established in 2012 to strengthen Niger's internal security sector, effectively revoking its approval for the missions

The developments are the latest in growing political tensions between Niger and the EU since the July coup.

In a rare visit on Sunday, a Russian delegation led by Russia's Deputy Minister of Defense Lounous-Bek Evkourov met with Niger's junta leader, Gen. Abdourahmane Tchiani, and Minister of State for National Defense Salifou Mody. The two sides held more meetings on Monday to discuss military and defense

Cleverly visits Rwanda to try to unblock plan: British Home Secretary James Cleverly flew to Rwanda on Tuesday in a bid to revive a plan to send asylum-seekers to the East African country that has been blocked by UK courts. The UK government said Cleverly will meet his

Rwandan counterpart, Vincent Biruta, to sign a new treaty and discuss next steps for the troubled "migration and economic development partnership. "Rwanda cares deeply about the rights of refugees, and I look forward to meeting with counterparts to sign this agreement and further discuss how we work together to tackle the global challenge of illegal migration," Cleverly said. The Rwanda plan is central to the Conservative government's self-imposed goal of stopping unauthorized asylum-seekers arriving on small boats across the English Channel.

Critics say it is both unethical and unworkable to send migrants to a country 4,000 miles (6,400 kilometers) away, with no chance of ever settling in the UK.

Embalo issues decree dissolving parliament:

Guinea-Bissau President Umaro Sissoco Embalo issued a decree Monday dissolving the nation's opposition-controlled parliament, less than six months after it was reconstituted following a similar move by the president in 2022.

Embalo cited last week's shootout between troops loyal to him and forces controlled by the parliament, which he described as a failed coup.
"The date for holding the next legislative elections will be set in due time in accordance with the provisions of ... the Constitution," the decree stated. "This Presidential Decree comes into force immediately."

On Monday night, Embalo deployed soldiers at the headquarters of the state television and radio as he sought to change the heads of the broadcast stations said to be loyal to the parliament. "Everything is going well in Bissau," the nation's leader said as he attempted to allay fears of yet another political crisis in the capital city. "Democratic achievements are respected and maintained.'

Rescuer raises hope of survivors at mine: A member of a rescue team raised hope Monday that there may be survivors at a Zambian mine where more than 30 informal miners have been trapped under debris for days and presumed dead after heavy rain caused landslides.

Rescuers have been searching for the miners since early Friday after they were buried Thursday night while digging tunnels at an open-pit mine near the city of Chingola on the country's copper belt.

"We are getting close and expect to find survivors as there is some voices we are hearing from one of the tunnels," Wiva Chanda, an informal miner from the area helping with the rescue effort, told The Associated Press by telephone. "There is hope but I think it will be a mix of survivors and dead bodies.

Heavy rains, landslides kill at least 47: At least 47 people are dead and 85 others injured following heavy flooding and landslides in northern Tanzania, authorities said Monday.

The government has deployed the military to help rescue hundreds of people trapped by the flooding which has been described as the worst in years in the East African nation.

The flooding occurred near Mount Hanang in the north. Houses, roads and bridges have been destroyed, complicating ongoing rescue efforts.

President Samia Suluhu Hassan, who is attending the U.N. climate summit in Dubai, said she was cutting short her trip to return to Tanzania due to the tragedy.

"I send my sincere condolences to the affected families and have directed all our security forces to deploy to the area and help those affected," she said in a video message.

Bus crashes in western Thailand, killing 14 and injuring more than 30

A bus crashed in western Thailand early Tuesday, killing 14 people and injuring more than 30 others, officials said. The accident occurred in Prachuap Khiri Khan province as the bus was traveling from the capital, Bangkok, to Songkhla province in the deep south. It was carrying 49 people when it ran off the road and hit a tree near Hat Wanakorn National Park, a local police official said. Prachuap Khiri Khan province is located on a coastal stretch between the Gulf of Thailand and Myanmar.

"We presume the driver might have fallen asleep," said Pol Col Weerapat Ketesa, the superintendent of the Huay Yang Police Station, adding that officials were waiting for the result of a blood test on the driver, who survived the accident.

Police were still investigating what caused the crash, he added.

Most victims were Thai and a few were Burmese, Weerapat said. Some 35 people were being treated for injuries at local hospitals, according to the Sawang Rungrueang Rescue Foundation. (AP)

5 bodies found in car: The bodies of five young men were found stuffed in a vehicle on a dirt road in north-central Mexico, authorities said.

Diego Sinhue Rodríguez, the governor of the state of Guanajuato, pledged an "exhaustive" investigation into the killings.

The car and the bodies were found Sunday in a rural area on the outskirts of the city of Celaya, which has seen a spate of drug cartel violence in recent years. The area is located outside a local university.

Local media reported the men had been shot to death, but prosecutors did not immediately confirm that. In June, a drug cartel set off a car bomb in Celaya aimed at law enforcement, killing a National Guard officer. National Guard officers were reportedly responding to information about a car parked with what appeared to be bodies inside. As they approached, the vehicle exploded, sending officers flying.

Authorities blamed the Santa Rosa de Lima cartel, which for years has fought a bloody turf war with the Jalisco cartel for control of Guanajuato. (AP)

Mexico halts deportations: The head of Mexico's immigration agency has ordered the suspension of migrant deportations and transfers due to a lack of funds amid a record-setting year for migration through the country's territory.

CANBERRA, Australia, Dec 5, (AP): Papua New Guinea Prime Minister James Marape said Tuesday he will sign a bilateral security pact with Australia during a visit this week.

Marape said the agreement to be signed with his Australian counterpart Anthony Albanese on Thursday will involve Australian police officers working under the command of Papua New Guinea Police Commissioner David Manning.

"The security arrangement is in the best interest of Papua New Guinea and also for Australia and its regional security interests," Marape said in a state-

Papua New Guinea signed with the United States sparked student protests in May in the South Pacific island nation's second-largest city, Lae, Marape announced the Australian pact would be delayed.

Papua New Guinea's deputy prime minister, John Rosso, told Australian Broadcasting Corp. that the latest agreement would aim to build the capabilities of both the developing nation's military and police.

The boats apparently embarked from Bangladesh and are reported to have been at sea for about two weeks, he said.

The captain of one of the boats, contacted by the AP, said he had 180 to 190 people on board. They were out of food and water and the engine was damaged. The captain, who gave his name as Maan Nokim, said he feared all on board will die if they do not receive help.

On Sunday, Nokim said the boat was 320 kilometers (200 miles) from Thailand's west coast. A Thai navy spokesperson, contacted Monday, said he had no information about the boats.

The location is about the same distance from Indonesia's northernmost province of Aceh, where another boat with 139 people landed Saturday on Sabang Island, off the tip of Sumatra, Baloch said. KIB adds multi-currency ATM to its expansive network

Kuwait International Bank (KIB) announced that it has installed a new multi-currency ATM at the Kuwait International Airport, as part of efforts to continue providing a seamless, comprehensive and distinctive banking experience for its customers. This step falls in line with the Bank's integrated strategy aimed at strengthening the ATM network using the latest technology. It also stems from KIB's commitment to continue developing its services and products to meet all customer needs as a "Bank for Life." Commenting on the initiative, Ahmad Abdullah Alanazi, Assistant Manager Retail Banking at KIB, said: "We are currently witnessing fast-moving transitions and successive developments in the banking market with every passing second. This pushes us to continuously renew the definition of a convenient and easy banking experience.

Committing to our motto and main vision 'Bank for Life,' we continue to monitor and keep abreast of all new technologies that we believe can contribute, directly or indirectly, to enhancing our customers' banking experience and ensuring the quality of services suited to their modern lifestyle."

Alanazi pointed out that the banking sector in Kuwait continues to affirm its keenness to offer practical solutions that meet customer requirements and exceed their expectations, in step with the development of modern financial technology. He also highlighted that KIB's multi-currency ATM is located at Jazeera Airways Terminal 5 (T5). The new ATM will allow cash withdrawal in four different major currencies:the UAE dirham,the Kuwaiti dinar, the US dollar, and the British pound, without the need to visit any of the Bank's branches. KIB customers can still benefit from its network of ATMs available all around the country to complete all basic banking operations, such as cash withdrawals and deposits, transfer of funds between accounts, PIN management, and cardless withdrawals using their civil ID and mobile phone number.

Ooredoo, Zain & TASC Towers create largest tower company in MENA region valued at USD 2.2 billion

Operating model will provide passive infrastructure as service, supporting reduction of MENA's carbon footprint

KUWAIT CITY, Dec 5: Ooredoo Q.P.S.C. ("Ooredoo") - Ticker: ORDS and Mobile Telecommunications Company K.S.P.C ("Zain Group") -Ticker: Zain announce the signing of definitive agreements between Ooredoo Group, Zain Group and TASC Towers Holding ("TASC") to create the largest tower company in the MENA region, in a cash and share deal.

The enlarged tower company, comprising approximately 30,000 towers, has a combined estimated current enterprise value of USD2.2 billion. Ooredoo and Zain will equally retain a substantial stake of 49.3% each in the newly restructured entity, through an asset and cash equalization process. The founders of TASC will retain the remaining shareholding, through Digital Infrastructure Assets LLP, and will continue to manage the operations of the business.

The tower entity is expected to achieve run-rate revenues close to USD 500 million annually, with an EBITDAaL(after leases) of more than USD 200 million annually upon the completion of closings in all individual countries—including Qatar, Kuwait, Jordan, Iraq, Algeria, and Tunisia. This financial position underpins the promising prospects and profitability of the newly restructured tower company.

The chairmanship of the Tower company rotates every two years between Zain and Ooredoo, beginning with Bader Al-Kharafi as Chairman and Aziz Aluthman Fakhroo as Vice-Chairman.

realising key aspects of both Ooredoo and Zain's strategies, focused on evolving into smart telcos and creating value-focused portfolio. It also reaffirms the commitment of Ooredoo, Zain and TASC to drive growth and value for shareholders.

In a joint commentary, Aziz Aluthman Fakhroo, MD and Group CEO, Ooredoo;Bader Al-Kharafi, Zain Vice-Chairman & Group CEO; and Iyad Mazhar,Founder &CEO of TASC said: "This pioneering deal embarks us on an exciting journey together as it results in the establishment of the region's argest independent Tower company, placing the MENA region on the world telecom tower map. It also positions the region as an advanced player in the global telecoms landscape, and we anticipate wide-ranging positive implications for the region - from economic growth and upgraded connectivity to

"This strategic transaction will unlock significant shareholder value through higher earnings multiples, as well as ensure capital efficiency, optimising balance sheets for our respective companies and creating new possibilities for investors. The deal also demonstrates our joint dedication to supporting the reduction of the region's carbon footprint, contributing to our vision of reshaping the telecommunications sector by building a more sustainable ecosystem and ensuring a betterconnected future for our communities across the region," the CEOs concluded.

As an independent tower company, leveraging the combined assets of Ooredoo and Zain, TASC will offer Passive Infrastructure as a Service (PIaaS) in a partnership model. This creates unprecedented opportunities for all mobile network operators, offering a capital-efficient alternative to building, owning and managing their own passive infrastructurein a cost-efficient and environmentally friendly manner. This partnership model is well-equipped to meet the needs of other mobile network operators seeking to reduce costs, lower carbon emissions, and address the increasing demand for sites driven by double digit growth in mobile data consumption across the region.

Both Ooredoo and Zain will retain their respective active infrastructure, including wireless communication antennas, intelligent software, and intellectual property with respect to managing their telecom networks.

The expected timeline for the completion of this transaction contemplates initial market closings in 2024. The phased implementation, tailored for each market and adhering to the regulatory environment, is subject to regulatory approvals, ensuring a seamless transition of operations. Ooredoo's tower network in Oman is following a stand-alone process.

Morgan Stanley acted as the exclusive financial advisor to the Ooredoo Group, and Citigroup Global Markets Ltd acted as the exclusive financial advisor to Zain Group and TASC Towers Holding on this transaction. DLA Piper acted as the legal advisors for Ooredoo, and both Herbert Smith Freehills (HSF) and Norton Rose. (NRF) jointly acted as the legal advisors of Zain Group and TASC Towers Holding. Shearman & Sterling (S&S) acted as the legal advisors of Digital Infrastructure Assets.

Kuwait's DGCA inks MoUs of cooperation with 5 countries

RIYADH, Dec 5, (KUNA): The Directorate General of Civil Aviation (DGCA) signed on Monday memorandum of understanding for cooperation with five countries during the ICAO Air Service Negotiations Event, ICAN 2023, currently held in Riyadh.

In a press briefing Acting Director-General of the DGCA, Eng. Emad Al-Jalawi mentioned meetings with representatives of Ethiopia, Italy, Iceland, Seychelles, and Turkiye were held on the sidelines of the event.

During the meetings, memorandum of understanding and special agreements were signed with those states especially for organizing air transport to better meet the needs of affiliated air carriers.

Furthermore meetings in the upcoming days will commence with other countries until the last day of the conference, December 7, which will focus on updating air transport mechanisms with positive impacts linking the Kuwait International Airport with the largest number of airports worldwide to better serve passengers and airlines.

He also eagerly talked about the importance of the conference to upgrade operational mechanisms with countries with which "our national carriers work" to better operate inbound and outbound flights from the Kuwait International Airport, in order to achieve the goals set by the national air carriers and serve the desired economic goals.

The signing of this landmark transaction constitutes a major milestone towards technological improvements and increased global relevance.

67% Kuwaiti employees satisfied with salaries & benefits

Yearly raises under microscope: Employee feedback

KUWAIT CITY, Dec 5: A new survey conducted by Bayt.com, the Middle East's #1 job site, titled "Bayt. com Middle East and North Africa Salary Survey 2023" sheds light on employee satisfaction levels with their current salaries and the factors influencing those levels. More than half of respondents (67%) expressed high or medium levels of satisfaction with their current salary. Additionally, the research found that 54% of respondents are satisfied with the benefits they receive from their current company.

The survey aimed to comprehend the level of satisfaction employees experienced with the raises they received in the past year and their expectations for future salary increases. Notably, 45% of the respondents received a salary raise up to 10% in the past year, with 35% expressing satisfaction with the increase. Looking ahead to 2024, 23% of the respondents anticipate a salary raise of up to 10%. These findings underscore the significance of fair compensation practices in attracting and retaining talented employees.

Ola Haddad - Director of Human Resources at Bayt.com at Bayt.com said: "The findings from our latest survey offer Kuwait organizations an opportunity to reflect on their compensation strategies and address the factors that influence employee satisfaction. By prioritizing fair and competitive salaries, coupled with a comprehensive range of benefits and growth opportunities, organizations can truly empower their workforce, foster loyalty, and create a thriving environment that attracts and retains top talent."

In terms of gender pay parity, 32% of respondents believed that salaries offered to both men and women in their companies were equal.

Insights into Salary and Benefits in Kuwait

The survey unveiled that 57% of respondents receive just a basic salary, while personal medical insurance (25%), transportation allowance (18%), bonus (25%), and family medical insurance (9%) were cited as the top benefits received by employees. A majority of respondents (77%) have a monthly income of US$3000 or less, with 34% earning less than

According to the research findings, one-quarter of respondents currently hold middle management and mid-level executive positions without managerial responsibilities. Moreover, 41% of the respondents have been working in their respective industries for up to six years. Impressively, 75% of the respondents have been with their current employer for six years or less, with 40% having been employed for less than three years.

The survey also revealed that 49% of respondents have up to 10 employees reporting to them, illustrating their influence and level of responsibility within their organizations. When asked about their position in their career path, 60% of respondents described themselves as being between fairly senior and midpoint seniority. The research also indicated that 59% of respondents held one or two jobs over the past five years, while 36% held three jobs or more.

Cost of Living, Savings, and Financial Outlook in In Kuwait, 55% of respondents reported saving up to 35% of their personal income, highlighting that despite the increasing cost of living, substantial savings are still possible. Furthermore, 73% of respondents in the UAE expected further increases in the cost of living in 2024. This makes the ability to save even more important for individuals in order to maintain their financial stability.

Understanding the drivers of employee loyalty is crucial for organizations seeking to create a positive work environment. The survey revealed that while 23% of respondents stated that their loyalty to their company was not influenced by their salary, for 57% of respondents, salary played a significantly influential role in their loyalty to their organization. In addition to compensation, other factors such as the nature of daily responsibilities (33%), career advancement opportunities (26%), colleagues (21%), and training and development opportunities (24%) were found to drive employee loyalty. Zafer Shah - Research Director at YouGov said: "We are pleased to present the findings from the Bayt. com Middle East and North Africa Salary Survey 2023, which provides valuable insights into employee satisfaction levels in the region and the key factors influencing them. Fair compensation practices are critical to attracting and retaining talented employees, complemented by a comprehensive range of benefits and growth opportunities, organizations can empower their workforce and foster loyalty, creating a thriving environment that attracts and retains top talent.'

Data for the Bayt.com Middle East and North Africa Salary Survey 2023 was collected online from October 2 to 18, 2023. Results are based on a sample of 6,734 respondents from the following countries: UAE, KSA, Kuwait, Oman, Qatar, Bahrain, Lebanon, Jordan, Iraq, Palestine, Syria, Egypt, Morocco, Tuni-

'Curbs only phased out after consideration of market conditions'

OPEC+ oil production cuts can continue past March if needed: Saudi

DUBAI, Dec 5: The OPEC+ oil production cuts can "absolutely" continue past the first quarter if needed, Saudi Energy Minister Prince Abdulaziz bin Salman said, as he pledged the curbs would be delivered in full. The supply reductions announced last week of more than 2 million barrels a day - about half of which are coming from Saudi Arabia - will only be withdrawn after consideration of market conditions and using a "phased-in approach," he said. As the prince was speaking to

Bloomberg, crude prices remained below the level seen before the OPEC+ meeting, trading near $78 a barrel in London. Oil has failed to find renewed momentum after market-watchers noted that only about half of the cuts are entirely new, and also questioned whether all of the promised supply reductions will actually materialize. Prince Abdulaziz said these skeptics will be proved wrong.

"I honestly believe that the delivery of the 2.2 million will happen," he said in an interview in Riyadh on Monday. "I honestly believe that 2.2 million will overcome even the usual inventory build that usually happens in the first quarter." There are already signs that demand is improving, he said.

As traders try to gauge the real impact of the agreement between the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and its allies, one of the biggest questions is about Russia. Its contribution comes from export curbs, not outright production cuts as is the case for other OPEC members.

Prince Abdulaziz said he would have preferred to see a reduction in output, but couldn't convince his Russian counterpart. Moscow has long argued that freezing weather and other geological conditions make it more difficult to curb production in the first few months of the year.

"We did try," Prince Abdulaziz said. "We also know it's extremely tough for Russia to cut production in the winter." Even as Riyadh makes the greatest effort to rebalance the oil market, with deeper cuts than any of its allies, Prince Abdulaziz emphasized the level of trust between Riyadh and Moscow, which is the key relationship in OPEC+.

While Russia may not be cutting output, it is carrying out its exports curbs, he said. If Moscow ever falls short of its pledges, as it did earlier this year, it has been transparent and promised to make amends.

"We believe them," Prince Ab-dulaziz said. "I honestly believe they are doing everything by the book.'

It's just as important that Russia has the trust of the market, which requires outside verification, the prince added.

"This is what we've been saying to them: What counts is not us believing you, what counts is the market, the secondary sources, the tanker trackers," the prince said. "You have to approach them, you have to work with them."

Prince Abdulaziz said he has the same faith in key Gulf ally the United Arab Emirates, which has for several years been arguing that it should be allowed to produce more to monetize its massive investments in capacity.

"We would not have done this deal we had believed that they are not doing what they are supposed to do,' he said when asked about the UAE's commitment to the OPEC+ deal.

Taulia adds Bank of China & BNP Paribas to its network

Taulia, a leading provider of working capital management so-lutions, today announced it has added the Bank of China London Branch, and BNP Paribas to its global multi-funder network. The addition of the two major global banks is the most recent in an already large and growing network of funders available to Taulia's global customers, enabling businesses to access an increasingly broad and diverse funding pool, with greater choice, liquidity, and availability of capital. Multifunder models within supply chain finance programs are designed to provide resilience through diversification and a wider pool of funding for different currencies, geographies, client sizes, and credit profiles. Com-bined with the right technology, it also enables businesses to hedge against liquidity risk, particularly during periods of eco-

Will the Biden admin let the merger fly?

Alaska Airlines is buying Hawaiian Airlines for $1 bln in cash

WASHINGTON, Dec 5, (AP): Another proposed airline buyout is renewing debate over whether there has been too much consolidation in the industry and whether consumers are paying the price.

The Biden administration has taken a tough stance against mergers, and it is certain to take a close look at Alaska Air Group's proposed acquisition of Hawaiian Airlines for $1 billion in cash.

The deal is smaller than the mergers that reshaped the airline industry more than a decade ago. But the Justice Department is already fighting another smallish deal - JetBlue's proposal to buy Spirit Airlines.

Alaska Airlines parent Alaska Air Group announced Sunday that it will pay $18 per share for Hawaiian - a huge premium over Hawaiian's closing stock price on Friday. Hawaiian has struggled to recover from the pandemic and new competition from Southwest on intra-islands flights. It has lost $159 million so far this year.

Alaska says Hawaiian will continue to operate as a stand-alone brand, an

Here's some information about each airline, their customer bases, the way antitrust regulators will view the deal, and the impact of past mergers.

Alaska Air Group, based in Seattle, valued the deal at $1.9 billion, which includes the assumption of Hawaiian's $900 million in net debt.

Together the two airlines will have 365 planes and serve 138 destinations, including 29 outside the United States. Shares of Hawaiian Holdings Inc. nearly tripled, closing Monday at $14.22.

Alaska fell 14% to close at $34.08. Many Americans, including travelers in the middle and eastern parts of the country, have never flown on either of these airlines. Alaska Air Group, based in Seattle, is the fifth biggest U.S. airline company by 2022 revenue, slightly ahead of JetBlue, but is not widely known beyond the West Coast. Its biggest operation is in Seattle, and it bulked up in California in 2016 by buying Virgin America for $2.6 billion after a bidding war with JetBlue.

Hawaiian Airlines - only a quarter the size of Alaska Air by revenue operates flights throughout the island chain and to the U.S. mainland and also relies heavily on traffic between Asia and Hawaii. Its only East Coast destinations are New York and Boston.

Alaska and Hawaiian are rather traditional airlines. Their fares are typically in line with larger carriers and higher than those charged by discount airlines. In September, both charged slightly lower than average fares for economy-class seats between Hawaii and the mainland, according to figures from aviation-data firm Cirium.

Helped by generally mild weather. Hawaiian often tops the industry for on-time flights, and Alaska usually ranks near the top too. Both score in the middle for consumer complaint rates, according to U.S. Department of Transportation data.

Alaska says the airlines will operate separately but under a single loyalty program. Currently Alaska has Mileage Plan and its target offers Hawaiian-Miles. It's not clear whether benefits would change much, although Alaska says HawaiianMiles members will be able to earn and spend miles on 29 partner airlines in the Alaska program.

This deal will provide another test for the Biden administration's resolve to preserve competition in various industries

The Justice Department succeeded earlier this year in killing a partnership between JetBlue and American Airlines - a federal judge ruled the alliance was uncompetitive and violated antitrust law - and a trial over the government's lawsuit to stop JetBlue from buying Spirit Airlines is scheduled to wrap up this week.

In the JetBlue-Spirit case, the Justice Department sued because it wants to preserve Spirit, the nation's biggest discount airline. If regulators sue to block the Alaska-Hawaiian deal, they are likely to make a different argument - that it would put too much traffic between Hawaii and the U.S. mainland in the hands of one company.

Between them, Hawaiian and Alaska control about 40% of that market, according to Cirium.

Alaska CEO Ben Minicucci said buying Hawaiian will help it compete against the four biggest U.S. airlines. That is exactly the same argument Jet-Blue made to defend its purchase of Spirit - and that didn't stop the Justice Department from suing.

Henry Harteveldt, a travel analyst for Atmosphere Research Group, said the fact that Alaska is not buying a lowfare airline like Spirit could improve the chances that regulators will let the purchase of Hawaiian go through.

Jamie Baker, an analyst for JPMorgan, said "Alaska-Hawaiian is much more of a plain vanilla, run-of-the-mill merger than, say, JetBlue-Spirit," making regulators less likely to sue.

But William McGee, an airline expert with American Economic Liberties Project, which opposes industry consolidation, said the deal is all about market size, not consumers.

"Nothing about this merger is good for competition or consumers, especially in Hawaii. And the last thing we need is a continuation of the consolidation that has already caused so many problems for air travelers, workers, and entire cities and regions of the country," he said.

The federal government raised few objections to a slew of mergers that consolidated power in the industry. American Airlines, Delta Air Lines, United Airlines and Southwest Airlines control about 80% of the domestic airtravel market, and all of them grew significantly through mergers between 2008 and 2013

Under President Joe Biden, the Justice Department seems to be showing some buyer's remorse that previous administrations didn't try to block mergers that eliminated Northwest, Continental, US Airways and AirTran.

Airfares rose faster than inflation for a time after the initial wave of consolidation, but that trend has cooled. The average fare today for a flight within the United States is 35% lower than in 2000 when adjusted for inflation, according to the Transportation Department. However, fees have grown sharply and partly offset lower fares.

Bitcoin surpasses $41,000 for the first time since April 2022

What's behind the price surge?

NEW YORK, Dec 5, (AP): Bitcoin is once again having a moment. On Monday, the world's largest cryptocurrency soared past $41,000 for the first time in over a year and a half - and marking a 150% rise so far this year.

Volatile bitcoin rocketed from just over $5,000 at the start of the pandemic to nearly $68,000 in November 2021, according to Fact-Set, a period marked by a surge in demand for technology products. Prices fell back to earth during an aggressive series of Federal Reserve rate hikes aimed at taming inflation and then the collapse of FTX, one of the biggest companies

When 2023 began, a single bitcoin could be had for less than $17,000 after losing more than 75% of its value. Investors, however, began returning in large numbers as inflation started to cool. And the collapse of prominent tech-focused banks actually led more investors to turn to crypto as they bailed out of positions in Silicon Valley start-ups and other risky bets.

But fueling this latest rally are prospects for the possible approval of spot bitcoin exchange traded funds - a pooled investment security that can be bought and sold like stocks.

Industry advocates say this new way of investing in bitcoin at spot prices, instead of futures, could make it easier for anyone to enter the cryptoverse while lowering some of the well-documented risks associated with investing in cryptocurrencies. Regulators have previously rejected bitcoin spot ETF applications, but recent wins for some crypto fund managers have improved odds for a first approval, perhaps as soon as next month.

"The longer-term catalyst (for bitcoin) is a lot of optimism related to the potential approval of a spot ETF," Kaiko research analyst Riyad Carey said Monday. He noted, however, that a regulatory green light doesn't promise continued gains.

While analysts expect the potential approval of spot bitcoin ETFs to create a much larger pool of crypto investors, future volumes could go either way, Carey added. That could either boost or undermine bitcoin's value.

Bitcoin's current rally also arrives during an incredibly disruptive period for cryptocurrencies. Just last month, the U.S. government slapped Binance, the world's largest crypto exchange, with a $4 billion fine as its founder Changpeng Zhao pleaded guilty to a felony charge.

But Binance continues to operate and maintain its market share, Carey noted. In some ways, the company's settlement "propelled the market forward more by removing one of the ... more ominous overhangs that was a sort of a big question mark," he said, noting bitcoin's gains in the two weeks since the settlement was announced.

Despite the recent excitement around bitcoin, experts still maintain that crypto is a risky bet with wildly unpredictable fluctuations in value. In short, investors can lose money as

Former top Ohio utility regulator surrenders

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec 5, (AP): Ohio's former top utility regulator surrendered Monday in connection with a $60 million bribery scheme related to a legislative bailout for two Ohio nuclear ower plants that has already resulted in a 20-year prison sentence for a former state House speaker.

Sam Randazzo, former chair of the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio, self-surrendered at U.S. District Court in Cincinnati after being charged in an 11-count indictment that was returned on Nov. 29, U.S. Attorney Kenneth L. Parker's office announced. Randazzo was scheduled for an initial court appearance later in the day.

"Today's indictment outlines an alleged scheme in which a public regulatory official ignored the Ohio consumers he was responsible for protecting, instead taking a bribe from an energy company seeking favors," FBI Cincinnati Special Agent in Charge J. William Rivers said in a statement.

Randazzo, 74, resigned in November 2020 after FBI agents searched his Columbus townhome and FirstEnergy revealed in security filings what it said were bribery payments of $4.3 million for his future help at the commission a month before Republican Gov. Mike DeWine nominated him as Ohio's top quickly as they make it.

He faces one count of conspiring to commit travel act bribery and honest services wire fraud, two counts of travel act bribery, two counts of honest services wire fraud, one count of wire fraud and five counts of making illegal monetary transactions.

A message seeking comment was left for his lawyer. If convicted as charged, the defendant could face up to 20 years in prison. Ohio Consumers' Counsel Maureen

Willis, who represents the state's utility ratepayers, said the indictment was "an important first step to bring justice to Ohio utility consumers" - but that more is needed. "It underscores the need for near-term reform of the PUCO selection process that led to his appointment as Chair of the PUCO," Willis said in a statement. "OCC's calls for reform so far have gone unanswered. Ohioans deserve better from the public officials in this state.'

The long-awaited indictment marks the latest development in what has been labeled the largest corruption case in Ohio history.

Former Ohio House Speaker Larry Householder was sentenced in June to 20 years in prison for his role in orchestrating the scheme, and lobbyist Matt Borges, a former chair of the Ohio Republican Party, was sentenced to five years.

The U.S. attorney's office in Cincinnati indicted three others on racketeering charges in July 2020. Lobbyist Juan Cespedes and Jeffrey Longstreth, a top Householder political strategist, pleaded guilty in October 2020. The third person arrested, statehouse lobbyist Neil Clark, pleaded not guilty before dying by suicide in March 2021. The dark money group used to funnel First-Energy money, Generation Now, also pleaded guilty to a racketeering charge in February 2021.

All were accused of using the $60 million in secretly funded FirstEnergy cash to get Householder's chosen Republican candidates elected to the House in 2018 and then to help him get elected speaker in January 2019. The money was then used to win passage of the tainted energy bill, House Bill 6, and to conduct what authorities have said was a $38 million dirty-tricks campaign to prevent a repeal referendum from reaching the ballot.

For Randazzo's part, prosecutors allege that in November 2019, he included language in a PUCO opinion and order to address a concerning issue FirstEnergy had coming up in 2024.

The stocks of some other crypto players have also seen rises over recent months, but not with the same speed or heights as bitcoin. Ethereum, for example, stood at $2,223 Monday afternoon, up 85% since the start of 2023. Meanwhile, Binance Coin and Dash are down about 5.25% and 24.37% for the year, respectively, with Monday afternoon prices of roughly $231 and $32.

Supreme Court is taking up a case that could rule out a tax on wealth

A decision in favor of Charles and

lican who was Speaker of the House when the tax bill was passed by a Republican Congress and signed into law by then-President Donald Trump, has called the challenge "misguided" and said "a lot of the tax code would be unconstitutional if that thing prevailed." The couple is backed by conservative political groups and business interests, including the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

The law applies to companies that are owned by Americans, but do their business in foreign countries. It imposes a one-time tax on investors' shares of profits that have not been passed along to them, in order to off-based on Charles Moore's investment in an Indian company. They argue that the tax violates the 16th Amendment, which allows the federal government to impose an income tax on Americans. Moore said in a sworn statement that he never received any money from the company, KisanKraft Machine Tools Private Limited.

Some groups allied with the Moores argue that the challenged provision is similar to a wealth tax, which would apply not to the incomes of the very richest Americans, but their assets, like stock holdings, that now only get taxed when they are sold. Democratic Sen. Ron Wyden of Oregon said a court ruling for the Moores could stymie legislation like the Billionaires Income Tax he introduced last week. "The Moore case could make it impossible to close those loopholes," Wyden said.

The case also has kicked up ethical concerns and raised questions about the story the Moores' lawyers told in court filings. Public documents show that Charles Moore's involvement with the company, including serving as a director for five years, is far more extensive than court filings indicate.

Digital disparities exposed

AUK professor's research on Kuwait's digital landscape pioneers in Mideast

KUWAIT CITY, Dec 5: Dr. Fahed Al-Sumait, associate professor of communication at the American University of Kuwait (AUK), collaborated with researchers at the London School of Economics and the Gulf University for Science and Technology (GUST) to publish a report that stands as the first of its kind in the Middle East. The 'Kuwait's Digital Inequalities Report 2022,' featured in the Kuwait Foundation for the Advancement of Sciences (KFAS) 'Al-Tagaddum Al-Ilmi' magazine, offers essential insights into Kuwait's current digital landscape.

Dr. Al-Sumait and his coresearchers Ellen J. Helsper, Cristina Navarro, Nouf Al-Saif, and Nilesh Rau. carried out a national survey that shed light on the factors affecting digital skills and access. This survey was part of a global project known as 'From Digital Skills to Tangible Outcomes' (DiSTO).

The survey, conducted between October 2020 and January 2021 with over 700 adults in Kuwait, unveiled that respondents aged 18-25 demonstrated more than twice the digital skills compared to those over 40; however, these skills are not fully harnessed in professional or educational settings. The survey also indicated a deficiency in navigation skills as the lowest among those recorded, while online social skills dominated, emphasizing the necessity for more accessible ICT skills and media literacy training. Importantly, the report highlighted that the country does not have a significant gender gap, which is present in many countries across the Middle East and worldwide.

Dr. Fahed Al-Sumait

Instead, women on average demonstrated higher levels of personal uses, access to more internet devices, and achievement of more work-related outcomes than men.

The 'Kuwait's Digital Inequalities Report 2022' serves as a compass for navigating Kuwait's path into a highly digitized and globally interconnected future. Dr. Al-Sumait emphasized the importance of the gathered data in informing policymakers and businesses. In particular, more can be done to reduce barriers and add incentives that address current limitations in access, skills, and uses, especially for older populations, those with limited formal education, and the high number of expatriates living in the country. Doing so will foster greater equity, promote higher participation, and contribute to society-wide benefits in both productivity and well-being.

By consistently publishing their findings, AUK professors play a vital role in advancing their fields, shaping the academic community, and actively engaging in groundbreaking research that changes and influences scientific discourse

KFH offers int'l money transfer in collaboration with Western Union

KUWAIT CITY, Dec 5: Kuwait Finance House (KFH) has collaborated with Western Union to offer co-branded international money transfer services through its mobile app, KFHOnline.

KFH Manager E-Channels and Cash Management Services, Meshal Mandani, said that KFH and Western Union are offer fees for a limited period.

He pointed out that the services are beneficial to customers in terms of saving time and effort, as it permits them to send money (cash or bank account) to their designated beneficiaries at desired locations across Western Union's global Mandani added that customers who want to transfer money from their account to an overseas location via Western Union can conveniently and securely access the KFHOnline app on their mobile devices. Then, they can carry out the transfer procedure by following specific and swift steps.

He pointed out that the service is designed to offer the best benefits to KFH customers and is part of the Bank's cooperative efforts with global money transfer companies. The aim is to facilitate secure, fransparent, and prompt money transfer that aligns with customer expectations. Western Union is one of the largest and accredited international money transfer operators. Customers can send money through Western Union's vast retail network, which spans more than 200 countries and territories. Payouts can also be made into billions of bank accounts and millions of digital wallets and cards in over 110 countries. Real-time international money transfers are available for accounts in 100 countries.

Western Union's Regional Vice President for the Middle East, Pakistan and Afghanistan, Hatem Sleiman, emphasized the importance of the collaboration, which gives customers access to the full scale of Western Union's network.

Sleiman added that according to World Bank's 2022 remittance data, Kuwait ranked in the top 10 send markets globally. Consumers expect a choice in how and when they send money. They want services that are easy to access, reliable, convenient and can be completed at speed. Joining forces with Kuwait Finance House to expand its digital app capability, Western Union aims to serve these needs. The collaboration brings Western Union another step closer towards ensuring accessible financial services for all, which is a central component of its strategy.

It is worth noting that KFH provides a range of digital banking solutions via the KFHOnline app. These include a set of new services such as submitting a personal finance application online through KFHOnline, opening a gold account with options for selling and buying, gold delivery service, cheque book request, instant cheque printing, instant debit card issuance via QR code, and cheque deposit. Customers can also view investment plans, make local and international transfers, and create investment deposits.

Prince Harry challenges UK govt over security removal

LONDON, Dec 5, (AP): Prince Harry is challenging on Tuesday the British government's decision to strip him of his security detail after he gave up his status as a working member of the royal family and moved to the United States.

The Duke of Sussex said he wants protection when he visits home and claimed it's partly because an aggressive press jeopardizes his safety and that of his family.

The three-day hearing scheduled to begin in London's High Court is the latest in a string of Harry's legal cases that have kept London judges busy as he takes on the UK government and the British tabloid media. It was not clear if he would attend Tuesday's Harry failed to persuade a different judge earlier this year that he should be able to privately pay for London's police force to guard him when he comes to town. A judge denied that offer after a government lawyer argued that officers shouldn't be used as "private bodyguards for the wealthy."

Harry, the youngest son of King Charles III, said he did not feel safe bringing his wife, former actor Meghan Markle, and their two young children back to Britain and was concerned about his own safety after being chased by paparazzi following a London charity

Harry's animosity toward the press dates back to the death of his mother Princess Diana, who died in a car wreck as her driver tried to outrun aggressive photographers in Paris.

Decision

Harry, whose wife is mixed-raced, cited what he said were racist attitudes and unbearable intrusions of the British media in his decision to leave the United Kingdom.

The 39-year-old prince is challenging the decision by the Executive Committee for the Protection of Royalty and Public Figures to provide his security on a "case by case" basis after moving in 2020 to Canada and then California, where he and his family now reside.

He said the committee unfairly nixed his security request without hearing from him personally and did not disclose the makeup of the panel, which he later learned included royal family staff. He said Edward Young, the assistant private secretary to the late Queen Elizabeth II, should not have been on the committee because of "significant tensions" between the two men.

The Home Office has argued that any tensions between Harry and the royal household staff was irrelevant and that the committee was entitled to its decision because he had relinquished his role as a working member of the family.

The case is one of five that Harry has pending in the High Court. The four other lawsuits involve Britain's best-known tabloids, including a case that alleges the publisher of the Daily Mail libeled him when it ran a story suggesting he had tried to hide his efforts to continue receiving government-funded security. A ruling is expected in that case Friday.

Three other lawsuits allege that journalists at the Mail, the Daily Mirror, and The Sun used unlawful means, such as deception, phone hacking or hiring private investigators to dig up dirt about

Payne and Giamatti have talked for years about making another movie, including a private-eye film ("It'd be so great," says Giamatti) and a Western ("I'm like, I would do anything in a Western"). But it wasn't until Payne got together with screenwriter David Hemingson with the idea of loosely adapting the 1935 French comedy "Merlusse" that they hit on the right project.

Connections

"I wanted to work with that guy again for 20 years," says Payne. "I've been lucky to work with a lot of terrific actors, but we had a really terrific professional relationship making 'Sideways.' I was waiting for the right thing - and created it. I told David Hemingson: We're writing for Paul Giamatti."

"He's just the best actor," Payne adds. "He's the finest actor. Not casting aspersions on others, I just think there's nothing he cannot do."

The part of Paul also had connections to Giamatti's own upbringing. His father, A. Bartlett Giamatti, was an academic. Aside from being president of Yale and commissioner of Major League Baseball, he was a professor of English Renaissance literature. His mother, Toni, taught at the Hopkins School, the New Haven, Connecticut, prep school. The younger Giamatti, himself, attended the boarding school Choate as a day stu-

"I think it's why he was like, 'You'll get this character. This is sort of written for you.' Because he knows I went to a school like that and I had a background like that," says Giamatti. "He even knows I'm interested in Roman history. A lot it was kind of a big gift of like: You kind of know all of this.'

Asked for an example of how he and Payne work together, Giamatti describes a scene from "Sideways" when his character runs into his ex-wife and learns she's newly married and pregnant. Miles, crushed, struggles to keep up a cheery facade.

"We had done three takes or something, and he came up to me and said, 'Don't stop smiling. Whatever you do, whatever she says, you can't stop smiling," says Giamatti. "That was one of the best examples to me of how an actor and a director can work together. He saw something I was doing and he just kept pulling it out

On "The Holdovers," Giamatti and Payne had their first argument. In a scene toward the end of the film, Paul is in a tense meeting with the parents of Sessa's character. In the middle of it, Giamatti decided to sit down - an instinctual choice that, he felt, showed Paul was breaking protocol.

"He came up to me and he said, 'Talk to me about sitting down," recalls Giamatti.

They discussed Giamatti's reasoning and as they began to shoot it, Payne announced: "Sitting down, I buy it." But by then, Giamatti had rethought it. He asked to try it standing up. Each had come around to the other's idea. Giamatti decided he liked standing better.

"And that was the biggest disagreement we had,"

says Giamatti, laughing. During the actors strike, Giamatti and his castmates (Randolph and Sessa have also been widely celebrated for their performances), weren't able to promote the film. Normally, missing out on interviews wouldn't be something Giamatti would lose sleep over. "But it was funny, I kept saying to my girlfriend, 'I actually want to be talking about it. I think I'm frustrated that I can't," Giamatti says.

Twenty years ago, Giamatti was surprisingly passed over for an Oscar nomination for "Sideways." This time, many are predicting he'll receive his first Academy Award nomination for best actor. (He was nominated for best-supporting actor in 2006 for "Cinderella Man.")

"That would be lovely if it happened. I'm not counting on anything," Giamatti says. "But for the first time, I do feel like putting myself behind it because I'd like it to get acknowledged in some way. Whether it's me or not, that's fine. If the movie does, if (Randolph) does, if Hemingson does or Alexander does - it'd be great if somebody does."

If Giamatti is nominated for best actor, it would be an overdue acknowledgement of one this era's finest actors, one who's long imbued everyman characters with wit and warmth. Calling them "schlubs" wouldn't do justice for the justice he does them. So good at it is Giamatti that you might mistake the very down-to-earth actor for a regular guy, too.

His jump and the aircraft's plunge were recorded by cameras mounted on the plane's wing and tail and by the camera he carried. After landing, he hiked to the crash site and recovered video from the onboard cameras, the government said.

According to the plea agreement, Jacob had a sponsorship deal to promote a company's product in a video he would post, and he never intended to complete the Nov. 24, 2021, flight.

The Justice Department said Jacob later informed federal investigators about the crash, was told he was responsible for preserving the wreckage, agreed to determine its location - and then lied that he did not know the location.

On Dec. 10, 2021, Jacob and a friend flew to the site in a helicopter that was used to lift the wreckage and fly it to a trailer attached to his pickup truck, according to the agreement. The plane was later cut up, and the parts were disposed of in trash bins. (AP)

'Clashing stories' in Majors assault trial

NEW YORK, Dec 5, (AP): Jonathan Majors listened silently, head-cocked and eyes down, as a Manhattan prosecutor and his defense attorney offered competing accounts of a violent confrontation in the backseat of a car that led to assault charges against the film star and put his rapid Hollywood ascent on pause

The opening statements Monday in the trial against Majors centered on whether the actor assaulted his former girlfriend, Grace Jabbari, after she read a romantic text message sent to his phone by another woman.

Prosecutors say Majors grabbed the woman's hand so hard he fractured her middle finger, then twisted her arm behind her back and struck her on the side of the head - the latest outburst in an alleged pattern of physical and emotional abuse. An attorney for Majors argued that her client was the true victim, claiming he was left bloodied by the attack, while she spent the rest of the night clubbing.

That the competing versions of the struggle were presented to a jury was itself unusual, a rare instance of a misdemeanor assault case going to trial. For Majors, a 34-year-old rising star, the stakes may be higher than the one year in prison he could face if convicted.

In her opening statements, the actor's attorney, Priya Chaudhry, described the allegations as a revenge plot to "ruin Jonathan Majors and take away everything he has spent his whole life working for.

Pointing to Majors' breakout roles in "Creed III" and his emergence as a key supervillain in the Marvel multiverse, Chaudhry said her client's career "seemed unstoppable until he ended his relationship with Ms. Jabbari and she, hours later, made these false allega-

Confrontation

Since his arrest in March, an ad campaign for the US Army featuring Majors has been pulled and the release of "Magazine Dreams," a Sundance awardwinning filming that he starred in, has been postponed.

Chaudhry also invoked Majors' race - he is Black, Jabbari is white - as a potential reason that he was arrested the day after the confrontation.

In his own opening statements, assistant district attorney Michael Perez described the alleged assault as the culmination of a "cruel and manipulative pattern of psychological and physical abuse" that Majors directed at his partner of two years.

The trial, he said, would show that Majors "demanded total compliance" from his girlfriend, at one point telling her that she needed to model herself after Michelle Obama or Coretta Scott King. If she didn't meet that standard - by staying out late with friends or going to a music festival, for example - Majors would often become angry, throwing household objects or shouting at her, the prosecutor said.

Both prosecution and defense offered clashing narratives about the aftermath of the alleged assault as

Once the driver pulled over, Majors fled the scene with his phone as Jabbari chased him "on foot, through traffic, like in a movie," according to Chaudhry. Unable to find Majors, she met three strangers and followed them to a Manhattan night club, where she spent the next few hours drinking and dancing, the defense attorney said.

The prosecutor, meanwhile, said Majors picked Jabbari up and threw her inside the car on multiple occasions after the driver pulled over. He said she accepted the invitation of bystanders in hopes of "temporarily blocking out" the abuse committed by Majors. She returned home after a few hours at the nightclub, took two sleeping pills and fell asleep on the floor of her bathroom, he said.

Jabbari awoke the next morning to Majors standing over her with police officers. Though Perez said she was initially reluctant to report the abuse "because of how he's manipulated her in the past and trained her to stay silent," she soon told police about the alleged assault, leading to the arrest of Majors.

She was hospitalized with minor injuries. Six months later, she was arrested by police after Majors brought a counter-claim against her for assaulting him in the vehicle. Those charges were dismissed by the Manhattan DA the following day.

Perez referenced the arrest on Monday, telling jurors that Majors' "attempts to control and intimidate Ms. Jabbari extended well after he assaulted her."

Jabbari is expected to testify against her former partner in the coming days. Majors did not speak to reporters as he entered and exited the courtroom on

WOODSTOCK, Ala.: A man featured in the hit podcast "S-Town" that chronicled events in a rural Alabama community was shot and killed by police during a weekend standoff in the town, authorities said Monday

Joseph Tyler Goodson, 32, of Woodstock, was shot and killed by officers after he barricaded himself inside a home and "brandished a gun" at officers early Sunday, the Alabama Law Enforcement Agency said.

The agency's statement said the Woodstock Police Department had initially responded to a "call for service" early Sunday and the standoff ensued. Multiple law enforcement agencies converged on the home.

The statement said Goodson was shot by officers during the confrontation and was subsequently pronounced dead.

The state agency did not describe what led to the initial call to the home.

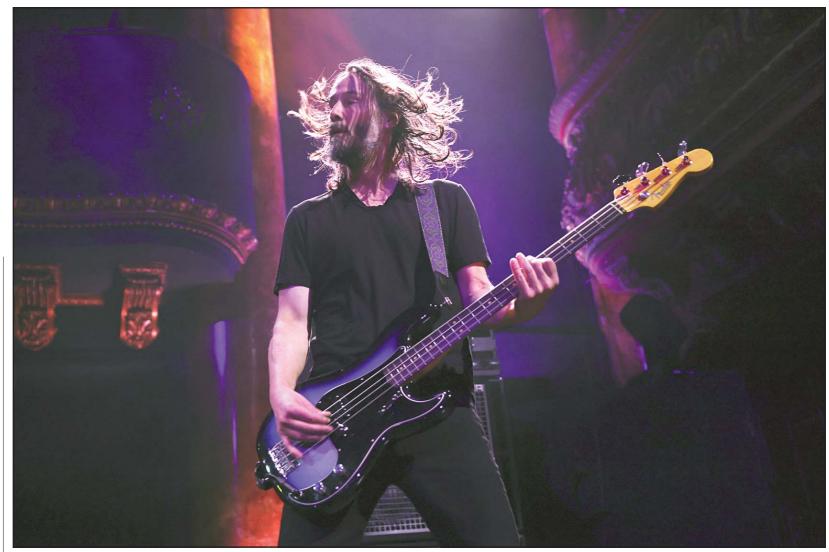

"Police bout to shoot me down in my own yard," a message posted early Sunday on Goodson's Facebook account read, news outlets, WIAT and al.com

The state agency is reviewing the shooting and will turn its findings over to the Bibb County district at-

The 2017 podcast, which won a Peabody Award, told the story of an Alabama man named John B. Mc-Lemore, who died by suicide before the show came out. McLemore's use of an expletive to describe his hometown gives the podcast its abbreviated title.

"S-Town" begins telling the story of a reputed killing and also another death and winds up focusing on the eccentric McLemore, a restorer of antique clocks, and his tortured relationship with the town of Woodstock. Several people in his life were also featured, including Goodson.

"Because you know, I ain't ever had no daddy worth a damn. He's just about the only daddy I've got," Goodson said of McLemore in the the third episode of the podcast.

GREECE: Police in Greece have arrested a rap artist accused of using explosives to rob cash machines and finance his music videos, authorities said Monday.

The 28-year-old Greek singer, who was not named, was arrested over the weekend with two other suspects aged 26 and 27 after police raided a property near Athens and searched several vehicles.

Police seized 1.5 kilograms (3.3 pounds) of explosives, an M16 assault rifle, four handguns and just over 200,000 euros ($217,200) in cash.

"They laundered money by spending exorbitant amounts via the music industry or by gambling at casinos," police Brig. Gen. Ioannis Skouras alleged.

Police spokeswoman Constantia Dimoglidou alleged the gang was linked to 10 ATM attacks in several parts of Greece, mostly in isolated locations, stealing an estimated 710,000 euros ($770,000) in total. (AP)

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico: A female tourist from Boston was killed Monday by a shark while paddleboarding in the Bahamas, police told reporters.

The victim, who was not identified, was attacked less than a mile off the western end of New Providence island, where the capital, Nassau, is located. She was paddleboarding with a man who was not injured, according to Police Sgt. Desiree Ferguson. "We extend our heartfelt condolences...for this most unfortunate situation," she said. Police said a lifeguard rescued both people with a boat upon seeing what was happening, but the woman suffered serious injuries to the right side of her body and was declared dead at the scene despite CPR efforts.

It was not immediately clear what type of shark attacked the woman. A police superintendent did not immediately respond to a message requesting comment.

Gavin Naylor, program director of the International Shark Attack File in Florida. said in an interview that there have been a couple of shark-related fatalities reported in the Bahamas in the past five years. He noted that the Bahamas has a "huge' tourist population, adding that there are a lot of people in the water and a lot of visitors who want to view sharks from a fishing boat or dive with them.

"So the sharks get acclimated, and the animals are a little bit less cautious than they otherwise might be," he said. (AP)

Some ideas for the music lover in your life

Gift guide that will strike a chord

LOS ANGELES, Dec 5, (AP): For the obsessive record collector or the casual listener, the shower singer or the rock star of tomorrow, a music-inspired gift is never a faux pas over the holidays.

The challenge, of course, is in the decision making. Is a genre-specific festival ticket the way to go? What about a box set fit for a budding audiophile?

Here's a variety gift guide for the audio lover in your life - from photo card binders for the K-pop superfan to a pair of some of the best headphones on the market and a cheese board that looks surprisingly hi-def.

It'll be music to their ears.

Give 'em Simone: There are vinyl box sets, and then there is "Four Women: The Nina Simone Complete Recordings 1964-1967," a massive, seven-LP collection built from the seven albums Simon released for the Philips label during her most prolific creative period. That's 1964's "Nina Simone in Concert" and "Broadway-Blues-Ballads"; 1965's "I Put A Spell On You," "Pastel Blues" and "Let It All Out"; 1966's "Wild Is the Wind"; and 1967's "High Priestess of Soul," remastered from the original tape. It is the ideal way to celebrate the musician and civil rights activist, and the ideal gift for a music fan of any walk. Hit "Play": The cassette tape revolutionized the music industry and the music listening experience: You could make mixtapes for loved ones, record that hit song from the radio, or best of all, carry your favorite album around with you. In "High Bias: The Distorted History of the Cassette Tape," music journalist Marc Masters provides the definitive text on the tiny-but-mighty piece of plastic. Perfect for the pop-culture obsessed. Cost: $20 For Your Pleasure: In 2021, Harry Styles entered the beauty game with his company, "Pleasing," beginning with colorful, gender-neutral nail polish. It continued to grow, eventually including skincare and makeup. This holiday season, Styles has entered the fragrance game. Launched this month, Styles' perfume line includes "Closeness," described as a "woody musk scent," "Rivulets," which is a "floral, fresh amber scent," and "Bright, Hot," a "heady woody amber scent with top notes of plum and tobacco." Something for everyone, or, at least, the pop music fan in your life. It's a welcome distraction from One Direction's indefinite hiatus.

Say Cheese: This one might give an audiophile a heart attack, but that doesn't make it any less adorable. 'Tis the season to break out the charcuterie board and host a great holiday party - but why not do it in musical style? The "Turntable Cheese Board" from Uncommon Goods is exactly what it sounds like - a cheese board designed to look like the most expensive, slick turntable, featuring a slate platter and hidden slicer in the one arm. Delicious.

Hear It Loud: There's never a wrong time to upgrade headphones - in fact, it makes for a great gift. Sony's MDR-7506 headphones are a particularly wise selection. This pair is perfect for aspiring producers, music students, podcast hosts of the future, anyone who wants to look cool walking down the street with studio-grade headphones and beyond. They're an industry standard for a reason.

The Way She Was: On Nov. 7, Barbra Streisand released her very long and very long-awaited memoir, "My Name is Barbra." She'd talked about it for years - in 2021, she told Jimmy Fallon that Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis had asked her to write a memoir in the early 1980s, when the former first lady was an editor at Doubleday. (Heck, during an Associated Press interview in 2009, Streisand mentioned that she had been writing chapters about her life, in longhand. "I go back and forth," Streisand said at the time. "Do I really want to write about my life? Do I really want to relive my life? I'm not sure.") But beyond the wait - and the fact that "My Name is Barbra" is well worth it, a larger-than-life autobiography coming in at a whopping 1,040 pages - are the revelations that await the reader. From her childhood to her marriage to the making of "Yentl" and beyond.

K-Pop Cool: Far too often, holiday gift guides - even those specifically catering to music enthusiasts - fail to account for dedicated, artist-specific fandoms. And that's a shame, because the most thoughtful presents are often the most specific ones. They communicate to the gift-receiver that the gift-giver really gets them. That they listen. For the K-pop lover, why not get a photocard binder where they can store their limited-edition collection? Just make sure you know who their "bias" (a Kpop term for favorite member) is first, OK? That would be embarrassing.

It's Not A Phase: In his second book, "Goth: A History", Lol Tolhurst, co-founder the influential "goth" band The Cure, explores the oftenmisunderstood movement, what he calls "the last true alternative outsider subculture." It's about the music subgenre born out of late-'70s punk and dread, of course (Joy Division, Bauhaus, Siouxsie and the Banshees) but also touches on Tim Burton films, Edgar Allan Poe's poem "The Raven," Mary Shelley's novel "Frankenstein", Emily Brontë, and an adolescent period marked by black nail polish and nihilism. It's a well-rounded, interdisciplinary and definitive history and part-memoir, perfect for that friend who swears he liked that band before they were big.

There's Something Going On: In 1995, The Roots dropped their influential sophomore album, "Do You Want More?!!!??!," a critically acclaimed album in hip-hop canon. Now, nearly three decades later, a four-LP box set has been released - a remastered version of the original two LP albums and now with bonus tracks curated by Questlove himself. He and Tariq Trotter, a.k.a. Black Thought, wrote the liner notes, and that's a kind of exclusive commentary you can only pay for. (And if you're feeling really generous, you could also throw in Trotter's new book, "The Upcycled Self: A Memoir on the Art of Becoming Who We Are" and become the greatest gift giver in your circle.)

Te Amo: What do music fans really want for the holidays? The live music experience, of course. In 2024, the Latin music festival Besame Mucho is headed to Austin, Texas, following the success of its inaugural year in Los Angeles, and should be considered a hot-ticket item. The lineup features Los Tigres Del Norte, Banda MS, Grupo Frontera and many more - a

NEW YORK: MSNBC will shuffle its weekend schedule early next year to try and juice ratings, starting a new morning ensemble program and ending regular shows hosted by Mehdi Hasan and Yasmin Vossoughian.

In a memo to her staff recently, MSNBC President Rashida Jones said the changes will help the network "better position ourselves as we head into the presidential election."

The new show, "The Weekend," will air for two hours starting at 8 a.m. Eastern on Saturday and Sunday. Its hosts will be Alicia Menendez, Symone Sanders-Townsend and Michael Steele.

Ayman Mohyeldin and Alex Witt will both get more airtime as hosts on both weekend days under the new plans. Jonathan Capehart and Katie Phang will see time shift changes. (AP)

MicroRNA is the master regulator of genome

Experts explore ways to treat diseases by controlling genes

By Andrea Kasinski Purdue University

The Conversation is an independent and nonprofit source of news, analysis and commentary from academic experts.

The Earth formed 4.5 billion years ago, and life less than a billion years after that. Although life as we know it is dependent on four major macromolecules - DNA, RNA, proteins and lipids - only one is thought to have been present at the beginning of life: RNA.

It is no surprise that RNA likely came first. It is the only one of those major macromolecules that can both replicate itself and catalyze chemical reactions, both of which are essential for life. Like DNA, RNA is made from individual nucleotides linked into chains. Scientists initially understood that genetic information flows in one direction: DNA is transcribed into RNA, and RNA is translated into proteins. That principle is called the central dogma of molecular biology. But there are many deviations.

Target

One major example of an exception to the central dogma is that some RNAs are never translated or coded into proteins. This fascinating diversion from the central dogma is what led me to dedicate my scientific career to understanding how it works. Indeed, research on RNA has lagged behind the other macromolecules. Although there are multiple classes of these so-called noncoding RNAs, researchers like myself have started to focus a great deal of attention on short stretches of genetic material called microRNAs and their potential to treat various diseases, including cancer.

Scientists regard microRNAs as master regulators of the genome due to their ability to bind to and alter the expression of many protein-coding RNAs. Indeed, a single microRNA can regulate anywhere from 10 to 100 protein-coding RNAs. Rather than translating DNA to proteins, they instead can bind to protein-coding RNAs to silence genes.

The reason microRNAs can regulate such a diverse pool of RNAs stems from their ability to bind to target RNAs they don't perfectly match up with. This means a single microRNA can often regulate a pool of targets that are all involved in similar processes in the cell, leading to an enhanced response.

Because a single microRNA can regulate multiple genes, many micro-RNAs can contribute to disease when they become dysfunctional.

In 2002, researchers first identified the role dysfunctional microRNAs play in disease through patients with a type of blood and bone marrow cancer called chronic lymphocytic leukemia. This cancer results from the loss of two microRNAs normally involved in blocking tumor cell growth. Since then, scientists have identified over 2,000 microRNAs in people, many of which are altered in various diseases.

The field has also developed a fairly solid understanding of how microRNA dysfunction contributes to disease. Changing one microRNA can change several other genes, resulting in a plethora of alterations that can collectively reshape the cell's physiology. For example, over half of all cancers have significantly reduced activity in a microRNA called miR-34a. Because miR-34a regulates many genes involved in preventing the growth and migration of cancer cells, losing miR-34a can increase the risk of developing cancer.

Researchers are looking into using microRNAs as therapeutics for cancer, heart disease, neurodegenerative disease and others. While results in the laboratory have been promising, bringing microRNA treatments into the clinic has met multiple challenges. Many are related to inefficient delivery into target cells and poor stability, which limit their effectiveness.

One reason why delivering micro-RNA treatments into cells is difficult is because microRNA treatments need to be delivered specifically to diseased cells while avoiding healthy cells. Unlike mRNA COVID-19 vaccines that are taken up by scavenging immune cells whose job is to detect foreign materials, microRNA treatments need to fool the body into thinking they aren't foreign in order to avoid immune attack and get to their intended cells.

Scientists are studying various ways to deliver microRNA treatments to their specific target cells. One method garnering a great deal of attention relies on directly linking the microRNA to a ligand, a kind of small molecule that binds to specific proteins on the surface of cells. Compared with healthy cells, diseased cells can have a disproportionate number of some surface proteins, or receptors. So, ligands can help microRNAs home specifically to diseased cells while avoiding healthy cells. The first ligand approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to deliver small RNAs like microRNAs, N-acetylgalactosamine, or GalNAc, preferentially delivers RNAs to liver cells.

Identifying ligands that can deliver small RNAs to other cells requires finding receptors expressed at high enough levels on the surface of target cells. Typically, over one million copies per cell are needed in order to achieve sufficient delivery of the drug.

One ligand that stands out is folate, also referred to as vitamin B9, a small molecule critical during periods of rapid cell growth such as fetal development. Because some tumor cells have over one million folate receptors, this ligand provides sufficient opportunity to deliver enough of a therapeutic RNA to target different types of cancer. For example, my laboratory developed a new molecule called FolamiR-34a folate linked to miR-34a - that reduced the size of breast and lung cancer tumors in mice.

One of the other challenges with using small RNAs is their poor stability, which leads to their rapid degradation. As such, RNA-based treatments are generally short-lived in the body and require frequent doses to maintain a therapeutic effect.

Development

To overcome this challenge, researchers are modifying small RNAs in various ways. While each RNA requires a specific modification pattern, successful changes can significantly increase their stability. This reduces the need for frequent dosing, subsequently decreasing treatment burden and cost.

For example, modified GalNAc siRNAs, another form of small RNAs, reduces dosing from every few days to once every six months in nondividing cells. My team developed folate ligands linked to modified microRNAs for cancer treatment that reduced dosing from once every other day to once a week. For diseases like cancer where cells are rapidly dividing and quickly diluting the delivered microRNA, this increase in activity is a significant advancement in the field. We anticipate this accomplishment will facilitate further development of this folate-linked microRNA as a cancer treatment in the years to come.

While there is still considerable work to be done to overcome the hurdles associated with microRNA treatments, it's clear that RNA shows promise as a therapeutic for many diseases. (AP)

'Threats from warming are immediate and present'

Earth running a fever: UN talks shift focus on contagious effect on health

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates, Dec 5, (AP): With Planet Earth running a fever, UN climate talks focused Sunday on the contagious effects on human

Under a brown haze over Dubai, the COP28 summit moved past two days of lofty rhetoric and calls for unity from top leaders to concerns about health issues like the deaths of at least 7 million people globally from air pollution each year and the spread of diseases like cholera and malaria as global warming upends weather systems.

World Health Organization Director-General Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus said it's high time for the UN Conference of Parties on climate to hold its first "Health Day" in its 28th edition, saying the threats to health from climate change were "immediate and present."

"Although the climate crisis is a health crisis, it's well overdue that 27 COPs have been and gone without a serious discussion of health," he said. "Undoubtedly, health stands as the most compelling reason for taking climate action."

Attention

After two days of speeches by dozens of presidents, prime ministers, royals and other top leaders - in the background and on-stage - participants were also turning attention to tough negotiations over the next nine days to push for more agreement on ways to cap global warming at 1.5 degrees Celsius (2.7 Fahrenheit) since pre-industrial times.

Pope Francis, who was forced to abandon plans to attend because of a case of bronchitis, on Sunday said that "even from a distance, I am following with great attention the work." In remarks read at the Vatican by an aide, the pope called for an end of what he called "bottlenecks" caused by nationalism and "patterns of the past."

Protests began in earnest Sunday at COP28: In one, a group gave mock resuscitation to an inflatable Earth.

"Well, I mean, it's cheesy doing CPR on the Earth," said Dr. Joe Vipond, an emergency room physician from Alberta, Canada, who took part. "We're kind of in a lot of trouble right now," he said, so will do "anything we can do to bring attention to this issue"

Saturday capped off with conference organizers announcing that 50 oil and gas companies had agreed to reach near-zero methane emissions and end routine flaring in their operations by 2030. They also pledged to reach "net zero" for their operational emissions by 2050.

U.N. Secretary-General Antonio Guterres said "the promises made clearly fall short of what is required."

In comments Sunday, he called the methane emissions reductions "a step in the right direction." But he criticized the net zero pledge for excluding emissions from fossil fuel consumption - where the vast majority of the indus-

Summit grapples with curbing climate change

UN agency cites worrying warming trend

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates, Dec 5, (AP): The United Nations weather agency is reporting that glaciers shrank more than ever from 2011 and 2020 and the Antarctic ice sheet lost 75 percent more compared to the previous ten years, as it released its latest stark report about the fallout on the planet from climate change.

The World Meteorological Organization served up more evidence of what scientists already know - the Earth is heating - on Tuesday, but this time looking at the trend over a longer period with its latest Decadal State of the Climate report.

"Each decade since the 1990s has been warmer than the previous one and we see no immediate sign of this trend reversing," its secretary-general, Petteri Taalas, said. "We are losing the race to save our melting glaciers and ice sheets."

Warming oceans and melting of ice sheets caused the rate of sea-level rise to nearly double in less than a generation, he said, and WMO says that bodes ill for low-lying coastal regions and countries.

Experts are divided about one of the most important metrics: The rate of warming.

Former NASA top scientist James Hansen, nicknamed the Godfather of Global Warming for his early warnings, has reported that the rate is accelerating. University of Pennsylvania climate scientist Michael Mann has argued warming has been steadily increasing since 1990, but isn't speeding up.

"The surface of the planet and the oceans both continue to warm at a steady rate, not an accelerating rate, and that's bad enough," Mann said in an email. He warned that such warming is fueling increasingly dangerous extreme weather events, coastal flooding and many other "disastrous" impacts.

Consequences

"And the warming and its consequences will continue as long as we continue to generate carbon pollution through fossil fuel burning and other activities, highlighting the critical need for progress at the COP28 climate summit in Dubai taking place right now," he wrote.

The WMO report said that glaciers measured around the world thinned by roughly one meter (about 3 feet) per year on average from 2011 to 2020, and a look at over 40 "reference glaciers" showed the lowest mass balances of any decade.

"The remaining glaciers near the Equator are generally in rapid decline. Glaciers in Papua, Indonesia are likely to disappear altogether within the next decade," WMO said. "In Africa, glaciers on the Rwenzori Mountains and Mount Kenya are projected to disappear by 2030, and those on Kilimanjaro by 2040."

try's greenhouse gases come from - and said the announcement provided no clarity on how the companies planned to reach their goals.

"There must be no room for green washing," he said.

Germany's climate envoy Jennifer Morgan said Sunday the oil and gas industry needs to go beyond just cutting emissions that are generated to make those products and slash emissions from indirect activities too, as well as fossil fuels burned by the end

"It's 2023," the former Greenpeace International co-director said. "I was already speaking to Shell about this in Temperature rises caused by the burning of oil, gas and coal have worsened natural disasters like floods, heat waves and drought, and caused many people to migrate to more temperate zones - in addition to the negative knock-on effects for human health.

"Our bodies are ecosystems, and the world is an ecosystem," said John Kerry, the U.S. climate envoy. "If you poison our land and you poison our water and you poison our air, you poison our bodies."

He said his daughter Vanessa, who works with the WHO chief, "repeats to me frequently that we should not measure progress on the climate crisis just by the degrees averted, but by the lives saved."

A COP28 declaration backed by some 120 countries stressed the link between health and climate change. It made no mention of phasing out planet-warming fossil fuels, but pledged to support efforts to curb health care sector pollution, which accounts for 5% of global emissions, according to the WHO head.

In the United States, 8.5% of greenhouse gas emissions come from the health sector and the Biden Administration is trying to use funds from the Inflation Reduction Act to try to cut that down, Assistant Secretary of Health and Human Services Admiral Rachel Levine said.

US officials said one of the main issues has been waste anesthesia emissions from hospitals and greenhouse gases that escape when patients are treated for respiratory diseases like asthma with albuterol inhalers.

Ad giant Dentsu and 5 other companies facing criminal charges

Tokyo Olympics sullied by bid-rigging, bribery trials more than two years after Games closed

TOKYO, Dec 5, (AP): The bid-rigging trial around the Tokyo Olympics played out Tuesday in a Japanese courtroom - more than two years after the Games closed - with advertising giant Dentsu and five other companies facing criminal charges.

Seven individuals are also facing charges from Tokyo district prosecutors in the cases, including Koji Henmi, who oversaw the sports division at Dentsu at the time.

Executives or management-level officials at each of the accused companies, and Tokyo Olympic organizing committee official Yasuo Mori, have been charged with violating anti-mo-

Among the companies facing charges are Dentsu Group, Hakuhodo, Tokyu Agency and event organizer Cerespo. All deal with event organizing, sports promotion or marketing. Dentsu has a long history of lining up sponsorships and advertising with bodies like World Athletics, headed by Sebastian Coe, and the Switzerlandbased International Olympic Committee, led by Thomas Bach.

Genta Yoshino, the lawyer for Henmi, did not deny the bid-rigging took place. Speaking in Tokyo district court, he said no bid process was ever decided upon or set up by the Tokyo Olympic organizing committee.

"Even if what happened gets categorized as bid-rigging, all my client did was abide by the organizing committee's intentions, following their instructions," Yoshino told the court, presided over by a panel of three judges. Yoshino said his client merely did his best to make the Olympics a success. Henmi was under pressure from the IOC, which repeatedly expressed doubts about the ability of the Tokyo organizers, Yoshino added. The organizing committee was headed at the time by Yoshiro Mori, a former Japanese prime minister who was eventually forced to resign as the head of Tokyo 2020. The CEO was Toshiro Muto, a former deputy director of the Bank of Japan.

The maximum penalty for a company convicted of bid-rigging is a fine of up to 500 million yen ($3.3 million). An individual, if found guilty, faces up to five years in prison and a fine of up to 5 million yen ($33,000).

Trials take months in Japan, sometimes years. The next session in the trial was scheduled for Jan. 15, 2024. It's unclear when a verdict may come.

Dentsu was a key force in landing the Olympics for Tokyo in 2013. French prosecutors have looked into allegations that IOC members may have been bribed to vote for Tokyo.

Once the Olympics landed in Tokyo, Dentsu became the chief marketing arm of the Games and raised a record $3.3 billion in local sponsorship. Dentsu received a commission on the sales - sales that were at least twice as large as any previous Olympics.

The reports of corruption surrounding Dentsu also forced the resignation in 2019 of Tsunekazu Takeda, the head of the Japanese Olympic Committee and an IOC member who headed Olympic marketing.

Tokyo organizers say they spent $13 billion to organize the 2020 Olympics, which were delayed a year by the COVID-19 pandemic. However, a government audit suggests the expenditure might have been twice that. At least 60% was public money.

The Tokyo scandal ruined the chances of the northern city of Sapporo of landing the 2030 Winter Olympics. It had been a strong favorite but was forced to withdraw. The IOC last week said it favored a French Alps bid for the 2030 Games with Salt Lake City the preferred choice for 2034.

OLYMPICS

Earlier this year French police searched the headquarters of the 2024 Paris Olympics in an investigation over contracts linked to the Games.

In the wake of the scandal, Dentsu has been restricted from bidding on contracts for the Tokyo Metropolitan Government and by the city of Osaka and the local prefecture, which is hosting the 2025 World Exposition.

Tokyo prosecutors have also been investigating a separate bribery scandal centered around Haruyuki Takahashi, a former Dentsu executive. Takahashi was a member of the Tokyo Olympic organizing committee and wielded powerful influence over the Olympic business.

Takahashi's trial opens Dec. 14. He has not publicly acknowledged guilt, or made any statement, and speculation is rife he will fight the charges.

The scandal involving Takahashi involves bribery allegations over Olympic sponsorships that were won by companies such as Aoki Holdings, a clothing company that dressed Japan's Olympic team, and Sun Arrow, which produced the Tokyo Olympic and Paralympic mascots.

Some company officials have already been convicted, but did not receive jail time. Almost all criminal trials in Japan result in guilty verdicts. The defense, including Henmi's, is trying to salvage the client's reputation and minimize any fines.

Bangladesh aim to secure 1st test series win over NZ

MIRPUR, Bangladesh, Dec 5, (AP): Bangladesh head coach Chandika Hathurusingha wants his players to guard against complacency as it tries to secure a first series win against New Zealand in the second and final test.

Bangladesh won the first test in Sylhet by 150 runs to close in on a landmark series victory. The only top-level teams that Bangladesh has ever beaten in a two-match test series are Zimbabwe and West Indies. "I can't see complacency in the team. If I see any action of complacency, I will have one to one chat," Hathurusingha said ahead of Wednesday's open c good chat inside the dressing room yesterday. Strong and experienced leaders like Mushy (Mushfiqur Rahim) and Mominul (Haque) spoke very emotionally. They spoke in Bengali. I can see there's no tall poppies in the dressing room."

The Sylhet test victory was only Bangladesh's second against New Zealand in 18 meetings, and it came courtesy of captain Najmul Hossain Shanto's second-innings century. In doing so, Shanto became the first Bangladeshi cricketer to hit a century on his debut as captain. "Captaincy and leadership are two things," Hathurusingha said. "(Shanto's) captaincy was excellent. He was tactically on the mark. He was step ahead of the game most of the time. Very impressive field placings as well.

"(His) leadership was excellent. He led from the front with his performance. He was commanding respect, and demanding the standard. I think he has a long future ahead."

Left-arm spinner Taijul Islam, who took 10-184 in the first test, will be a Bangladesh's most crucial weapon in Mirpur, which traditionally has a slow wicket with unven bounce.

"He goes under the radar because he plays second fiddle to Shakib (Al Hasan) in most of the games," Hathu-rusingha said of Islam. "His record is phenomenal. He has nearly 200 wickets. He is very consistent.

New Zealand skipper Tim Southee said the team's spinners need to show more consistency if they are to avoid a first series defeat against Bangladesh.

"We're expecting obviously spinfriendly conditions, but we spoke about it after the last game about being more consistent for longer as a bowling group," Southee said. "And then, obviously, partnerships as a batting unit. We've had a great couple of days of training. So, we're looking forward to getting into another test match."

While Bangladesh's spinners claimed 18 wickets at an economic rate of 2.48, New Zealand's spinners took 14 wickets at a rate of 3.73 runs.

New Zealand's frontline spinners Ajaz Patel and Ish Sodhi also had a limited impact in the match, and the team could include Rachin Ravindra and Mitchell Santner in the squad for

Al-Salmiya seek 'redemption' after Crown Prince Cup upset

Al-Qadsia and Al-Fahaheel consider Dehelis for coaching role

KUWAIT CITY, Dec 5: In the ninth round of the Zain Premier League, a pivotal match is scheduled to take place today at Thamer Stadium at six forty-five in the evening, featuring a clash between Salmiya and Fahaheel.

This encounter marks the initial meeting between the two teams in the current season. However, in the previous season, they faced off four times in the league competition, with Al-Fahaheel securing victories in two instances (3-2 and 2-0) and Al-Salmiya claiming one win (2-1). The teams also played to a draw in the fourth match, ending 2-2.

Al-Salmiya, currently positioned fifth in the standings with 13 points (tied with Kazma and Al-Nasr), is eager to regain confidence and resume its winning streak. The team faced an unexpected setback in the Crown Prince Cup, exiting in the preliminary round with a surprising defeat to Burgan by two goals. Al-Salmiya later settled for a draw against Al-Qadsia in the eighth round of the league (1-1), following three consecutive victories.

The stakes are high for both teams in tonight's confrontation. Salmiya's coach, Mohammed Al-Mishaan, is determined to restore balance and boost his players' confidence. Anything other than a victory may jeopardize the team's standing in the rankings and could potentially lead to changes in the coaching staff, mirroring recent developments in other clubs like Al-Arabi, Kazma, Khaitan, Al-Jahra, and Al-Kuwait.

Similarly, the match holds significance for Al-Fahaheel, currently sharing eighth place with Khaitan (5 points). Seeking its second victory in the competition, Al-Fahaheel aims to distance itself from the danger zone. The team faced elimination from the preliminary round of the Crown Prince Cup against Al-Qadisiyah, with a 5-4 penalty shootout loss after a 2-2 tie in normal and extra time.

Firas Al-Khatib, Al-Fahaheel's Syrian coach, is optimistic about tonight's match and hopes for a second victory, steering clear of the danger zone. However, similar to Al-Mishaan, a defeat could place his coaching position in jeopardy.

Al-Qadsia and Al-Fahaheel clubs have initiated discussions with former Burgan coach, Mohamed Dehelis, for potential coaching roles in the ongoing season's competitions.

Dehelis stepped down from his position as Burgan's coach immediately after securing a 2-0 victory over Al-Salmiya in the preliminary round of the Crown Prince Cup. Despite the triumph, Burgan currently sits in fourth place in the Doi Zein first division, accumulating only 5 points from 6 rounds and trailing the leader, Al-Tadamon, by 7 points

Al-Qadsia, currently holding the third position in the Zain Premier League, is grappling with a period of fluctuating performance and a noticeable decline. The team faced a tough challenge against Al-Fahaheel in the Crown Prince Cup's preliminary round, requiring penalty kicks to advance with a 5-4 score after a 2-2 draw. This dip in form has stirred public discontent, with fans expressing dissatisfaction and calling for a change in leadership, specifically targeting coach Mohamed İbrahim.

Semis in New Jersey & Charlotte among 14 US cities hosting Copa

ATLANTA, Dec 5, (AP): Fourteen U.S. cities will play host to Copa América next summer, with the semifinals at East Rutherford, New Jersey, and Charlotte, North Carolina, ahead of the July 14 championship in Miami Gardens, Florida. The host Americans will be in Group

The draw is set for Thursday in Miami. This will be only the second time Copa América has been held outside of South America since the inaugural tournament in 1916.

"These venues are world-class and have passionate fans who are renowned for getting behind major events," CONCACAF President Victor Montagliani said in a statement.

CONMEBOL and CONCACAF announced last month that the June 20 opening game will be at Mercedes-Benz Stadium in Atlanta, while South Florida's Hard Rock Stadium landed the final.

Reigning Copa América and World Cup champion Argentina, led by Lionel Messi, has been placed in Group A and will play in the Atlanta opener, as well as East Rutherford five days later and Miami Gardens on June 29.

The other sites revealed Monday: SoFi Stadium in Inglewood, California; Levi's Stadium in Santa Clara, California; Exploria Stadium in Orlando, Florida; Q2 Stadium in Austin, Texas; and a smaller facility in the Kansas City metro area: Children's Mercy Park on the Kansas side of the border.

Mexico opens in Houston on June 22, plays four days later at Inglewood and closes the first round on June 30 at Glendale.

Brazil heads group D and has games in Inglewood on June 24, Las Vegas four days later and Santa Clara on July

Eleven of the venues are bestknown as NFL stadiums, ranging in size from 63,400-seat State Farm Stadium to 82,500-seat MetLife Stadium. The other three - 25,500-seat Exploria Stadium, 20,700-seat Q2 Stadium and 18,500-seat Children's Mercy Park - are Major League Soccer facilities.

Copa América is expanding in 2024, with six teams from North America joining the usual 10 nations from South America that compete for the continental championship. The format mirrors the Copa América Centenario in 2016, the only previous time the tournament was staged outside of South America.

'We will experience an unforgettable Copa América, enjoying the best football in the world in 14 magnificent stadiums," said Alejandro Dominguez, the president of CONMEBOL.

For the 2024 edition, the CON-MEBOL regulars will be joined by six CONCACAF qualifiers. The host United States, Mexico, Jamaica and Panama earned their spots by winning in the Nations League quarterfinals, while March 23 playoff games matching Costa Rica vs. Honduras and Canada vs. Trinidad and Tobago will determine the final two entrants. Two group-round games will be played at every site except for Charlotte - which has the pair of knockout matches - and the two Kansas City stadiums, which have one group game

MetLife Stadium, NRG Stadium, Levi's Stadium and State Farm Stadium are the only returning stadiums from the 10 venues that were used for Copa América Centenario, though games also were held in Orlando (Camping World Stadium) and the Los Ángeles area (Pasadena's Rose Bowl).

The final won by Chile over Argentina on penalty kicks - Messi memorably left the field in tears after putting his attempt over the crossbar - was played at MetLife Stadium outside of New York City.

Except for the Centenario tournament, Copa América hosting duties usually have rotated among the 10 COMNEBOL nations in South America. The arrangement called for Ecuador to host in 2024, but that country backed out because of security issues. The U.S. stepped in to fill the void under a new partnership between CONMEBOL and CONCACAF.

Eight of the 14 stadiums for Copa América have already been picked as venues for the 2026 World Cup, which will be hosted by the U.S., Mexico and Canada. They are: MetLife Stadium, Hard Rock Stadium, Mercedes-Benz Stadium, Levi's Stadium, SoFi Stadium, AT&T Stadium, NRG Stadium and Arrowhead Stadium.

Some of those venues could also be in the running for another major tournament that will be staged in the U.S. in 2025 - the expanded Club World Cup featuring 32 teams.

Montagliani said holding two major competitions ahead of the World Cup will "cement our region as a global hub

Lyon return to Marseille amid heightened security

PARIS, Dec 5, (AP): Lyon will return to Marseille amid heightened security measures Wednesday to play a game that was postponed after the team's bus was attacked by fans throwing rocks in October.

The rescheduled match comes just four days after the death of a fan ahead of a French league game that marked a new low in a season marred by violence.

The match between Marseille and Lyon was initially scheduled on Oct. 29 but was postponed after fans threw rocks and other projectiles at the Lyon bus and then-coach Fabio Grosso needed stitches in his forehead after being hit by broken glass. Lyon fans have not been allowed to travel to the rescheduled game, which takes place in the wake of the incident in the western city of Nantes, where a fan was killed during a fight close to the stadium before a game between Nantes and Nice. The match in Marseille will be under close scrutiny, with local authorities under pressure to deliver an effective security plan.

On Monday, French sports minister Amelie Oudea-Castera called for "a global and extraordinarily determined response" to an upsurge of violence in French soccer that culminated with the fan's death. "It's just not possible that police forces are so overstretched, that private property is destroyed, that buses are stoned and people injured," Oudea-Castera said. "And now, a death. That's enough.'

Back in October in Marseille, the Lyon team bus was hit on the way to Stade Velodrome, shattering some windows. Grosso was injured by falling shards of glass and needed medical treatment with his face bleeding heavily. Lyon assistant coach Raffaele Longo was also injured. Supporters were also targeted, five police officers were injured, and nine people placed in custody. Grosso suffered a deep cut above his left eye that required stitches and a large bandage wrapped around his head.

Sheffield United become 1st EPL team to fire coach

LONDON, Dec 5, (AP): Sheffield United became the first Premier League club to fire its manager this season, with Paul Heckingbottom losing his job on Tuesday with the team in last place after 14 games of its first campaign back in England's top division. The club's Saudi owner, Prince Abdullah Bin Mosaad Bin Abdulaziz Al Saud, took the unusual step of announcing the departure of Heckingbottom on a radio station, telling talk-SPORT in Britain that Chris Wilder - the manager when Sheffield United was last in the league in the 2020-21 season - had been brought back for a second spell in charge.

The club then first announced the firing of Heckingbottom, before releasing a separate statement shortly afterward confirming the hiring of Wilder on a contract until the summer of 2025. Wilder will be in charge for the Premier League game against Liverpool on Wednesday. Heckingbottom's final game in charge

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec 5, (AP): All that Tyrese Haliburton wanted before the season was to get his first taste of playoff basketball.

Monday night's NBA In-Season Tournament quarterfinal seemed like the perfect dry run.

So the 23-year-old All-Star guard registered the first triple-double of his career, completed a tiebreaking fourpoint play with 1:33 left and heard the large, raucous crowd chanting "M-V-P! M-V-P!" near the end of Indiana's 122-112 victory, which ousted leagueleading Boston from the tourney.

Haliburton scored 16 of his 26 points in the second half and finished with 13 assists and 10 rebounds. Myles Turner added 17 points and 10 rebounds, and seven Pacers reached double figures as Indiana remained unbeaten in the tourney. The Pacers were 4-0 in group play. Boston, meanwhile, heads home despite getting another strong performance from its dynamic duo.

Jayson Tatum had 32 points and 12 rebounds, and Jaylen Brown finished with 30 points and nine rebounds for the Celtics. But it wasn't enough to extend a three-game winning streak, with All-Star Kristaps Porzingis missing his fourth straight game because of a strained left calf.

Still, the Celtics fought back from an 11-point third-quarter deficit and managed to force seven fourth-quarter ties - before Haliburton's 27-footer drew a foul on Brown and ignited Indiana's decisive 9-0 run.

Man United bar reporters after stories about Ten Hag

MANCHESTER, Dec 5, (AP): In the face of reports of player unrest, Erik ten Hag is convinced his Manchester United plans are on track.

After a 10th defeat of the season against Newcastle last week, the United manager has been confronted with stories that his methods had been called into question by sections of the locker room. But the Dutchman is adamant his squad is united.

"You can see you can't play such great football as we did lately if there is no unity," Ten Hag said Tuesday. "We are on a journey, a route, we know we are still in transition, but we are in the right direction.

"You see it how we construct a team, develop it, the team is progressing. How young players (are) coming in and you see the potential how they can contribute to a very successful Manchester United for the future.' The reports of unrest led to a number of media outlets being barred from Ten Hag's news conference to preview Wednesday's Premier League match against Chelsea. "We're taking action against a number of news organisations today, not for publishing stories we don't like, but for doing so without contacting us first to give us the opportunity to comment, challenge or contextualise," United said in a statement.

The reports claimed there were growing doubts about Ten Hag's management style as United sit seventh in the standings and on the brink of Champions League

"Of course there are always, in every team, players who are not playing or less playing who are less happy. That is not different to normal," the Dutchman said. "If the players have a different opinion of course I will listen. But they haven't told me. Or maybe one or two, but it is about in general. The majority, they want to play like this - proactive, dynamic, brave, that is what they want. You can see the players are behind it because of the performances against Everton and Galatasaray. You see that we are really improving.

It is the second time in recent weeks United has responded to negative stories about Ten Hag, having last month refuted claims it was considering replacements for the former Ajax coach. While there has been no suggestion from the club that his position is in question, reports point to a growing sense of uncertainty as Ten Hag struggles to build on the success of his first season in charge when leading United back to the Champions League and winning the League Cup. Defeat against Chelsea would raise further doubts about his future, but Ten Hag said he was confident about the team's progress after winning five out of its last six games in the league before Newcastle. "Still we are in the ranking. Of course we dropped, but are not too far away so we are OK," he said.
